The Broad Meadows District will open its 18th season Monday, Nov. 5, at 6 p.m. at the Broad Meadows Junior High School gym, and continue to March 31. The Broad Meadows District director is Anthony T. Delmonico, 35 Gannett Rd. Further information may be obtained from him. Boys and girls, 7-15 years old, are invited to register. Boys and girls, 7-9 years old, will play Mondays between 6 p.m. and 7 p.m.; boys and girls, 10-12 years old will play between 7 p.m. and 8 p.m.

The Montclair District will open its 11th season Nov. 5, starting at 6 p.m. at the Montclair School and continue to March 31.

Boys, 7-12 years old, are invited to register. Boys, 7-9 years old, will play Monday's between 6 p.m. and 7 p.m. Boys 10-12 years old will play between 7 p.m. and 8 p.m. Further information may be obtained from District Director Howard F. Crowley, 139 Highland Ave.

Leagues will be formed in each age group and all boys and girls joining will be assigned to a team. Every boy and girl who joins will participate and play. Competition is secondary although the teams will be evenly matched according to ability. The prime concern of the Koch Club is the enjoyment of all participants.

An annual awards night will be held at the close of the season in each district with parents and boys and girls joining together as a family unit. Trophies will be awarded to the winning team of each age group. The winning teams will also compete against other Koch Club Districts for the City Championship at the close of the season.

The gymnasiums will be used according to guidelines set by the School Committee for energy conservation. Basketball program participants are requested to wear sweatshirts, sweaters and warm clothing.

Broad Meadows Girls' Team Streak Continues

Coach Mary Pratt's Broad Meadows girls' soccer team enters the final weeks of its schedule undefeated and unscored upon.

Despite a small turnout for the second year of the junior high league, the BM girls sport a 3-0-2 record. They played to scoreless ties with Sterling and Atlantic and defeated Sterling, 2-0; Point, 2-0, and Central, 3-0.

Monday the BM girls will play Point at 3 o'clock at Perkins Field. The team is led by Capt. Janet McCarthy, the sole returning ninth grader, who has played a steady game on the attack alternating at center and inner.

Other returnees are Beth Anderson, Maria Escano and Debbie Nee, all eighth graders who form the nucleus of the current team. Beth is the leading scorer and has also played an outstanding game in goal when called upon. Maria is the backbone of the defense, alternating at center and right halfback, and Debbie is the starting goalie and also has filled in at wing.

"The bright spot on offense has been Kathy Skarbinski, an eighth grader and a new student at Meadows, who has either scored or assisted on every goal," said Miss Pratt. Other eighth graders are Susan Zeiba and Patricia McCarthy, both defensemen, and Lena Santarpio, who alternates on the defense and attack.

Rounding out the squad are six seventh graders, led by Kathy Thornton and Chris Reddy. Chris has played right wing and recently scored her first goal, and Kathy is the most aggressive player on the squad and has played wing, fullback and goalie. She, too, scored a goal in a recent game against Point.

Gina Coletti and Julie Stanley have been steady at the halfback positions and have been assisted by Donna Clifford and Carol Lynch.

"Perhaps the secret to our success has been the willingness on the part of the girls to play different, and in some instances, all the positions on the field," said Miss Pratt. "If the underclassmen return next year, they should form the nucleus for another very strong squad."

REARDON of Quincy in the County of Norfolk, a person under Conservatorship, and to her heirs apparent or presumptive, and to the Massachusetts Department of Mental Health, and the Attorney General of said Commonwealth, if required.

A petition has been presented to said Court by DAVID H. REARDON, Conservator of the property of Agnes T. Reardon, praying that his bond be reduced for reasons more fully set out in said Petition.

If you desire to object thereto you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham before ten o'clock in the forenoon on Oct. 31, 1979, the return day of this citation.

Witness, ROBERT M. FORD, Esquire, First Judge of said Court, this Sept. 25, 1979.

Vote For The PRESIDENT

"No one is more respected for his knowledge of city government or his integrity than Council President JOHN QUINN."

—John Gillis
City Clerk

Dear Voter:

In his 22 years of public service to Quincy, Councilor at Large John J. Quinn has served in virtually every leadership capacity. Whether it be Acting Mayor, Chairman of the Finance Committee, chairman of one of the other eleven committees which John has led, or in his present capacity as President of the City Council no elected official has the experience in city government that John Quinn has...and no official is more respected.

John Quinn has sponsored, co-authored, initiated or supported more vital legislation in the Quincy City Council than any other public servant in Quincy's history. That's a big statement — but it's true! John isn't just a lot of promises at election time, because responsible government isn't just politics; responsible government is the hard work that produces results! And, accomplishment and solid leadership is what John Quinn is all about.

That's why he is known and respected for his integrity, his experience and his commitment to Quincy. That's why he is President of the City Council. And that's why he deserves your Vote and Support.

Bickering Heats Up

School Committee, QEA Clash Over Letter To Teachers

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Contract bickering between the School Committee and teachers continued to heat up Tuesday as committee negotiators mailed letters to about 1,000 teachers outlining their position.

According to the letter, the School Committee offer includes a total 13-percent raise, spread over three years.

But union leaders said Tuesday that the letter was an attempt to undermine the union leadership and may be an unfair labor practice.

"They're going around us to try to get to our members," said Mary Curtin, head of the Quincy Education Association's negotiating team.

"We don't feel it is proper for them to negotiate directly with our members," added QEA president Robert Garner, who said state collective bargaining law requires the committee to deal directly with the union's duly elected representatives.

But Patricia Toland, vice-chairwoman of the School Committee negotiating team, said the letter was just an attempt to educate the teachers on the issues.

"We felt there seemed to be a lack of understanding of what the School Committee was asking the QEA," said Mrs. Toland. "We don't want the teachers to be so fearful and anxious as to what is going on."

When asked about the possibility of the letter being an unfair labor practice, she said "I have no comment to make on that."

School committee members did not discuss the possibility that such a letter might be illegal, she said.

About 1,000 copies of the letter were mailed Tuesday morning to the QEA members, said School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon. He said he was acting in the direction of the four committee negotiators - Mrs. Toland, Francis Anselmo, Mary Collins and Joan Picard. Two other members of the committee, Christopher Kennedy and John Sullivan, who do not

Notice To Our Readers

Effective with this issue, the home delivery and newsstand price of The Quincy Sun will be 15 cents instead of 10 cents.

As we announced Sept. 27, steadily rising costs -- especially for newsprint, ink and other materials over which we have no control -- force us to make our own price adjustment.

We regret we have to raise the price but inflation leaves us no choice.

Even at 15 cents, the price of The Sun will still be lower than that of most weekly newspapers, many of whom charge 20 and 25 cents.

The Sun is now in its 12th year of publication and this marks the first price increase in home delivery by news carrier and at newsstands in that time.

New rates for mail subscriptions are already in effect. They are: $6.50 per year, $10 for two years and $15 for three years. Out-of-state subscriptions are now $8.50 per year.

Mail subscriptions taken out at the old rates will be honored at those rates until the completion of the subscription.

We hope our readers who have been most loyal to us and have encouraged us in our efforts to bring to Quincy a good community newspaper, will be understanding as we make this inflation forced adjustment.

Thank you, sincerely,

Henry Bosworth

No 'Main Bout'

Light Voter Turnout Seen For Election

By TOM HENSHAW

Lack of a "main bout" mayoral fight may result in one of the lightest voter turnouts in recent years in Quincy's municipal election Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Mayor Arthur H. Tobin, seeking re-election to a second term, has what is considered a frail challenge from political neophyte Abe M. Itkin.

City Clerk John Gillis, who has supervised Quincy elections for the past 20 years, predicts that the turnout this time could be as low as 50 per cent, a post-Plan E record.

"There's no main bout," said Gillis. "Even a good council-at-large race doesn't get many people excited. They like a heavyweight championship fight for mayor."

There is a good council-at-large race, with former Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia attempting a comeback against incumbents John J. Quinn and Francis X. McCauley, Michael E. Faherty and newcomer Richard J. Koch Jr. in the fight for three seats.

Gillis forecast a turnout of 50 to 55 per cent, which could mean that only some 24,000 of the city's 47,861 registered voters will bother to cast a ballot.

The worst showing in recent years was in 1969 when only 23,526 voters, or 52.7 per cent of those registered, showed up at the polls to choose between James R. McIntyre and Robert C. Preble for mayor.

Strangely enough, that 1969 election was also highlighted by another comeback attempt on the part of LaRaia, who had lost his first bid for mayor to McIntyre in 1965.

Tobin, who has been in city government since 1967 when he was elected to the City Council, is considered an odds-on-favorite over Itkin. The latter, however, is expected to win some votes from teachers and city employees who are feuding bitterly with Tobin over the matter of pay raises.

The Mayor got 6,367 votes in the Sept. 11 preliminary election to 1,144 for Itkin when together they eliminated a third candidate, Michael Jovanovic.

The real fight on the ballot is for the three at-large seats on the City Council among Quinn, McCauley, LaRaia, Koch and Michael E. Faherty, a retired State Police captain.

LaRaia, a hospital administrator, has been in and out of City Hall since 1959, when he was elected to the City Council from Ward 2 in his late 20's.

The high point in his political career thus far was his election as mayor in 1975 over Walter J. Hannon after a recount that overturned an apparent Hannon victory.

But, after a chaotic two-year

Tobin Plans Shakeup In Traffic Commission

Mayor Tobin is about to propose a massive shakeup in the City Traffic Commission in an all-out attack on parking and policing problems, particularly around the three MBTA stations.

Tobin acknowledged that he was preparing a plan to revise the Traffic Commission for submission to the City Council but he declined to go into detail.

The Quincy Sun learned that the plan probably will call for a more streamlined Traffic Commission with provisions for input from the Quincy business community.

In the past concerns have been expressed that the traffic problems brought by the three MBTA stations will be compounded when the Red Line extension is constructed to Braintree.

The garage over the MBTA tracks at Granite St., which is to be built with a UDAG grant, will add other problems, as will a second UDAG garage being sought for the Ross Parkingway.

Licensed Issued But

Church Opposes Chestnut St. Wine And Cheese Shop

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN
Central Baptist Church, 65 Washington St., Quincy Center, has notified the Quincy License Board of its opposition to a wine and cheese shop at 30 Chestnut St., granted a license last week.

Nick Trifone, owner of the Litre and Wedge, Wine and Cheese Shop, had notified the church of the proposed shop.

A state law specified that an establishment within 500 feet of a church, hospital or playground must have the approval of the church, hospital, etc.

When the matter of licensing came before the board at last week's meeting, no notice of opposition from the church had been received so the license was granted to Mrs. Sheila Trifone.

However, the board did receive a letter of opposition Oct. 25, two days later, from the church's pastor, Rev. Charles Stevens.

Rev. Stevens said that the church board voted Oct. 18, to express opposition to the shop on the grounds that it is located within 500 feet of the legally established limits for the sale of liquor, near a church.

He said the church board also refused to grant Trifone permission to address the board personally as Trifone had requested.

Rev. Stevens said he informed Trifone of the church board's decisions, and indicated he would ask the board to reconsider allowing Trifone to meet with them.

Because Rev. Stevens was going out of town for a few days, he said he would not be able to speak to the church board right away. Trifone told him he would hold back on the licensing request until he heard from the church, Rev. Stevens said.

The License Board voted to send the church's letter of opposition to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission for its opinion of the situation.

In other matters, the License Board:

- Granted a one day, all alcoholic license to the Rock Island Cove Association for a "Record Hop" Nov. 3, 8-12 p.m. at St. Thomas Aquinas Hall, Houghton Neck.

- Granted a one-day, all alcoholic license to the 1979 Christmas Party Committee, representing school system employees, for a buffet and dance Dec. 14, at the North Quincy Knights of Columbus Hall. In the past, profits from the party have been donated to the Globe Santa.

- Granted a request from Wollaston Assembly, Order of the Rainbow for Girls, for a permit to sell balloons at the Christmas Parade, Nov. 25.

- Postponed for two weeks a request from Kelly's Pub & Grub, 27 Billings Rd., North Quincy, for a seven-day all alcoholic common victualer license. The pub currently has a six day all alcoholic common victualer license.

- Granted a request from the Catholic Women's Club of North Quincy for a one-day, all alcoholic

On 'Voluntary' Activities

QEA Files Unfair Labor Complaint Against Creedon

School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon has been named in an unfair labor practices complaint filed Tuesday with the State Labor Relations Commission.

The complaint was filed by the Massachusetts Teachers Association on behalf of the Quincy Education Association, which represents the city's teachers.

The charge centers around an Oct. 23 meeting of the QEA, when members voted to discontinue 11 activities and services if no contract was agreed upon by Nov. 1, and a subsequent meeting that day between Creedon and the city's principals.

The QEA claims that Creedon, as agent of The School Committee, ordered the principals to instruct their teachers to continue these activities. This charge is "blatantly false," Dr. Creedon said Tuesday.

In the Oct. 23 vote, teachers decided to stop taking part in such activities as field trips, detention monitoring and extra help for students beyond that required in the contract.

QEA leaders claimed that all 11 activities are voluntary and not required by the current contract.

Mary Curtin, head of the QEA negotiating committee, said some teachers have reported that their principals are under orders from Creedon that teachers take part in the 11 activities.

Mobil Oil Seeks Permit To Dredge

"A number of members, from several different schools, have called us about this," she said.

"Mrs. Curtin's statement was false," said Creedon. The city's principals did meet with him, Creedon said, but the purpose of the meeting was only to inform the principals of the School Committee's policy on the proposed cutback.

Dr. Creedon said he did not choose to discuss what that policy was. However, he said that while some of the 11 items which teachers plan to discontinue were "related to the contract," others were voluntary.

"I don't know how you can order someone to volunteer," Creedon said.

"No one from the QEA bothered to call this office to determine the subject of the meeting or what I did say," Creedon said. Furthermore, he said, "each and every" principal present at the meeting will bear him out on what was discussed.

"It's unfortunate that Mrs. Curtin has embarrassed herself in this way," Creedon said.

Robert Garner, QEA president, confirmed that Creedon was not consulted before the complaint was filed.

"I felt that if he wanted us to know what was said, he would have invited one of us to the meeting," he said.

the proposal should submit the comment in writing to the New England Division, Corps of Engineers, 424 Trapelo Rd., Waltham, Mass. 02154.

Deadline for comments is Monday, Nov. 26.

All Bids For Revaluation Over Expected $500,000

Four bids for the job of revaluating property in the city of Quincy under a court order, all of them more than the expected $500,000, were opened by the assessors Tuesday.

John Comer, chairman of the Board of Assessors, said the bids will be taken under advisement and a decision on the award will be made in a week to 10 days.

The bids were:

K. M. Cleminshaw Co., Cleveland, Ohio, $738,400.

Robert J. Finnegan and Associates, Acton, $509,000.

P. R. C. Jacobs, McLean, Va.,

Systems Technology, Concord, $575,000.

Comer said Systems Technology bid was reduced to $547,300 because the original bid included $27,700 for photographing houses which was not one of the specifications in the bidding.

The houses, he said, have already been photographed by CEIA workers who did preliminary work for revaluation.

Quincy is under State Supreme Court edict to hire a commercial appraisal firm to revalue the city at 100 per cent, preparatory to instituting classification, by Nov.

Mayor Tobin was scheduled to go before the City Council at its last meeting with a transfer order taking $500,000 out of various other 1980 budget accounts to pay for the revaluation.

The appearance, however, was postponed when Comer had to go out of town on a previous appointment.

Tobin said Tuesday when the bids were opened that he has no specific plans to go before the next meeting of the Council, which is scheduled for Monday, Nov. 5.

QJC Secretarial Alumni To Hold Dinner

A dinner for alumni who have graduated from the Quincy Junior College Secretarial Program is planned for Thursday, Nov. 1.

Virginia Waller, chairwoman of the Department, said many alumni have expressed a desire to meet with former classmates and instructors. Eighty-five former students have indicated they will attend the dinner.

All Quincy Junior College

Secretarial graduates are welcome to attend and bring guests. The entire faculty of the Secretarial Department as well as many other Quincy Junior College faculty and administrators will be present.

The reception and dinner will be held at the Adams Heights Men's Club, Quincy from 6:30 to 10 p.m. A hot and cold buffet will be served at 7:30. A cocktail reception will be from 6:30 to 7:30. Interested alumni may call Miss Virginia Waller, department chairwoman at 786-8777.

Harold Bill to Aid Fuel Oil Dealers

Sen. Paul D. Harold (D-Quincy) has co-sponsored legislation to provide low-interest state-sponsored loans to those fuel dealers who have trouble paying their suppliers this winter.

The late-filed bill would establish a Home Heating Assistance Fund in the Department of Communities and Development, which would grant loans at up to 7 1/2 per cent interest to dealers who qualify.

The legislation also provides that a dealer who receives a loan must also give his home heating oil customers 45 days to pay their bills.

"This legislation is intended to help dealers who do not otherwise qualify for state or federal assistance, but who find themselves hard-pressed to pay their suppliers," Harold said.

He noted that some dealers are having a hard time giving customers time to pay because they must pay their suppliers within 10 days.

"If the dealers have more flexibility in their cash flow, they won't have to pressure their customers for payment, and can avoid having to demand cash on delivery," Harold said.

The legislation would set up a $10 million fund, and dealers would apply to the Secretary of Communities and Development for loans.

The legislation also requires that oil wholesalers must allow 30 days before demanding payment from dealers.

Wanted: One Tall Christmas Tree

Richard J. Koch, executive secretary to the Park-Recreation Board, announces the Forestry Department is seeking the donation of a large Christmas tree to be erected at McIntyre Mall in Quincy Sq. for the City's Christmas activities.

The tree should be of the spruce variety and between 30 and 40 feet in height and available for removal and transportation before Nov. 19, he said. The Forestry Department will assume the responsibility of cutting and removal of the tree to the McIntyre Mall Area.

Persons preferably in the geographical location of the city who have a Christmas tree on their property they no longer desire, that meets the requirements requested, may contact Forestry Director John F. Koegler who will inspect the tree and site. The list of possibilities will be compiled by Nov. 15th for final selection.

The tree chosen will be erected and decorated for the Christmas lighting ceremonies ushering in Quincy's Christmas Festival Activities Nov. 23.

Strand Theater Seeking Approval For Game Room

Joseph O'Connor, owner of the Strand Theater, Quincy Sq., Tuesday discussed the possibility of constructing a family game room on the theater premises with members of the License Board.

O'Connor disclosed that the theater is having financial problems, and that he would like a sounding from board members on the game room possibility.

He said there would be approximately 20 games, and that a sound-proof wall would be constructed to avoid conflict with the sounds of the movies and games.

O'Connor said the game area would be open approximately from 2 to 10 p.m. and that he has the backing of area businesses.

He said if the financial situation doesn't improve, he may have to sell the property as a warehouse.

The game room would be located behind the movie screen, with an entrance on Maple St., he said.

Following the meeting, License Board members toured the back area which includes an 80-foot celinged hall and two floors of dressing rooms used by vaudevillians more than 20 years ago.

Board members suggested that O'Connor draw up plans and submit them to the board.

Life Might Be Beautiful If You Never Had To Borrow Money

Yes, if you had enough money to meet all your needs at all times, life could be much simpler for you. But most of us do not enjoy this financial freedom. For instance, the biggest purchase most of us make in our lifetime—the buying of a home—usually requires bank help with a mortgage.

There are, of course, other financial needs you may face from time to time, whether buying a car, remodeling your home, acquiring a yacht or just consolidating a lot of bills.

The Quincy Co-operative Bank would like to help you with your small loan problems. We hope you never have to borrow but when you do, don't borrow more than you need. And if you have a savings account with us, remember that you can get a passbook loan for only two percent interest above the passbook rate. That's the lowest interest you will ever pay on a loan unless your wealthy aunt gives you an interest free loan.

If a passbook loan is not possible, try our small loan services where we do our best to meet the needs of all credit worthy applicants. You may find that a small loan tailored exactly to your needs will solve your present financial problem. Call or visit the Consumer Loan Centers at our Main Office or at our Branches.

Josiah Quincy, for whom our Bank was named, founded co-operative banking to help people acquire homes. We know he would like what we are doing for people needing small loans.

Four-Day DPW Week Brings Fuel Savings, Higher Production

Quincy experienced significant fuel savings and a rise in public works productivity when the 10-hour day, four-day week was instituted in the Public Works Department last summer.

Quincy, along with Danbury, Conn., are cited for their fuel saving experiments in the October issue of "American City and County", the magazine of public works engineering and management.

The article said that Quincy saw an 18 per cent drop in gasoline consumption and a 27 per cent decrease in diesel fuel consumption in the 30 days following July 16, when the four-day week started.

"There was a lot of energy being used just coming back to the shop for lunch," Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti is quoted as saying.

"Sometimes the return to the worksite was three miles away. Now we start at 6:30 a.m. and have a half hour for lunch at the job site. On the fifth day when no one works commuters are saving energy as well."

The experiment, which involves some 250 workers, ends next Monday when the clock is moved back to Standard Time.

JAMES RICCIUTI

Daily hours will be 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., with a half hour lunch break on the job site.

Ricciuti told "American City and County" that most of the Public Works Department workers liked the idea of the four-day week although "there are some who aren't going to like working a longer day."

One of the reasons the laborers' union agreed to the change, Ricciuti said, was because Friday joined Saturday and Sunday as an overtime day. There wasn't much overtime, though, he said.

Water Supt. Owen Eaton said that, at the time the magazine story was written, his department had had to call in workers on overtime only once for a water main break. He rounded up a four-man crew with seven phone calls, he said.

Eaton said the 10-hour day didn't seem to be wearing on the workers.

"One of the main things is that, depending on the mechanization of the department, there can be very little actual hand labor," he said.

"The men aren't really overworked to the point that they're tired, and they're willing to take that little extra to get the three-day weekend."

Productivity went up during the four-day week because the workers could finish more jobs in one day and didn't have to pack up their tools for the night and unpack them again the next day.

"If we were out on a service leak, many times we'd have to stop at 3:45 p.m., hook up a temporary service overnight and go back the next day to finish the job," said Eaton.

"There were several times where we've been able to do those jobs in one day and eliminate the need for a temporary hookup."

Eaton said he found the longer work day aided in the installation of water meters since the workers could catch hard-to-reach pipes at home early in the morning or late afternoon.

QCA Candidates Night At Woodward School

The Quincy Citizens Association will hold a candidates' night tonight (Thursday) at 7:45 p.m. in the Woodward School for Girls on Hancock St. All candidates have been invited to speak and answer questions.

The QCA will hold its regular meeting Wednesday, Nov. 7, at 8 p.m. in the Montclair Men's Club.

The guest speaker will be John W. McGowan, Quincy coordinator for "Tax Acts", who will give details of a petition now being circulated to reduce state income taxes by $300 million.

There will also be a silent auction for the benefit of the QCA scholarship fund.

People who plan to attend the meeting are urged to rummage through their cellars, attics and closets for unwanted and unused items to be donated to a worthy cause.

Those who are unable to come to the meeting but have articles to be donated should call Elinda Lipsitz at 328-8327 to arrange a pickup.

Morrissey Schedules Friday Office Hours

Rep. Michael W. Morrissey (D-Quincy) will hold office hours tomorrow (Friday) in his mobile office at Shea Rink in West Quincy and at the war monument, Hucks Ave. and East Squantum, Squantum.

He will be in Squantum from 7:30 a.m. to 8:30 a.m. and at Shea Rink from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m.

Russell Chisholm Awarded 3-Year Army Scholarship

Cadet Corporal Russell W. Chisholm, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Chisholm of Quincy and a sophomore at Norwich University in Northfield, Vt., has been awarded a three-year Army ROTC Scholarship.

Such scholarships are awarded after nation-wide competition each year to outstanding ROTC cadets who have demonstrated academic excellence and leadership potential.

The Army ROTC Scholarship pays the cost of tuition, books, and fees, and also provides a monthly subsistence allowance to the cadet for 3-and 4-year winners.

Chisholm, in addition to his Army ROTC activities, is also a member of the university's football and track teams.

A graduate of North Quincy High School in 1978, Chisholm is majoring in Criminal Justice. On his graduation from Norwich, he will be commissioned as an Army second lieutenant in 1982.

Commander Henry J. Williams of Bryan VFW Post is directing the campaign.

take part in negotiations because of possible conflict of interest, were aware of the letter, Creedon said.

The Oct. 29 letter listed the committee's offer "on the table" on the three points of disagreement - a salary increase, a proposed increase of teachers' hours and the method of conducting "reduction in force" (RIF) layoffs.

On the salary issue, the letter said "since last summer, the committee has had pending before the negotiating team of the QEA a salary offer as follows:

- 4 percent (effective) Sept. 1, 1979

- 5 percent - Sept. 1, 1980

- 4 percent - Sept. 1, 1981.

According to Garner, the QEA's request is for an immediate 4 percent increase, followed by a 3 percent raise in six months, followed by similar increases next year - a total 14 percent raise over two years.

On the subject of RIF layoffs, made necessary by the school system's declining enrollment, the committee proposes no change in the current seniority system, which is favored by teachers, for three years.

After that, an evaluation system would be used as one factor in weeding out the less competent teachers, the letter says.

"Three years from now, the school system should have bottomed out in its enrollment decline, thereby minimizing the necessity for further reduction in force," the committee claimed in the letter.

According to Garner, the QEA prefers that RIF layoffs continue to be conducted "as a general rule" on the basis of seniority. State law now allows provisions for the removal of incompetent teachers, Garner said, and such teachers could be laid off, out of order of seniority, in the future, he said, if the burden of proof were on the committee.

The extra 45 minutes per day is necessary to "provide for the orderly reception of students in the morning and their orderly dismissal in the afternoon," as well as guaranteeing that students receive after-school tutoring, the letter said.

While criticizing the school committee letter, Mrs. Curtin also lamented the "growing apparent bitterness in the negotiations:

"It's too bad that these sort of things have to happen. They create feelings that don't go away."

Revaluation Bids Over $500,000

That is the night before election when, traditionally, the councillors who are up for reelection do not like to do any "heavy lifting," that is, take up such weighty subjects as $500,000 appropriations.

Some revaluation work has been done by specially trained CEFA workers but Supreme Court Justice Herbert P. Wilkins ruled that it was not enough to get the city off the legal hook.

The city must be valued at 100 percent of fair market value before property can be classified as residential, industrial, commercial and open land and taxed at various percentages of full value.

Will 24,000 Stay Home?

City Clerk John Gillis looks for a light turnout at next Tuesday's city election—one of the lightest in many years.

He predicts that only about 50 to 55 percent of the almost 48,000 registered voters will bother to go to the polls.

It could mean 24,000 will vote. And 24,000 will stay home.

The fact 24,000 people with the right to vote may not be interested enough to exercise a right so cherished men and women have died for it, is sad, indeed.

GILLIS

In fact, it has been a sad election year for Quincy.

The preliminary election turned out to be a $35,000-to-$40,000 farce with only three names and one contest on the ballot. If you can call it a contest. It cost the city as much as a full-ballot election would have.

It's pretty sad when you can't get enough candidates to hold a normal preliminary election. And, enough candidates for an interesting final election.

Lack of a "main bout" mayoral fight, Gillis says, is the reason for his small turnout forecast. This year's mayoral contest is far short of becoming a "crowd pleaser."

There are no big issues as there were two years ago when Tobin slugged it out with then incumbent Joseph LaRaia. The issues in 1977 which helped spark a 66.8 percent voter turnout were: corruption and a full-time mayor.

Tobin fired away at the scandal in the LaRaia administration. LaRaia mounted a full-time mayor horse but could not ride it to re-election.

The closest thing to an issue this year in the mayor's race is pay raises for teachers and city employees, but Itkin really hasn't made it one. The teachers and city employee unions have, though. And Itkin, no doubt, will pick up some votes from them because they are bitter at Tobin's so-far firm "we haven't got the money" stand.

None of the candidates for any office have generated much political steam. Even the City Council at-Large race—the best on the ballot—has been somewhat on the ho-hum side.

Big questions there: Can Joe LaRaia come back? How strong is Richard Koch, Jr.? And, who will top the field?

Without a preliminary election to analyze for strengths and weaknesses there is no voter evidence right now to indicate the answers to those three questions.

But there have been a couple of opinion polls, for whatever they are worth.

The two polls supposedly indicate that City Council President John Quinn—seeking his 12th consecutive term and Francis McCauley will both be re-elected. The same polls reportedly show LaRaia in the lead for the at-large seat being vacated by Joseph Brett who is calling it a political career, and with young Koch and Michael Faherty running fairly even behind him.

But, how reliable are the polls? How professionally were they taken? How many voters were actually queried—and how? And, would a light voter turnout have an effect on the polls' validity?

Young Koch has probably covered the most campaign ground, knocking on doors since early spring. LaRaia seems to have chosen to low-key his comeback bid and there's talk he plans to emerge with a new, less controversial, image.

Nobody has really put his gloves on in this election campaign. The toughest statements so far have come from the recently founded "Citizens For Decent Government." It was organized specifically to oppose LaRaia's comeback attempt by reminding voters of his turbulent administration as mayor.

Other than that, the only excitement has been in Ward 2 where Councilor Daniel Raymondi and challenger Kathy O'Donnell got into a bit of a skirmish over Senator Paul Tsongas turning up at a reception for her. Raymondi wanted to know what a Democratic U. S. Senator was doing "taking sides in a fight between two Democrats." Miss O'Donnell, who had campaigned for Tsongas said she was flattered by it all.

Thus far, that incident has been the highlight of Election '79. Hardly a reason for voters to storm the polls next Tuesday.

PERHAPS THE BIGGEST question remaining to be answered this election year: how much influence will disgruntled teachers and other city employees have on the outcome?

The unions reportedly prefer McCauley, LaRaia and Faherty for City Council at-large and Frank Anselmo for School Committee.

Could be a lot of "bullying".

BUT THE BIGGEST question of all is: are you going to vote? Even if you turn out for just one right candidate is a lot better than staying home and voting for no one.

Think about it.

From 12 to 84:

The QSO: Good Mus

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Ranging from 12 to 84, the members of the Quincy Symphony Orchestra represent about as broad a cross-section of the city as is possible.

The 70-odd members range from a doctor on bassoon, a chemist on bass and an architect on French horn, not to mention a slew of teachers, housewives and students. The members, about half of whom are Quincy residents, seem to have little in common except love of the music they play.

The orchestra is now entering its 26th year, although similar groups, like the Quincy Orchestral Society, existed before 1953.

The QSO is now beginning its fourth year of exile caused by renovations to North Quincy High School, its traditional home. The orchestra's regular performances, this year, as in the last two, will be at the Milton High School auditorium.

"None of the other auditoriums in the city are large enough for an orchestra," says Nancy Johnson, QSO president. "That's the only reason we're not performing in

Members of the orchestra hope to return to North Quincy next year, when renovations are expected to be completed. And none too soon, says Miss Johnson, who thinks the ensemble has been "very definitely hurt" by three years of performing out of town.

"It has had a bearing on the size of the audiences," she said, reflecting on a year of performances at Canton High School and two at Milton.

The forced move to Canton was "devastating," she said, reflecting on a year of performances at Canton High School and two at Milton.

The first year in Milton was also poorly attended, while "it started sweeping up last year," he said. "I'm hoping this year will be even better."

Although rehearsals are already underway, the season will not officially open until Dec. 8 with "The Nutcracker Suite," performed with the Boston Repertory Ballet Company. Following that will be a March 7 "All-Beethoven" evening and "Youth Performs" April 25, featuring high school soloists. The orchestra returns to Quincy for "Pops" concerts at the Neighborhood Club May 14 and 16.

The varied fare is in keeping with the orchestra's membership, who seem to come from all walks of life and take part for a variety of reasons.

A handful are Eastern Nazarene students, who earn class credit for taking part, since the school has no orchestra of its own. Several are music teachers, who use it as a way to keep up in their field. For others, it's strictly a hobby.

But the biggest reason for taking part, says Miss Johnson, is "for total relaxation and enjoyment."

The key to this atmosphere is the leadership of Robert Brown, she said, who "demands a lot from us, but remains a friend."

Some members gave remarkably similar reasons for performing. "I love it," said Eleanor Nelson, a Braintree social studies teacher.

"I've always loved music; it's an avocation," she said. She's been performing with Quincy orchestras since before World

Della Chiesa-McIntyre Bout Drew 75.5% Turnout

Here is a rundown of mayoral candidates and the voter turnout in Quincy for the past 20 years since the return of Plan A government:

1957 - Amelio Della Chiesa vs. Laurence J. Curtin, 60.0 per cent.

1959 - Amelio Della Chiesa vs. James R. McIntyre, 75.5 per cent.

1961 - Amelio Della Chiesa

vs. Joseph E. Brett, 62.9 per cent.

1963 - Amelio Della Chiesa vs. Charles L. Shea, 64.2 per cent.

1967 - James R. McIntyre vs. Harold A. Nannis, 54.4 per cent.

"I've never been without music. I've always been involved with one group or another," said Joseph Watson, also a member, off and on, since the early days. He's in the insurance business.

"I needed an outlet to perform," said Raymond Thayer, who's belonged since moving here from California 16 years ago.

"I'm an amateur. I love it and I need someone to play," said Thayer, an architect and former QSO president.

When Brown first joined the QSO as conductor, it was only supposed to be for a few weeks 13 years ago. Some friends in the orchestra asked him to help out in the absence of former conductor Nicholas Aarshak, who had had a heart attack. Brown, who was then an Eastern Nazarene music professor, obliged, and has led the orchestra ever since. He now works for a Boston engineering firm.

Brown, along with the QSO's board of directors, selects the orchestra's program for the year. He's responsible for leading the weekly rehearsals at Eastern Nazarene and, of course, conducting the public performances.

Teachers Skip Pay In Money Crisis

Members of the Quincy Teachers Union agreed to work for one week in December without pay to help the School Department through its financial crisis, with the proviso they retain the right to collect later.

Creditor banks told Mayor Charles Ross and the School Committee that the 1934 school budget must not exceed $1.1 million or the city would not be able to renew temporary notes that are due in the current year.

The school budget for 1933 was $1,161,000.

Mayor Ross figured the 1934 budget could be boosted to the required $1,186,000 by transferring $40,000 from other accounts, $21,000 in employee donations, and $25,000 in uncollected pay for a week.

MACKAY ASSAILS TAVERNS

State Sen. John D. Mackay (R-Quincy) predicted that conditions would be much worse than the old saloon days if hard liquor was permitted to be sold by the drink in taverns.

Mackay also complained that he was unable to get much reaction from among his constituents on the matter of how they wanted liquor to be sold once the 18th Amendment is officially repealed.

A blocked kick recovered in the end zone in the first period provided the margin as the Quincy High School Football team lost to undefeated New Bedford on the Whalers' home field.

Bat Nelson and Pete Zoia scored the touchdowns as the North Quincy High School team warmed up for its first ever meeting with Quincy on Armistice Day by walloping Hingham, 13-0.

ERROR DETECTED

Tax Collector Edward G. Morris announced that tax collections for October had fallen off some 15 per cent from those of the same month in the previous year.

Later, however, it was discovered that the Tax Department had included Oct. 31 collections in the November count and that collections had actually risen by $6,000 for the month.

Six QHS Seniors Get Letters of Recommendation

Six Quincy High School seniors have received letters of recommendation for their performance in an October, 1978 exam.

The six, named Commended Students in the 25th annual National Merit Scholarship Program, are David Eleuteri, Elan Ezickson, James Hacunda, Patricia Lenehan, Kathleen Nicklas and Julia Stasio.

Their scores placed them in the top five percent of over one million students taking the Preliminary Scholarship Aptitude Test - National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT/NMSQT) last year.

Letters were presented to the students by Quincy High principal Lloyd Hill.

Center for two years.

Buckley, a graduate of Archbishop Williams High School and Boston State College, is a resident of Quincy along with his wife, Nancy.

Brian Buckley Named Youth Coordinator

Brian Buckley is returning to Quincy as youth coordinator, replacing William O'Brien who resigned recently.

Buckley, who worked in youth programs for the Quincy

Recreation Department and is currently coach of the Quincy Junior College basketball team, has been youth coordinator for Holbrook for the past 16 months.

Before that he was director of the Concord-Carlisle Youth

School Gym Programs Cancelled Election Day

All Quincy Recreation Department school and evening gym programs scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 6 are cancelled due to the city-wide elections, announces Recreation Director Charles Alongi.

However, women's fitness program and recreational swims at the Lincoln Hancock School will be held as usual.

Career Education Essential Says Toland

"Career education is essential for all Quincy students and the school system must adequately prepare students for the world which awaits them after graduation," said Patricia Toland, vice-Chairwoman of the School Committee at a coffee hour at the home of Ruth Lenehan, 56 Monroe Rd.

Mrs. Toland said she believes that career awareness should be emphasized in elementary schools to show students what kinds of careers are available to them. She added that girls particularly need a wider exposure to the expanding career options now available to them.

"More intense career exploration should be introduced at the junior high school level. The interest inventory now administered in the eighth grade and the differential aptitude given in the ninth grade help students to begin career decision-making," Mrs. Toland said.

Mrs. Toland noted that she requested a vocational-technical school needs assessment to insure the relevancy of the school's courses to the job market. "Quincy taxpayers need to be sure that the vocational-technical school is preparing its students for jobs which will be stable and well-paying through the eighties," she said.

She urged parents to learn more about what the schools are now doing in the area of career education and to encourage teachers and administrators in their efforts to emphasize this critically important educational issue.

Quincy DeMolay Plans 'Get Acquainted Night.'

The Order of DeMolay Old Colony chapter of Quincy plans a "Get Acquainted Night and Prospect" Party Nov. 8 for young men interested in joining the order.

The party is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at the Masonic Temple, 1170 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

DeMolay, an international youth organization founded in 1919, is open to any youth of good character between the ages of 14 and 21. DeMolay chapters are involved in such activities as ecology and anti-drug programs, charity fund drives, blood donations, safe driver programs and other civic services.

The Old Colony chapter, which meets the second and fourth

Thursdays of each month at the Masonic Temple, also sponsors year-round sports program, including winter basketball.

The organization's aims are to offer a young man a wholesome occupation for his spare time, worthwhile associates, the best of environment and an interesting and complete program of all-around youth development.

The "Get Acquainted Night" will feature refreshments, including pizza served by the DeMolay's female counterparts, the Rainbow Girls.

For more information on DeMolay, contact Master Counselor Steve Olsen at 773-1712 or Dave Abbott, state Master Counselor at 773-1580.

Swiss School Officials

In Visit Here

Eleven government officials from Zurich, Switzerland, were scheduled to be in Quincy yesterday (Wednesday) to view city schools and exchange ideas with Supt. Lawrence P. Creedon, teachers and students.

Quincy was the only school stop on their extensive United States tour. It was arranged by the Center for International Visitors in Boston and Michael Hurley, director of Project LINC.

The visitors included Dr. Thomas Wagner, president of the Zurich Board of Education; Hansjoerb Graf, secretary of the school administration; and Eduard Fischer of the Zurich teaching staff.

Salad Day Nov 6 At YMCA

The Women's and Youth Committees of the Quincy YMCA will hold a salad day Tuesday, Nov. 6, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. to raise money for on-going youth programs at the Y.

There will also be a bake sale in the Youth Room.

Quincy Library Gets $31,000 State Grant

The Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners has awarded Quincy a direct and library grant of $34,307.63, according to Sen. Paul D. Harold [D-Quincy].

The state board provides direct and grants to public libraries which meet minimum standards of quality and service to the citizens of their communities.

"These state funds will assist the Quincy Public Library system in continuing to provide the excellent services and programs which the citizens of Quincy have enjoyed for many years," Harold said.

The state funds are given to encourage local communities to continue worthwhile programs and to expand and improve needed services.

Harold noted that Quincy's library budget for fiscal 1978 was more than $1.1 million.

"The size of the library budget is an indication of the community's commitment to library services, and it is entirely fitting that these state funds be available to assist the library system," he said.

He said he was particularly pleased at the grant because he has been supporting legislation to further increase state aid to public libraries.

Houghs Neck Post Las Vegas Night

Houghs Neck Legion Post will hold a Las Vegas Night Saturday, Nov. 3, beginning at 8 p.m. at the post home, 1116 Sea St., Houghs Neck.

Proceeds will benefit the post's youth program.

Commander D. Paul Shaw and vice-commander John Christensen are chairmen.

Cause Probed

$200,000 Blaze Guts First American Bank

A $200,000 fire Monday night virtually destroyed a nearly completed branch of the First American Bank for Savings at Granite and Whitwell Sts., Quincy Center.

Fire officials described the fire as being of suspicious origin. The cause of the fire is now under investigation.

The fire was reported shortly before 8:30 p.m. and within minutes engulfed much of the building.

The nearby Covenant Congregational Church was briefly threatened by flames, causing firemen to soak the church's wooden roof.

The bank branch, started last summer, was scheduled to open early next year.

No injuries were reported in the fire.

In this period of financial uncertainties —

*If you are a saver or an investor,
The Quincy Cooperative Bank offers a foolproof recommendation for sleeping soundly at night*

It's really quite simple—put your money in the Quincy Co-operative Bank, where we can say without qualification that your deposits are insured in full. And with our "highest the law will allow" interest rates, this makes a fine combination today to let you sleep comfortably tonight.

How can we give this assurance? Co-operative bank deposits are insured by The Co-operative Central Bank, which serves only co-operative banks. Cooperative banking began over 100 years ago—and since then, no depositor has ever lost a dollar in any cooperative bank.

Here is what The Co-operative Central Bank says:

"Your deposits are insured in full. Our financial strength is such that we insure all deposits in full including interest left on deposit. No one can offer you better deposit insurance—no one."

Furthermore, it's nice to know that the Quincy Co-operative Bank has the greatest financial reserves of any co-operative bank in this state.

Two Heads Prove To Be Better Than One At Protestant Social Service Bureau

The old saying that "two heads are better than one" is as true today as ever before, according to two social workers at the Quincy-based Protestant Social Service Bureau.

John Applegate and Ann Fisher are social workers on the staff of the church-sponsored agency's counseling center, 772 Hancock St.

"It's difficult for most people to be objective about themselves," said Applegate, who, like Miss Fisher, is a certified social worker. "When they face a problem with a job, a marriage, or a difficulty with their children, it only makes sense that two heads are better than one when it comes to finding a good solution."

The pair point out that counseling goes on in many places. "Whenever you talk to someone, maybe a friend or neighbor, about something that's bothering you, this is counseling," said Miss Fisher, who joined the agency staff this past August. "But counseling is best when the counselor has been trained to listen and has the necessary skills and experience in problem solving."

Applegate indicates that there are many misconceptions about what happens in counseling.

"We're not out to force change on people," he said. "We're here to help them find new ways of looking at things. Together, we discover better ways of handling troublesome situations that bring about stress and unhappiness."

Add that solving one's problem often results in the disappearance of others, Applegate said. "We're here to help people operate more effectively. It's that simple."

Commenting on popular attitudes, Miss Fisher said many people still feel that something has to be wrong with a person to seek counseling.

"Nothing could be farther from the truth. We believe that people are basically healthy and that they have the ability to solve their problems. What we do is create a situation that makes it easier for them."

Applegate notes the holiday season seems to be a time when more than an average number of problems arise. "There is a lot of stress," he said, "and that tends to make things seem worse."

There are currently five social workers on the staff of the almost 35-year-old agency, which also has an extensive adoption program.

"Although we are all professionals, I guess we are also a little old-fashioned," Applegate said. "We're a small social service agency and we like to keep red-tape to a minimum."

The Protestant Social Service Bureau serves all South Shore communities.

"We have people of all faiths, too," said Applegate. "Most of them find out about us from their friends. We like that."

How long does counseling take? "Sometimes we see people only once or twice," Fisher said. "But most of the time, it's longer."

The agency has sliding fees, depending on income. "If there's a need, we meet it," Applegate added.

Give the United Way

Your Dental Health

by Daniel P. Sweeney D.D.S.

Dentists use five different types of x-ray pictures to assist them in making a diagnosis. Periapical x-rays show the entire tooth, including the ends of the root and some of the surrounding tissues. Bitewing shows upper and lower teeth on one film and are especially useful in revealing small cavities and early periodontal disease. No root ends are visible. Occlusal x-rays supplement the bitewing and periapical x-rays by giving a different perspective. Extraoral x-rays show larger areas than can be seen with the other types. The last type is the panoramic, which reveals the upper and lower jaws, all of the teeth, and other structures. Your family dentist uses x-ray only when necessary to discover problems that can be dangerous. In his practice of general dentistry, Dr. Daniel P. Sweeney, D.D.S., 539 Adams St., East Milton Square, uses all the latest dental equipment and techniques. He stresses preventive dentistry for all members of the family. He also fits and repairs dentures. Call Dr. Sweeney at 698-3636 for an appointment at your convenience. DENTAL HINT: Get an idea of the plaque build-up on your teeth by using a disclosing tablet.

KOCH

Councillor-at-Large

In the past 11 months, Dick Koch Jr. has visited homes in every section of the city to introduce himself and meet the people. Koch believes that a City Councillor has to know the people in order to serve them.

Koch has heard first hand the concerns of the citizens of Quincy as taxes take a greater portion of their paychecks. Koch has listened to the needs of Quincy's Senior Citizens. He recognizes the importance of providing quality educational and recreational programs for the youth of Quincy.

Quincy needs a new voice on the City Council. A voice committed only to the needs of the people.

Candidates Present Views On Issues For November 6 City Election

The 22 candidates in the Nov. 6 Quincy city final election have been given the opportunity to speak out on what they consider to be the key issues through a questionnaire compiled by the League of Women Voters of Quincy.

The public service project was carried out under the direction

• Mayor

Question: What goals can be attained within the next two years and what long term and short term steps will you be taking to achieve these?

ATHUR H. TOBIN, 58 Huntly Rd. Age: 49. Occupation: Mayor.

Answer: As Mayor, I have attempted to stabilize the tax rate which is probably one of the most important reasons why new development is now not only interested in locating in Quincy, but is actually making commitments to locate in Quincy. Many projects are presently in the formative stage and the revenues generated by them will create substantial new revenues for Quincy and hopefully a vast number of employment opportunities for the citizens of Quincy.

It is hard to differentiate between long term and short term steps in so far as development is concerned. As Mayor, I have put together a competent, capable planning staff to bring new development into Quincy. In addition, every effort is being made to put the city's financial house in order. In the long run, this is really the only way that Quincy will progress and everyone can rightfully take pride in its future.

of Constance Burns, League President and Jane Sullivan, Voter Service Chairman. Assisting them were Arlene Tenney, Marion Marsh, Anne Kane and Christina Morrison.

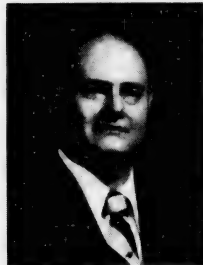

In addition to profile information, mayoral, city council at-large, ward council and school committee candidates were each asked a question on issues pertaining to the office they seek.

Salary: $25,000

Job description: Serves as chief executive officer of the city and has general supervision of all departments.

ABE M. ITKIN, 176 Presidents Lane. Age: 53. Occupation: Social Worker.

Answer: Thank you for your recent letter requesting my views on matters of public concern pertaining to my candidacy for Mayor of Quincy. My goal and my aim as a candidate for Mayor can be summarized in one sentence: Serve the People and none other!

Taxes are too high. However, I believe that any tax increase could be minimized if the Mayor would attack the budget with an axe rather than a paring knife. Patronage for friends, where no useful public service is performed, will be dealt a death blow if I am Mayor of Quincy.

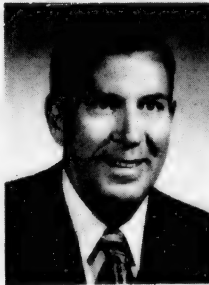

The business climate needs to be improved. Quincy will not become a "ghost town" if I am Mayor. To achieve this, I will work closely with the Planning Department and with all of our merchants to find ways and means to implement their needs.

Accessibility to downtown Quincy and a place to park are vital to improving our business climate.

I believe that solutions to these problems can be found if approached in an atmosphere of better service for all of the citizens of Quincy.

• Councillor At-Large

Question: What do you see as the major problem in the city in the next two years and how would you deal with it as a City Councillor?

FRANCIS X. MCCAULEY, 210 Manet Ave. Age: 49. Occupation: Bank President.

Answer: The major problem facing the City of Quincy lies in the area of municipal finance. Questionable financial practices by several city administrations over the past years have resulted in a reduction in the City's credit rating. Substantial free cash surpluses which could be used to reduce property taxes have turned into free cash deficits. Unpaid real estate taxes (some 2,900,000 due from two large business concerns alone) have contributed to the city's financial problems.

During the next two years, the mayor and the city council should take the following action:

1. A strict moratorium on the hiring of additional personnel. Eight new high-paying positions costing over $140,000 were included in the 1980 budget.
2. Implementation of the classification amendment as soon as possible. Classification of property is the best defense the home owner has against large tax abatement requests by business and industry.
3. Passage of a home rule petition that I sponsored requiring more information be given to the city council and the public concerning tax rate setting procedures.

JOHN J. QUINN, 86 Grandview Ave. Age: 56. Occupation: Blue Cross and Blue Shield Senior Representative.

Answer: In his 22 years of public service to Quincy, Councillor at Large John J. Quinn has served in virtually every leadership capacity. Whether it be Acting Mayor, Chairman of the Finance Committee, chairman of one of the other eleven committees which John has led, or in his present capacity as President of the City Council no elected official has the experience in city government that John Quinn has...and no official is more respected.

John Quinn has sponsored, co-authored, initiated or supported more vital legislation in the Quincy City Council than any public servant in Quincy's history. That's a big statement -- but it's true! John isn't just a lot of promises at election time, because responsible government isn't just politics; responsible government is the hard work that produces results! And, accomplishment and solid leadership is what John Quinn is all about.

That's why he is known and respected for his integrity, his experience and his commitment to Quincy. That's why he is President of the City Council. And that's why he deserves your Vote and Support.

MICHAEL E. FAHERTY, 28 Furnace Brook Parkway. Age: 56. Occupation: Director of Corporate Security.

Answer: In the next two (2) years, the major problem, as I see it, will be rising taxes...over and above increases brought about by inflation.

COUNCILLOR AT-LARGE:

TERM: 2 years

Salary: $3,000

Job description: Three are elected from the entire city to represent all of Quincy's residents.

Though I perceive this as the major problem, I also see it as creating a host of others that are far from minor. As taxes rise, we will see the continued movement of business out of the city. Property values will drop as homeowners move to less costly communities. And City services will have to be curtailed...if not eliminated.

I would deal with these and all other problems that face this City first by being honest with the people. I would weigh every proposal, budget request, revenue expectation and the assessment figures to determine where the money is expected to come from and where it's intended to go.

I would fight against every goal I believe unattainable though, in many cases, this might not be popular. In this endeavor, I would not be subservient to political faction or power.

RICHARD J. KOCH, JR., 38 Whiton Ave. Age: 24. Occupation: Claims Adjuster at Kemper Insurance.

Answer: The one most important issue facing Quincy is its bleak financial condition.

We must update government so we can receive the maximum amount of service for each citizen's tax dollar. Let us consider the two suggestions:

1. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Preventative maintenance for existing equipment and facilities, already paid for, will avert expensive repairs and premature replacement.

2. When equipment or supplies must be replaced, let us do it in the most efficient manner: By joining with our neighboring communities and discussing all of our needs. We could then have our regional governmental agency seek bids for a greater volume thereby reducing the unit price.

At the same time we must encourage development in our city, to expand our tax base. But we should not bring any development at the total sacrifice of the home owner.

It is also essential that our government officials serve the best interests of the total community and not become self made instruments of pressure groups.

JOSEPH J. LARAIA, 54 Grogan Ave. Age: 47. Occupation: Business Management.

Answer: The major problem facing the city in the next two years is the cost of living in the city. That undisputable fact has been made known to Quincyites in the past weeks in this municipal election year.

How can a councillor at-large deal with this problem? By supporting proposals such as energy conservation, economic development, cost saving measures in city government and by seeking out federal programs, because they are not funded from real estate taxes.

The next city council should debate the issues of government more openly in order to inform the citizenry about the problems of the city. A more informed citizenry helps to bring out a mutual understanding of the city's problems and cooperative effort to solve these issues.

It is my intention to advise, recommend and debate the issues of the city with the intention of offering my experience in government to help make the right decisions in solving the city's financial problems.

• Ward 1 Councillor

Question: What do you see as the major issue in your ward during the next two years and how would you deal with it as a City Councillor?

LEO J. KELLY, 143 Spring St. Age: 47. Occupation: Liaison officer and a victim's advocate.

Answer: My main concern as a public official has always been the neighborhoods - the nucleus of life in the city. Following are examples of my efforts to improve the neighborhood life in my ward: The Loan and grant program which has recently been expanded is responsible for much of the home improvement activity that we currently see in progress. Federal public works monies have been allocated for the resurfacing of many of our streets throughout the Ward.

Upgrading and constructing new parks and beaches.

In the forefront of the battle to defeat proposals for the expansion of the Nut Island facility as well as the proposed new facility at Broad Meadows.

WARD COUNCILLOR:

Term: Two years

Salary: $3,000

Job description: One elected from each of the city's six wards to serve as a representative of the residents in that area.

Chairman of the Special Senior Citizens Committee of the City Council.

The new multi Service Center, providing much-needed health, library and community services for residents.

Prevailed upon the Chief of Police to implement the Impact Team, a roving unit that has been dispatched to trouble spots on a moment's notice.

New and/or improved street lighting installed at various locations.

Introduced an ordinance change into the Council to amend the public drinking and open container law, to give police and court prosecutors the tools to control illegal drinking.

In summary, the neighborhoods always have and always will be my major concern while holding public office.

DAVID MacMILLAN, 17 Bell St. Age: 41. Occupation: Machine operator - Vulcan Tool.

Answer: Naturally, the major issue in any Ward in the City of Quincy is the rising tax rate. I am very disturbed at all the "For Sale" signs I see in my Ward. In talking to these people who are selling, I find that the greater majority are moving out of the City of Quincy because of the tax rate.

I would like to be able to say I have a "miracle cure" for rising taxes, but, of course, there isn't any! My approach to this problem would be to cut spending drastically. Of course, anytime this is suggested, the cry of alarm goes up about making cuts in essential service departments, such as Police and Fire. There are plenty of other departments and areas in which cuts can be made. Bringing in new business does not cut the taxes, as services must be increased. This is a problem fact, there has not been a "sizeable" tax decrease in 15 years!

• Ward 2 Councillor

DANIEL G. RAYMOND, 88 Elm St. Age: 32. Occupation: Practicing Attorney with law offices in Ward 2.

Answer: Commitment to our ward and the ability to provide aggressive, responsive and effective leadership are the most important issues.

People deserve a candidate who has a proven record of community involvement. I have attended numerous meetings of the Licensing Board, Board of Appeals, Planning Board, Traffic Commission, Park & Recreation Board and the Ward Two Civic Association voicing the concerns of the people I was elected to serve.

Together we have accomplished a great deal: the elimination of three problem barrooms, strong support for insurance company office building, Faxon Commons, extensive water main, sidewalk and street improvements, tree planting, improved lighting and traffic control, beach and park improvements -- Tot's Play Area at Point/Webster Complex and Military Gates at Faxon Park and Mound Street Beach, new roof and rest rooms at Fore River Clubhouse, $12,000 for Quincy Point Pumping Station, cleaning and re-pointing Town Brook and securing HUD Program for South Quincy. Ward Two leads all areas in new construction and growth and development.

I am available day or evening. I shall continue to make the representation of Ward Two a full time responsibility.

KATHLEEN O'DONNELL, 1025 Hancock St. Age: 30. Occupation: Public Information Director Mass. D.P.U.

Answer: The most important issue facing Ward 2 is ultimately leadership: the type of individual who will be capable and responsible to address the number of real issues facing the residents in the next two years. The underlying issues, of course, are maintenance, improvements, services, a preservation of the quality of our residential neighborhoods, and the cost of living in the city -- taxes.

Street repairs and stop signs are a vital part of a ward councillor's job. Still, the job of a ward councillor must go beyond the stop signs. In order to have a positive impact on the lives of the people in all of the neighborhoods of the ward, the Councillor must possess the commitment, integrity, and intelligence to lead responsibly, but firmly.

The job of a ward councillor must be one of continuous outreach.

I would hold regular monthly meetings in each of the three neighborhoods of Ward 2. I would work to develop a community center that would provide on going programs for our youth, seniors, homeowners, as well as renters. While other neighborhoods are getting their full share of funds, Ward 2 has received only a token amount. Finally, I will be responsible enough to ask the embarrassing questions and seek the complete answers.

• Ward 3 Councillor

JOHN J. LYDON, JR., 468 Beale St. Age: 38. Occupation: Owner Funeral Home.

Answer: Many issues compete for the time of a Ward Councillor, but effectiveness can result only when one focuses on a set number of goals and seeks to pursue them. In light of this, my major goals during this past term, as well as those for this coming term, are 1) the provision of good constituent services and 2) enforcement of fiscal austerity.

The Ward Councillor is the primary point of interface between the citizen and his government. He is responsible for providing that person with prompt and effective service for his individual problem. Government has become large and more impersonal. People see themselves as having no effect upon government and believe that government does not represent their interests.

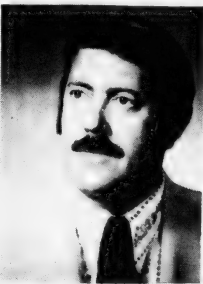

The second major focus has been in the application of the principals of fiscal austerity to the municipal budgetary process. As chairman of the Finance Committee, this has been my chief goal.

As a homeowner in the City of Quincy I can totally identify with the problems which confront the resident - homeowner. In this last round of budget sessions, I was able to lead the Council to living within the 4% tax cap. We cut literally thousands of dollars, but I believe that we produced a municipal budget that has reduced costs and maintained services.

In conclusion, it is in this vein that I once again seek re-election to the City Council seat.

GERALD V. NOBLE, candidate for Ward 3 Councillor did not respond to the questionnaire.

• Ward 4 Councillor

JAMES A. SHEETS, 926 Furnace Brook Parkway. Age: 44. Occupation: College instructor.

Answer: Campaign issues to a Ward Councillor have two dimensions. First, there are those issues or problems which relate to the City as a whole. Second, there are those problems which relate more specifically to the ward.

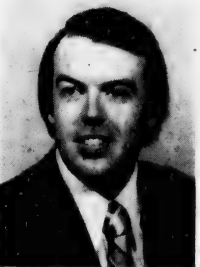

City-wide issues - Property tax burden is the major city-wide issue. As a regressive tax its greatest negative impact is on the senior citizens with fixed income. The solutions are greater control over spending and programs and expanding the taxable base through business expansion.

Ward-wide issues - Flooding is a ward-wide issue both in the Furnace and Town Brook areas. The answer to this problem is a major flood control project under the Army Corps of Engineers. A more aggressive action to secure these millions in funding must be undertaken by the City.

Security is a second major ward-wide issue. Security in home and also control of drinking and vandalism in certain areas especially at night. Stronger penalties for those involved as well as more aggressive court action.

• Ward 5 Councillor

STEVE McGRATH, 36 Bass St. Age: 26. Occupation: Attorney.

Answer: In looking forward to the next 2 years for Ward 5, I would single out as the most important issue facing the area as the rather broad one of a city government attempting to respond to the diverse needs of a community.

I think the next 2 years for Quincy will be exciting in terms of development for the City, but I believe we would be remiss in not placing equal importance on the neighborhoods and small business areas as well.

Specifically for Ward 5, there must be a continuing and even expanded commitment to the Wollaston Business Area as well as an eventual designation of Wollaston as its own target area for disbursement of Federal HUD funding.

By such a 2-pronged commitment, to the business area and to the residential neighborhood area, a solid and stable Wollaston community will be ensured.

• Ward 6 Councillor

JOANNE CONDON, 79 Botolph St. Age: 39. Occupation: Bookkeeper.

Answer: I believe that no other area of the City offers greater opportunities or challenges for its residents and Ward Councillor than Ward 6. For this reason, the need to combine open, honest and responsive representation with decisive action is the major issue in the Ward. This combination of strong, experienced leadership and active community involvement is essential to address the following major concerns:

Neighborhood Development - Ward 6 is one of the few areas in Quincy with large parcels of developable land, and critical decisions must be made regarding the nature and type of land use and development.

Neighborhood Character and Improvement - Decisive action and strong neighborhood support have enabled Ward 6 to receive the largest share of CDBG funds to help homeowners and to receive city support for new playgrounds and improved streets and sidewalks.

Flooding and Erosion Problems and Airport Noise - The City Council must continue to actively work with federal, state and local officials as well as residents to insure that action is taken to solve these problems.

Taxes - Scrutinizing the budget and taking stands against unnecessary costs is an important part of the Ward Councilor's job, if taxes are to be kept at affordable levels.

Revitalizing Norfolk Downs - After numerous meetings with merchants and residents, the process of revitalization has begun to create a more attractive shopping environment.

MICHAEL J. KELLY, 130 Standish Rd. Age: 28. Occupation: Marketing Representative.

Answer: The most important issue facing the residents of Ward Six is the failure of the present Councilor to adequately represent the best interest of its residents. In the past two years the City Council has been faced with solving vital problems which have long term impact on not only Ward Six but the entire City.

The present councilor: 1) Voted against a bond issue. This vote could have delayed the completion of North Quincy High School and possible increased property taxes. 2) Spearheaded a redevelopment plan for Norfolk Downs. A plan which the majority of residents opposed. 3) Advocated Planned Unit Development Zoning (P.U.D.) for North Quincy. However, was curiously silent when the Marina Complex Developers petitioned the City for a change to Industrial Zoning. 4) Failed to lead the battle against airplane noise.

Ward Six can no longer afford this type of representation. I pledge, as your Ward Six City Councilor, to represent the best interest of the entire ward.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

TERM: Four years, three of the six members elected every two years.

Salary: Unpaid

Job description: Duties are as described in the questions to School Committee candidates in his special voter information section.

• School Committee

Question: What do you see as the most important issues in the schools in the next two years? Comment in detail on your recommendations concerning one of these.

FRANK ANSELMO, 135 Quincy Ave. Age: 81. Occupation: Retired Superintendent, Quincy Post Office.

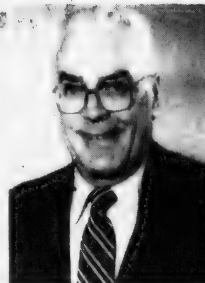

Answer: Hold a steady course. Continue to deliver good education. Delegations from all the free world come to see what we are doing!

Don't panic because of temporary adverse conditions. Human progress and development always comes at the price of hard knocks and adversity. Education is the only proven method by which humanity can solve its problems. Yes, it is the key that opens the doors to understanding, advancement, survival and the pursuit of happiness.

Society cannot pass on the torch of liberty and opportunity, from one generation to another, unless it maintains and supports a good educational system. The financial burden involved is minimal compared to the vast longterm returns, in stability, prosperity, progress and evolutionary advancement.

Can I continue to serve, as I have in the last 18 years, on the School Board?

Ask the hundreds of people that know me personally - now.

CHRISTOPHER F. KENNEDY, 27 Barham Ave. Age: 57. Occupation: Dean of Students, Northeastern University.

Answer: The most serious problem to be faced by the Quincy School Committee during the next 2 or more years will be the need to protect the quality of education in the face of declining enrollments and tightening budgets. Schools today are more important than ever to the health and stability of a city because good schools with dedicated teachers will attract civic-minded people who will help make and keep a city strong.

In addition, our children are our greatest resource because they represent our future hopes and aspirations. If I am re-elected, I shall continue my determination demonstrated during the past four years to obtain for them the finest and most efficient education which is consistent with sensible budgetary considerations. Every student in our school system deserves the maximum opportunity to realize his or her potential. It is important, then, that we continue our efforts to make certain that no child is overlooked or short changed.

PATRICIA TOLAND, 82 Cedar St. Age: 47. Occupation: Wife and mother.

Answer: Of prime importance is the election of candidates best qualified by experience, dedication and proven leadership to address today's major school issue, namely, providing quality education despite severe financial constraints.

This is the equation as we enter the Eighties - balancing quality education and sound fiscal policy. Finances are a prime concern of all governing bodies. The School Committee must reflect that concern by examining all the pieces of our economic - educational puzzle which impact so heavily on the school budget: declining enrollment, emptying schools, staff reduction (RIF), spiraling costs, and the responsibility to provide for students the best education their needs and the times require.

Sound fiscal policy dictates consolidation of the physical plant by closing schools, and consolidation of staff by reducing numbers. I have proposed a Citizen's Task Force to consider school closings.

Quality education requires excellence in staff, programs and support services. It is a cliché, however, without a mechanism for accountability. That mechanism is evaluation. We cannot guarantee quality without evaluation. It is my conviction that we must implement fair, impartial and thorough evaluation procedures throughout the school system for quality education to become a reality.

PATRICK J. CONROY, 272 Billings St. Age: 22. Occupation: Real Estate Broker/Student.

Answer: The issue facing the voters of Quincy in this year's School Committee election is leadership. The time has come to choose an aggressive leader who has the ability and determination to make the tough decisions facing the School Committee.

I am committed to quality public education. Good schools insure a strong community. However, I demand that every dollar spent, results in learning that can be demonstrated.

I care about what happens to kids in schools. I insist on a strong program of reading, writing, and speaking, started early and integrated throughout the students' careers. And I insist they be evaluated by how well they read, write, and speak. Standardized, multiple-choice tests are not a valid way to measure these skills. If you want to know how well kids have learned, ask them to read for you.

The issue is fresh, young thinking and decisive leadership. In this case, the issue is me - Patrick Conroy.

JOHN H. McDUFF, JR., 216 South St. Age: 46. Occupation: Hospital Processing Supervisor.

Answer: The two greatest problems facing our schools are falling test scores and soaring costs. We have allowed too many easy courses to replace the solid meat of a true education. We must curtail or eliminate these, returning to the basic Three Rs education which we had as children. English, mathematics, geography, and history, especially American history, should be thoroughly mastered before a student graduates. A diploma must be more than a reward for filling a seat for twelve years. I stand for daily prayer, flag salute, Bible reading, and strict discipline. Our schools must once again become the fountainhead of respect for God, family, and country. We've had enough permissiveness. We must return to morality and order. However, we cannot continue to crucify our citizens on a cross of tax increases. Good, solid education and tax cuts are mutually attainable. My candidacy is based on that belief.

term in the Mayor's chair that was marked by charges of corruption and the jailing of two high administration officials. LaRaia was defeated by Tobin in 1977.

Quinn is another veteran of Quincy's political wars who is seeking his 12th consecutive two-year term on the Council. He has served for the past two years as President of the Council.

A Blue Cross-Blue Shield executive, he has only once topped the ticket in a Council race (in 1967) but he has always managed to get just enough votes to win a seat in 11 previous races.

McCauley's service on the Council goes back to 1963, when he was elected from Ward 1. He later served on the School Committee, where he gave up a seat to join the Council two years ago.

A third at-large incumbent, Joseph E. Brett, is not seeking election to another term.

Koch is a 24-year-old newcomer to city politics, but with a well known name. His father, Richard J. Koch Sr., is executive director of the Park Department and founder of the ubiquitous Koch Clubs of Quincy.

Faherty, who is now director of corporate security for State Street South, ran for the same seat in 1977 and finished last in a strong field with 9,463.

The only ward fight for Council that promises to add excitement to the election is in Ward 2, where Kathleen O'Donnell, a Democratic State committee woman is challenging Councillor Daniel G. Raymondi.

Raymondi, despite his youth (he's 32), has one term on the School Committee and two terms on the Council behind him. Miss O'Donnell is a first time office seeker.

In other races: Three incumbents are running for School Committee -- Francis

F. Anselmo, Christopher Kennedy and Patricia Toland -- but only two of them are seeking re-election in the strict meaning of the term.

Anselmo, a retired Post Office superintendent, who was first elected to the Committee back in 1961, was defeated in 1977 but was returned to the Committee when McCauley moved on to the Council.

Also in the School Committee race are Patrick H. Conroy, an unsuccessful candidate for the City Council from Ward 6 in 1977, and John H. McDuff, a newcomer on the political scene.

Joanne Condon faces a challenge in Ward 6 from Michael J. Kelly, who lost out in the preliminary in 1977. He has the backing of Walter J. Hickey, who lost narrowly to Mrs. Condon in '77.

Leo J. Kelly is out for a fourth consecutive term in Ward 1 against David MacMillan, and John J. Lydon Jr. also is going to a fourth term in Ward 3 against Gerald V. Nobile.

James A. Sheets in Ward 4 and Stephen J. McGrath in Ward 5 both are unopposed for re-election. Sheets to a fourth term, McGrath to a second.

"No one is more respected for his knowledge of city government or his integrity than Council President JOHN QUINN."

*—John Gillis
City Clerk*

Dear Voter:

In his 22 years of public service to Quincy, Councilor at Large John J. Quinn has served in virtually every leadership capacity. Whether it be Acting Mayor, Chairman of the Finance Committee, chairman of one of the other eleven committees which John has led, or in his present capacity as President of the City Council no elected official has the experience in city government that John Quinn has...and no official is more respected.

John Quinn has sponsored, co-authored, initiated or supported more vital legislation in the Quincy City

Ground Is Broken For Biggest O'Connell Project

By TOM HENSHAW

For William S. O'Connell it was more than just another office building; it was a milestone in the brief but spectacular career of the O'Connell brothers, the builders.

"Ten years ago this month O'Connell brothers had their first groundbreaking," he told guests at the groundbreaking of the Monarch Office Building near State Street South in North Quincy.

"My brother and I went to 11 banks before we found one that would give us our first mortgage and that was only a six-family apartment house. This is our biggest project."

Monarch Office Building, a joint venture of O'Connell Brothers and the Monarch Life Insurance Co. of Springfield, is a five-story, 172,000 square foot building that will cost $11 million.

William S. Edgerly, chairman of the board of State Street Trust, also saw it as a milestone.

"This is a significant step on a path we started 10 years ago today," he told the groundbreaking ceremony. "The day after Neil Armstrong took a giant step for mankind on the moon we announced the first significant step on this path.

"Right now the State Street South complex is completely occupied with 4,000 people working in 24 companies."

William C. Giles Jr., chairman of the board of Monarch Capital Corp., parent firm of the insurance company, said the office building "reflects faith in the long range future of the South Shore."

"The current disruption of the economy is a short term thing," he said. "The future expansions around Boston will be in the Quincy and South Shore area."

Cong. Brian J. Donnelly (D-Boston) said he thought it significant that "during an economic downturn in the country business has decided to put $11 million into the future of Quincy."

"This type of cooperation among municipal, state and federal governments and the private sector will make the region viable for years to come," he said.

The building, located on the marsh between State Street South and the Montclair residential area, is expected to be ready for occupancy in a year.

Capen Circle Project Entering Final Stage

The State Department of Public Works has advertised for bids for the third and final phase of the Capens Circle reconstruction project, in Braintree near the Quincy line.

Advertising for the $976,000 contract came after a conference between Sen. Paul D. Harold (D-Quincy) and Associate Public Works Commissioner Frank D. Rodick.

Harold said he met with Rodick after examining traffic problems at the construction project.

The third phase will involve the installation of a traffic control lighting system to alleviate confusion caused by the intersection of roadways at the circle.

"I am pleased with the quick response we received after bringing this matter to Commissioner Rodick's attention," said Harold. "He told me he would get right on the problem to expedite the work, and he did so."

Rodick said bids are now being accepted for the traffic light system, and the bids will be opened at the Nov. 27 commissioner's meeting.

Renovations Completed At Fore River Clubhouse

Major renovations have been completed to the Fore River Clubhouse at a cost of $35,000.

The rest rooms have been relocated and modernized and the interior of the facility on Nevada Rd., Quincy Point, has been refurbished.

City Council Daniel G. Raymond said the renovations will enhance the safety and comfort of the estimated 40,000 people who use the clubhouse each year.

TAXPAYERS OF QUINCY

The Nurses bargaining unit at Quincy City Hospital and Quincy Public Health Dept. would like to inform the Taxpayers of Quincy about a fact that they may not be aware of, that being: The new hospital budget provided by Mayor Tobin calls for an annual increase of some $129,000 annually for new management positions.

Some of those costs involve the following: The position of Assistant Director of Personnel ($19,500 annual salary) was created at the Hospital replacing the position of Director of Personnel ($15,480 annual salary). This increase represents a 25.9% increase for the individual in this position.

The position of Director of operations of the Hospital was created at $25,000 annual salary. The individual who took this job left another ($19,000 annual salary) city job. This represents a 31.5% increase.

Yet the City of Quincy sees fit to give the Registered Professional Nurses, who are responsible for total patient care, an offer which would provide for only a 2% 1/1/80 and a 2% 4/1/80 within a contract running from 7/1/78 to 6/30/80. Apparently the Mayor has money for some City employees but not its' nursing staff.

Cerasoli Seeks Code To End Mudslinging In Political Ads

Rep. Robert A. Cerasoli (D-Quincy), who is mainly responsible for the law requiring office holders to disclose their financial standing, is mounting a new assault on unethical political advertising.

A bill, sponsored by Cerasoli and Rep. Leon J. Lombardi (R-Easton), recently was signed by Gov. King setting up a commission to consider establishment of ethical guidelines for political ads.

"I hope the commission will be appointed very soon," said Cerasoli. "I sent a letter to the Speaker asking him to appoint me chairman."

The special commission would consist of three senators, six state reps, two newspaper editors and the general managers or executive officers of a television and a radio station.

"The thrust of the commission's study is not to restrict freedom of speech or the press in any way," said Cerasoli. "Our thrust is to find out the feelings of various people on political advertising. There is definitely room to do something."

He cited the race for the Democratic nomination for state treasurer last year between Robert Q. Crane and Lawrence DiCura as a dirty campaign known for its mudslinging.

Cerasoli also indicated that he also was still burning from some of the charges leveled against him in his bid for re-election in the Quincy-Weymouth district last tall.

"It would be nice if the public could be protected from the irresponsible statements of some candidates," he said, "and if the candidates could be protected from themselves."

Cerasoli said he would like to see candidates sign a code agreeing to stick to the issues and not vilify their opponents at the time they pick up their nomination papers.

"Then we could have a third party to look over their ads and see if they violate the pledges," he said. "It's entirely voluntary. There would be no punishment, only that imposed by the voters for the pick up their nomination papers. "Then we could have a third party to look over their ads and see if they violate the pledges," he said. "It's entirely voluntary. There would be no punishment, only that imposed by the voters for the candidate's unethical conduct."

Cerasoli said if he were named to the commission "I'd move around the state to get testimony from newspapers and public officials and candidates on where they think the problems come from and how they would work together to eliminate them."

"It will be interesting to see how willing the newspapers are to work with the commission on setting up voluntary standards," he said, noting that some papers unilaterally will not run first time controversial ads in the 72 hours preceding election.

In putting his bill together, Cerasoli sent out questionnaires to various members of the media, sampling their feelings on his proposed ethics in advertising commission.

He said he found that 30 per cent were willing to adopt a voluntary set of ethics for political advertising. 7 per cent were not and 40 per cent wanted to look over the standards before making a decision.

He said 66 per cent screen the political advertising copy sent to them and demand some sort of verification of the statements made in the ads.

To A Proud City: A Message from FRANK ANSELMO Candidate for School Committee

We've come a long way from the days at Valley Forge! Then the question was, "Where is the money coming from?"

How many emergencies like war, recessions or depressions have these United States experienced and still survived while the question persisted, "Where is the money coming from?"

Yes, you guessed it, always from the people. But the people, from one generation to the next, always advanced forward and upward, in spite of temporary reverses.

The freedom-loving people of this country, while fighting for survival, always had a yearning that their children should fare better than they did. That was their reward. After all, they could not take the fruit of their labor with them in their final departure. Be you rich, poor, industrialist, banker, politician or teacher, you all look forward to a better tomorrow.

The same hope resides in the City of Quincy, a proud city, a very good city, presently undergoing a temporary economic stress.

Five thousand city employees have, or are looking for, a pay raise so that they may, in part, keep up with a skyrocketing inflation that has gone up over 20% in the last two years and continues, even now, at a higher percentage.

Are these city workers, including teachers, any different than factory workers, farmers, politicians, and professionals? They, too, must keep up with the cost of living. Napoleon said, "An army travels on its belly." That applies to all workers and teachers.

Are conditions that bad? But we have gone many times through worse. Look at conditions throughout the country and in the Boston region: average department store sales up 7.2%, factory workers up 7.4%, construction activity up 6.9%, income of average factory worker $13,894. (U.S. News & World Report, October 29, 1979 — pg. 71)

Our politicians say that Quincy is a proud city, and it should be, but not only because of its history. One of many reasons for this pride is that it has an outstanding educational system. Contrary to a few snipers who are living in the dead past, it is a fact that educators from Brazil, Egypt, Ireland, Japan, Korea, Malawi, Mauretania, Nigeria, South Africa and Moscow USSR, have come to see what we are doing; others will come.

The School Department with its teachers and its School Committee are highly responsible and accountable. This was the only department that reduced its budget by 1% over the previous year, in spite of the runaway inflation. Also, over $11,000,000 went directly into the City Treasury, as reimbursement for its school system, thus reducing the gross budget from $32,000,000 to a net of $21,000,000.

Now it is the time of the year when political promises fall like autumn leaves. It is also the time when voters must THINK. They must evaluate unrealistic promises against proven accomplishments.

On the School Committee FRANK ANSELMO has already given you 18 years of dedicated, stainless service. He sees education for the children of Quincy as the KEY that opens the doors of understanding, advancement, survival and the pursuit of happiness. Society cannot pass on the torch of liberty and opportunity, from one generation to the next, unless it maintains and supports a good educational system.

FRANK ANSELMO, the old warhorse, strong of spirit and strong of heart, will continue his dedicated service for the benefit of your school children and the proud city of Quincy.

McDonough, Norton Suffolk Alumni Officers

Two Quincy residents were recently elected officers in two Suffolk University alumni associations.

Atty. Joseph P. McDonough of 1372 Hancock St., Quincy Center was elected clerk of the Law Alumni Association, while John J. Norton of 44 Utica St., Adams Shore, was elected to the board of directors of the General Alumni Association.

McDonough, who is also currently serving as a member of the Law Alumni Association's board of directors, received his juris doctor degree in 1940 from Suffolk Law School. He is a member of the Quincy Bar Assoc., Norfolk Bar Assoc., Mass. Academy of Trial Lawyers and the American Trial Lawyers Assoc. He is also president of the St. Mary's Holy Name Society.

Norton, who received a bachelor of science degree with honors from Suffolk in 1955, is retired from his job as supervising inspector with the Mass. Division of Standards, Weights and Measures.

He is a past commander of the George F. Bryan VFW Post, a past president of the Suffolk University General Alumni Association and a retired Lt. Col. in the U.S. Army Reserve.

He and his wife, the former Anna Mae Baker, have six children.

Norton will serve a three-year term on the board of directors.

Kennedy Assails School Writing Failure

Christopher F. Kennedy has promised that if he is elected to a second four-year term on the School Committee "I shall continue my efforts to see that all the students in Quincy schools are encouraged, and trained to become better writers."

Kennedy told a gathering at the home of Janet and Howard Crowley of 139 Highland Ave., Wollaston, that he had addressed the problem during his first term, particularly the "lack of strong emphasis on written communication."

"We hear loud complaints from across the nation about today's high school graduates being unable to write coherent, grammatical sentences and paragraphs," he said.

Cerasoli Speaker At Energy Meeting

Rep. Robert A. Cerasoli (D-

"The reduction of all college board and other standardized tests, including English composition, to multiple choice answers has downgraded the importance of writing and did much to bring about the present situation."

"Writing has always been assisted by reading; the form, style and vocabulary of a book or magazine article makes an impression on the reader who then, the more he reads, has a wider and stronger base for his writing."

"Television is now a firm part of our lives and our children have known no other. Unfortunately, it is much more comfortable to watch the TV screen than to digest what is on the printed page; reading, and ultimately writing, suffer."

Quincy) will be a guest speaker Wednesday, Nov. 7 at 12 noon at a meeting of the Inter-Agency Council of the South Shore at the California Restaurant, 79 Parkway.

Cerasoli, who is a member of the Legislative Energy Caucus, will speak on current legislation on the state and federal levels aimed at funding the Crisis Intervention Program.

Also on the speaking program are:

Rosemary Wahlberg, executive director of Quincy Community Action; Leonard DeLoe, director of the South Shore Community Service Area for the State Department of Public Welfare.

Robert Cosgrove, director of the Community Action energy program, and Robert Trankis of the Mayor's Office of Energy Conservation.

6 Residents Enter Air Force

Six Quincy residents recently entered the Air Force Delayed Enlistment Program, according to Technical Sergeant Warren Sutton, Air Force Recruiter in Quincy.

They are:

Diane Russell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Russell, of 28 Rawson Rd.; Christine Miller, daughter of Mrs. Marion Miller, of 13 Quincy St.; Robert Sweeney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sweeney, of 49 Ames St.; Raymond Stuart, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Stuart, of 117 Independence Ave.; Ronald Holland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Holland, of 105 Standish Ave.; and Robert Johnson Jr., son of Mrs. Robert Johnson, of 110 Bunker Hill Ln.

Pink coral, also called Angel skin, is often harder to find than most other kinds. It is rare and delicate. Most coral used for making jewelry is collected by dredging, but pink coral beds, flourishing at a depth of 1,200 feet in a limestone bed, often amidst strong currents, would be destroyed by the dredging process. As a result, enterprising coral companies send down two-man subs to mine the precious pink stuff and leave growing beds intact and flourishing.

County Emergency Shelter For Adolescents Gets Initial Approval

James J. Collins, Chairman, Norfolk County Commissioners, announces that a grant filed with the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, calling for the establishment of an Emergency Shelter to be located in the southeast section of the county, has received initial approval.

The grant will provide $60,000 in start-up funds for this project to be expended over a six month period beginning Jan. 1, 1980.

The Emergency Shelter will provide immediate short-term housing and supportive services to adolescents in need of emergency placement. The facility will be a community-based residence capable of serving eight clients at a given time for one to 45 days with a yearly capacity of 60-70 adolescents. The project will operate on a 24-hour per day, 7 day-a-week basis as a licensed emergency shelter.

Adolescents ages 13-17 are eligible for residential services when a reasonable cause determination has been made by a Juvenile Justice or state or community social service agency after consultation with program staff. Supportive services will also be available for their families. The project will serve the Greater South Shore, Norfolk County area.

The Emergency Shelter is designed to provide a neutral environment which is conducive to the provision of emergency transitional services to adolescents and their families. Staff will include child care workers with experience and training in the following areas: child care, short-term diagnosis and treatment, crisis intervention, objectivity, separation trauma, familial reactions and interactions with emergency placements and preparational planning with an adolescent and his/her family for return home or transfer to a long-range alternative setting.

Direct service personnel will consist of a project manager, clinical director, six counselors including two over-night staff, educational coordinator and recreational coordinator. The executive director, bookkeeper, secretary, lawyer and accountant of Survival, Inc. will provide supervision and direct assistance. A psychiatrist and a psychologist will be hired as consultants.

Solar Grant Deadline Extended To Dec. 1

The deadline for consumers to apply for a $400 cash federal grant for solar hot water systems has been extended to Dec. 1, according to Sen. Paul D. Harold (D-Quincy).

The grants, distributed on a first come, first served basis, had been scheduled to end Sept. 30.

Some 1,375 grants have been made available through the State Energy Office and about 700 are still available, Harold said.

The program provides cash rebates of $400 to homeowners who install solar hot water heating systems approved by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), which funds the grant program.

Solar hot water systems cost about $2,700, according to Energy Office figures, but with the grant, a federal solar tax credit, and the proposed state solar tax credit now pending in the legislature, the actual cost could be cut to about $1,000.

To be eligible, the homeowner must install the HUD-approved system in a single-family home and must use it for water heating only.

Further information may be obtained from the Energy Office, Room 849, 73 Tremont St., Boston 02108, or by calling toll-free 1-800-922-8265.

QHA Seeks Building Permit

Safford St. Dispute Court Hearing On Nov. 5

A Nov. 5 court date has been set in the Quincy Housing Authority's suit seeking a building permit for a proposed home for mentally retarded adults on Safford St., Wollaston.

The QHA's suit seeks to force city Building Inspector Allan MacDonald to grant the permit, which he has so far denied.

MacDonald contends that a 1977 Zoning Board of Appeals prohibited any use of the 216 Safford St. site except as a two-family home. Members of the authority claim that no such restriction exists, however.

In addition, according to QHA administrator, Clement O'Brien, City Solicitor Robert Fleming is prepared to testify in support of the long-delayed building permit.

MacDonald's denial of the permit has already caused the QHA to rescind its approval of a contract for renovations to the former nursing home.

A $94,000 contract for the work was awarded in June to Ecology Systems, Inc. of Boston. But, the authority rescinded that agreement at its Oct. 17 meeting after being advised by Ecology Systems that prices quoted in its original bid could no longer be in effect because of the long delay.

The Nov. 5 hearing will be before Judge Paul Rutledge of Norfolk Superior Court of Dedham.

In other business, the authority voted to appoint a new laborer to fill a vacancy created by a recent retirement.

Henry Simmons, of 580 Willard St., West Quincy, was selected from among candidates on a four-month old eligibility list, created to fill a July opening. According to law, the list is still valid until six months after it is first drawn up, said O'Brien.

Simmons was runner-up for that July vacancy, O'Brien said.

For the most recent laborer's opening, he added, "Simmons' qualifications made him the most attractive candidate."

Simmons, who is black, had not yet notified the authority of his intention to accept the post, O'Brien said Monday.

If he were to accept, he would become the first black among about 30 QHA employees.

The authority also held a brief executive session to discuss the possible purchase of real estate. The session was held with representatives of the Boston architecture firm of Phineas Alpers, which has been chosen to design 28 units of low-income housing for large families. The 28 units will probably be scattered at several sites in the city.

The authority instructed the architects on the selection of possible sites, O'Brien said.

MBTA Officials To Meet

On Beefing Up Parking Security

MBTA officials will again meet with representatives of the Allright Boston Parking company to beef up security procedures at the Wollaston and North Quincy MBTA stations, announces State Senator Paul D. Harold.

The decision for a further meeting came at the request of Senator Harold, who cited incidents of vandalism and thefts from cars parked at the Wollaston and North Quincy stations.

"Commuters using these facilities, and paying to park their cars there, have a right to expect at least a reasonable degree of security," Harold said.

Under Allright's lease agreement with the MBTA, the company is to provide security patrols in the parking lots.

In a letter to Harold, MBTA Chairman Robert L. Foster said that while the agreement between the MBTA and the City of Quincy for the city to provide police patrols at the Quincy Center station should improve conditions there, the Wollaston and North Quincy facilities do still need improvement.

Chairman Foster said he will arrange a meeting with Allright representatives to discuss improved security procedures.

Squantum Junior Group

To Participate In Choir Festival

Members of the junior choir of the First Church of Squantum will be participating in the 15th annual Choir Festival Sunday at 4 p.m. at Trinity Church, Copley Square, Boston.

Mary Ruth Scott is director of the junior choir.

The "Service of Ecumenical Song", uniting 450 voices, is being presented by the Massachusetts Council of Churches.

Lorayne M. Kuebele, is founder-director of the council. The junior choirs will be directed by Dr. Raymond Kelton.

Wollaston Park Assn. Opposes Wendell Ave. Abandonment

The Wollaston Park Association has voted to oppose the abandonment of a section of Wendell Ave., Wollaston, which is sought by Eastern Nazarene College to aid traffic flow and campus security.

The association also voted to inform the Mayor and the City Council of members' strong feelings that they must show restraint and not increase the tax burden on Quincy citizens.

Benjamin Rudner was re-elected president. Thomas F. Dowd, vice president, and Dorothy C. Kelly, secretary-treasurer at the association's 23rd annual meeting at Walsh's Restaurant.

Directors are Harold S.

Crowley Jr., Leonard C. Delaney, Madeline Falceitta, Dominic Falceitta, Anna H. Lucy, William M. Macdonald and Eleanor Sharkey.

The association is joining with the Quincy Citizens Association in sponsoring a candidates' night at the Woodward School for Girls tomorrow (Thursday) at 7:45 p.m.

City Council Approves Spruce St. Abandonment

The City Council Monday night approved the abandonment of part of Spruce St. in North Quincy to help make way for a $4.5 million, four-story office building adjacent to State Street South.

Planning Director James Lydon said the section is "the paper street" that could never serve a public purpose since it is a dead end that has no use as a connector.

He said the proposed building would bring $211,750 in taxes to the city.

Sasaki Report:

$600,000 Plan To Upgrade Wollaston Center

By TOM HENSHAW

The long-awaited report by Sasaki Associates on the revitalization of the Wollaston Business District was scheduled to be presented to the Wollaston community last night (Wednesday) at the Wollaston Methodist Church.

Its recommendations, which lean heavily to traffic, parking and access improvements along with beautification, would be accomplished over a period of 10-15 years in three phases, the first two of which would cost up to $600,000.

The most notable features of the Sasaki plan would be:

- Gateways at the entrances to the Beale St. shopping area at Hancock and Chapman Sts. with an overhead sign proclaiming it to be "Wollaston Center."
- Planting of 43 trees along Hancock St. from Elm Ave. to Woodbine St. and the planting of other trees in scattered locations on side streets west of Hancock St.
- Creation of more than 70 new parking spaces for customers behind the Beale St. shops, a project that would include the taking of two homes near Cushing St.

(City Councillor Stephen J. McGrath hastened to point out that any land-taking would depend upon the availability of funding and would not be done without cooperation of the homeowners.)

- A new "urban park" on the site of the Hancock Bank parking lot to create an attractive focal point for the district where people can relax. It depends on acquisition of a home on Chapman St.

- Improvement of the facades of stores on Hancock St., essentially restoring them to their original early 20th Century condition with coordinated color schemes, awnings and graphics.

- A pedestrian path from the elderly housing on Clay St. to Chapman St. and a similar path diagonally across the MBTA parking lot from the station to the shopping area.

- Six bus shelters on Hancock St., utilizing a special design that provides income through advertising, and community gardens behind the Housing Authority's Tobin Towers on Clay St.

- Among the long range plans is redevelopment of the vacant parcel of land at the corner of Hancock and Beach Sts. as a new 3,000 square foot, one-story commercial building.

The Phase I improvements should take place in 1980; Phase II between 1980 and 1983; and Phase III after 1983, according to the plan, which was developed over the past year.

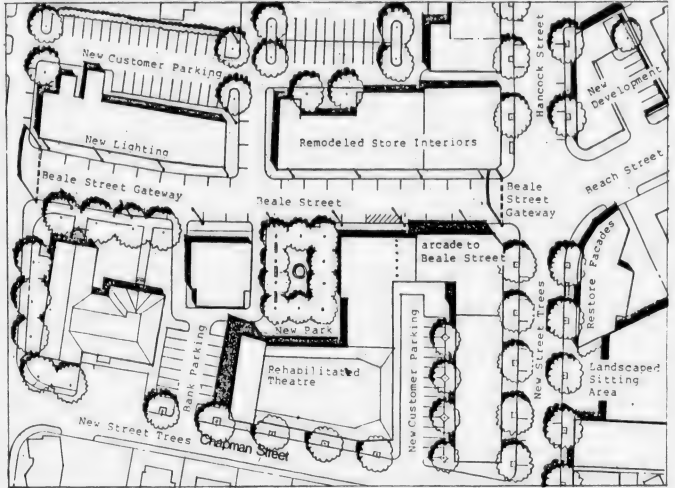

To improve Wollaston as a place to shop requires a relatively modest investment in terms of capital improvements," said the report. "The highest priority improvement is in the management of Wollaston as a total business community."

It lays most of the responsibility for carrying out the plan at the feet of local businessmen, property owners and residents.

"The need for a local organization providing leadership is essential in the process of business revitalization which is a long-term effort requiring continuity of interest," said the report.

Members of the business association, property owners and local residents who have long-term interests must work with city officials over a period of several years.

The report noted that considerable funding for the projects could come from federal and state funds since the emphasis now is on revitalization of older urban communities.

Also recommended is establishment of the post of executive director "providing leadership for Wollaston and North Quincy... funded for a minimum of two to three years."

Elected and appointed officials of the city of Quincy, as well as representatives of the Wollaston community have shown their commitment to working together by virtue of the existence of this study," said the report.

"The city's future role in the revitalization strategy will be based on a continuation of this commitment and will include specific functions:

- "Assistance to the local community in the form of technical staff time.
- "Funding of public area improvements through programs for which the city has administrative responsibility.

- "Exercise of administrative and legal powers such as zoning, code enforcement, eminent domain, police protections and parking regulations enforcement."

The report listed a number of possible sources of state and federal funding for the recommended projects.

TO ALL QUINCY PARENTS

Quincy Education Association members are deeply concerned about lack of progress at the bargaining table. Additional time is one of the major issues between the two parties.

Quincy Education Association members provide voluntary services at no cost to the city which help the schools to function in a smooth and efficient way. These are services above and beyond the Contract hours and outside the scope of classroom teaching.

To dramatize how many free hours are given, members reluctantly have voted the following:

PHASE I: (Effective October 1)

No member shall engage in any evening or week-end activities which would require that member to return to school and take time away from the member's own family.

PHASE II: (Effective November 1)

1. No additional field trips will be scheduled. Any field trips from Nov. 1 on shall be suspended until a settlement is reached. Any teacher who has collected money for trips after Nov. 1 shall return the money to the students, except those few instances where a deposit or payment already made would be forfeited.
2. Q.E.A. will consider the possibility of no longer volunteering as bus monitors before and after school hours.
3. No member shall handle any money (e.g. insurance, lunch, picture, football ticket sales, sports, Sal. Army, etc.).
4. All Q.E.A. members shall insist on full duty free lunch period.
5. Teachers will not meet or make calls to parents outside of the regular school hours.
6. Teachers will no longer provide any extra help for students beyond that required by the contract.
7. To ensure that students are provided with maximum safety, teachers will no longer cover another class, or any portion of another class, in addition to their own when that teacher is required to be elsewhere. (e.g. core, P.P.S., budget session, P.A.G., administrative meeting, etc.)
8. No teacher shall supervise detention.
9. No member shall provide supervision of any school activity outside contract hours. (e.g. dances, athletic contests, musical plays, rallies, clubs, Student Government meetings, etc.) It is understood that physical education teachers must give forty hours after the contracted day. It is recommended that physical education teachers give these hours after the contract is settled.
10. No Q.E.A. member, at any level, shall write any recommendations (exclusive of counselors) (e.g. lab. school, college, Q.J.D., job, etc.)
11. No Quincy High School or VocTech member shall participate in self-evaluation reports outside of contract hours.

PHASE III: ????????????????

Quincy Education Association members are deeply committed to your children, but please understand that teachers have few legal avenues through which to express their frustrations with lack of progress at the bargaining table. Each motion was carefully weighed to make sure that on-going classroom programs would not be adversely affected.

The Superintendent and School Committee members are aware of our votes and it is their responsibility to make certain that, effective November 1, other personnel provide the services that until now we have so freely given.

Industrial Development Seminar Sessions To Begin Nov. 6

A seminar on the "Principles of Industrial Development" will be conducted in the South Shore Bank Board of Director's room beginning Tuesday, Nov. 6, at 7:30 p.m.

The sessions, to be held each of the four Tuesdays in November, are being conducted by the Norfolk County Development Council and South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

All basic aspects of industrial development will be included in the seminar which is free of charge.

Ronald E. Zooleck, executive vice president of the Chamber, said, "All selectmen, planning boards and industrial development commissions from all 28 county communities have been invited."

John C. Nourse, executive director of the Development Council, said, "The seminar is designed to further the education of the community leader so that he or she will be better equipped to handle economic development responsibilities and improve the economic base of Norfolk County."

Features will include an audio/visual aid program, produced by the American Industrial Development Council, and guest speakers.

Seating is limited and those interested in attending should respond as early as possible.

Details are available from the South Shore Chamber of Commerce or the Norfolk County Development Council.

Presidents Host Powerhouse Brockton

There were no nightmares last week for the Quincy football team. In fact, there were only pleasant dreams as the Presidents turned in their best effort of the season at Weymouth.

Coach Tom Fitzgerald is hoping for more of the same Saturday at Veterans Memorial Stadium where Quincy hosts undefeated Brockton at 2 p.m. in a game which will go a long way toward deciding the Suburban League championship.

Quincy takes a 5-1-1 record (4-1 in the league) into the big game following an impressive 28-0 victory over Weymouth North last Saturday at Weymouth's Legion Field.

Brockton's powerhouse is 7-0 (5-0 in the league). The Boxers have rolled over Dedham, 20-0; North Quincy, 16-0; Brookline, 35-6; Newton North, 27-7; Weymouth South, 33-0; Cambridge Rindge & Latin, 41-12, and previously unbeaten Loominster last week, 37-32.

"Brockton is awesome and we needed a game like this to give us confidence," Fitzgerald said. "We put everything together and it was our best game. It was a good one for us going into the Brockton game."

Quincy was without the services of starting halfback Ed Iodice but Dan Goldrick, who missed the New Bedford game, was back and Scott Richardson returned after five weeks and their return helped ease the loss of Iodice.

Tommy Brennan added 85 yards rushing, giving him 860 yards in seven games, but he was given a lot of help from Goldrick, who ran for 60 yards and scored twice in addition to blocking well; Richardson, who only gained 35 yards but picked up some big first downs and scored a TD, and quarterback Dave Austin, who had his best day, running well and doing some excellent passing.

"They all played outstanding Defensive coaches Bill Maver and Joe Goguen couldn't say enough for Charlie McCall, who was not only outstanding on defense but on offense as he caught three passes including one for a touchdown. He also set one up with an unbelievable catch. They also had good words again for Lou Matthews, who had six tackles. "It is hard to say whether Pettinelli, filling in for Austin, hit Goldrick with an 11-yard scoring pass. Pettinelli kicked the points after those two scores.

Fitzgerald became a grandfather last week for the first time and he thanked the players for a "nice present."

Sports

games and our offensive line did a great job clearing the way for them," Fitzgerald said. "And the defense was superb as usual."

Asst. Coach Peter Cella had words of praise for big Fran Duggan "for another all-McCall or Matthews is our best defensive player," Maver said.

Also singled out for their defensive efforts were Walter Kilgallon, ends Quinlan and Ed Mackey, Bill Murray, who had eight tackles and two of Quincy's sacks, Chris Chevalier, Jim McNeil and John Kavanaugh.

Matthews also had two sacks. Quincy rushed for 231 yards and added 104 yards with seven for 13 through the air.

After a scoreless first period Quincy scored in the second quarter on a 22-yard pass from Austin to McCall and Ron Pettinelli kicked the first of his four extra points.

In the third period Quincy recovered a fumble on the Weymouth 26 and Richardson scored from the two. Pettinelli adding the point.

In the last period Goldrick scored from the one after Quincy had driven 87 yards in 13 plays, and on the final play of the game

Palmer Bows To Durgin, 21-7

Durgin Park rolled by defending champion Palmer Pub, 21-7, in a South Shore Roller Hockey Association game at DiMarzio's Rink. Durgin Park is undefeated. Mike Bondarick scored six goals for the winners to hold his league scoring lead with 30 goals. Goalie Jim Buchanan was outstanding, turning aside many good shots by the former champs. Buchanan has the best average in the league, yielding an average of 3.29 goals a game. Tom Ward scored four goals and set up five others. Steve Paladis had four goals for the Pub.

Defenceman Don Murphy turned in an outstanding performance with four goals and a top defensive effort, holding off a possible six goals with blocked shots and saving two goals when the goalie was caught out of position as Dorchester defeated Cambridge, 9-4, for its first win. Mark Fitzpatrick and Gerry Hughes also played well, each assisting twice on goals by Murphy. Dave Gaspa had three goals for Cambridge.

Dorchester's Sulmac Indians, inspired by a seven-goal performance by ace Jim Jmanez, and standout jobs by goalie Dennis Collins and defencemen Bob Tracy, Jim Sullivan and Brian Lee, overpowered the Fishermen of Harvey's Wharf, 15-7. John Lyons scored twice for the losers.

South Boston's Minutemen remained undefeated with a 16-7 win over Savin Hill as Paul Ballou scored five goals in a penalty-filled contest.

A Week Of Mixed Emotions For North

Last week was one of mixed emotions for North Quincy soccer coach Paul Bregoli.

On Tuesday his young Raiders avenged what Bregoli called a "humiliation" when they edged Cambridge Rindge and Latin, 3-2, for their third win.

Then on Friday they lost to undefeated Suburban League leader Brockton, 7-1, and Bregoli bitterly criticized the actions of the Brockton coach.

"We were humiliated earlier in the season at Cambridge, they laughed at us, both the coach and the players," Bregoli said. "Our kids remembered well and wanted this game badly."

"We have been looking much better lately in practice and different graduates like Sean Jago and Steve Miller have been coming down to scrimmage against us and it is paying off. It is going to take time and a big effort to put our program back on its feet and everyone seems to be willing to do his part."

Cambridge jumped out to a quick lead and made it 2-0 with a penalty kick on which goalie Paul Mallory just missed making the save on.

North was a different club after a halftime talk by Bregoli and the Raiders scored on a penalty kick by sophomore Tri-Capt. Bill Bradley, his sixth goal.

North tied the score late in the third period when junior fullback Paul Gill boomed a 50-yard shot

The fourth period was all North and, following some shots that barely missed, the Raiders scored the winner with six minutes left on a header by Bob Biagini.

At one time Bregoli had five sophomores, Bradley, Rich Palma, Steve Sacchetti, John Keenan and Charlie Spiropoulos, in the lineup at one time.

Bregoli had good words in particular for Keenan and Sacchetti, two sophs up from the jayvees, and also praised Chris Dunn, Tim Burke, Gill and Spiropoulos.

North gave Brockton's powerhouse a game for three periods, trailing, 2-0, at halftime and 4-1 after three quarters.

Ed Ahearn scored North's goal from 25 yards out, beating the startled Brockton goalie, who had allowed only four goals previously. Tri-Capt. Joey Flynn assisted.

"I was quite upset with the Brockton coach, who left his starting team in there right up to the end," Bregoli said. "It was obvious he was just trying to build up stats for his players at our expense. I intend to go to his athletic director about his totally unprofessional behavior."

The Raiders today play at Brookline and Friday will be home to Norwell in the final game of the season.

Raiderettes Edge Cambridge, 1-0

The North Quincy girls' soccer team turned in one of its better games last week to edge Cambridge, Rindge & Latin, 1-0, in a Suburban League game for its fifth win of the season.

Coach Brian Milley's Raiderettes, 5-7-2, will be home to Brookline today (Thursday) at 3:30 at O'Rourke Field.

with another Susan Cahill having an assist.

Lisa Cavanaugh and Karyn Smith, dividing the goaltenders' chores, had many excellent saves in preserving the shutout.

Friday the Raiderettes made another excellent showing but were blanked by a powerful Brockton team, 3-0.

Elaine Robertson, Lisa Welbey and Cavanaugh turned in outstanding performances.

Mite A's Over Weymouth, 5-1

Quincy's Mite A hockey team defeated Weymouth, 5-1, with Mike Toland scoring twice and Timmy Mann, Brian Zimmerman and Ralph Richardson once each.

Matt Collins had two assists and Mark Dwyer, Mann, Zimmerman and Toland once each. Scott Cunningham and Joe Fasano stood out in goal.

SUN INCREASES AGING PROCESS

True, sun can make you beautiful in the summer. But too much of it over too long a period of time can make you old-looking before your time. Scientific studies back this fact.

Over the years, sun-exposed skin gets thinner and darker. The elastic fibers that give the skin its normal flexibility increase in number, but they lose their snap so that sagging begins. Blistches of melanin - large freckles - may form. And this can happen to people who never get a real suntan.

As one dermatologist dramatizes it: Take two identical twins. One of whom spends most of his time indoors, the other a sun buff. After the age of 35, the tanner will appear to age faster than the paleface, and by the time they're both 65, the tanned twin will look like the other's older brother. So, if you do plan to sunbathe, think about doing it in moderation. No sense in getting older faster than you have to.

North Quincy 21, Brookline 8 Graham Ready As Raiders Face Weymouth

By TOM SULLIVAN

The North Quincy football team unleashed a formidable new weapon last week as the Raiders turned in one of their best performances of the year.

And, with Capt. Leo Graham due back this week after a two-week absence, future foes Weymouth South, Catholic Memorial and Quincy had better be on their guard.

Rick Anderson, who had been used almost exclusively on defense until two weeks ago, when he filled in for the injured Graham at Waltham, came into his own last Saturday at Veterans Memorial Stadium when he rushed for 117 yards, scored a touchdown and played another outstanding game on defense to lead North to an impressive 21-8 win over a strong Brookline team.

With Graham expected back to join Anderson, the Raiders, barring a letdown, should get by Weymouth South Saturday when they clash at 2 p.m. at Weymouth South's field.

Weymouth hasn't had a win since its opener when it defeated Hingham, 8-0. The Wildcats have lost to Quincy, 32-6; Brookline, 8-0; Brockton, 33-0; Newton North, 20-0; and Waltham, 28-6.

Anderson, who has good size, continually bullied his way for extra yardage, twisting and turning away from Brookline's defenders.

"Rick really gave us a boost today," Coach Dave Burke said. "I hadn't used him much at all on offense until Graham was hurt and he filled in for Leo at Waltham, doing some pretty good running. But today he really found himself and did a remarkable job.

"Rick has good endurance but we really didn't think he was that strong. He kept himself in good condition during the summer, lifting weights and running a lot. He gives our offense a terrific boost and I'm much more optimistic about our last three games now."

Bob McCormick returned after missing the Waltham game and he ran well along with Pat Carroll and Bill Dailey. With Graham's return the Raiders (3-4) will have a really strong running game the rest of the way. Quarterback Jack Brown again turned in an excellent game.

The offensive line did a great job against the bigger Brookline frontiers and opened some big holes.

Offensive coach George Liset praised Bill Feeney for his fine blocking and also had good words for Ed Miller, Jack Leone, Dave Penzo, John Buckley, Jim Dodd, Lou DiPietro and John McNamara.

Defensively the Raiders were at their best, blanking a team which took a 4-2 record into the game and had scored 74 points in its previous two games, until the subs took over late in the game.

"Chris Petrillo was outstanding as always, and John Gorczyca, Dave Howley, Paul O'Sullivan, Glen Ross and Anderson also were just great," Asst. Coach Jack Raymer said.

Asst. Ken McPhee had good word's for the secondary, which continually covered Brookline's receivers and made quarterback Joe McMahon run instead of passing. He singled out Jim Nolan, Bill Cook and Tony Camillo for outstanding efforts. The Raiders sacked McMahon four times.

Brookline moved well after taking the opening kickoff and went all the way to North's 32 before being halted. The Raiders were stopped by a pass interception on North's 45 but again North held and Dave Ewanowski punted to the Raider nine.

Anderson carried twice for 14 yards and Carroll for four to the 25 following a delay of game penalty and Anderson raced 17 yards to the 42.

Brookline got a good chance when a North punt was blocked but the Raiders' Camillo fell on a fumble on his 14. North then drove 86 yards in eight plays to score.

On three successive plays McCormick went for 21 yards. Dailey 15 and Anderson 17 to move to the Brookline 26. North was penalized 15 yards for holding but Brown threw a screen pass to Anderson, who went around left end all the way for a 38-yard scoring play. Leone, who is nine for nine on point conversions, kicked the point. It was a field goal-length kick as North had been penalized 15 yards on his first one.

The third period was scoreless. Feeney stopping one Brookline drive with a fumble recovery on the Raider 33 and from there North staged another relentless drive, clicking off five first downs and early in the final period Brown passed to Leone from the six, Leone making a great catch in the end zone. He again kicked the point.

Petrillo set up the final Raider score when he intercepted a pass on his 40 and returned it to Brookline's 34. Anderson and Carroll brought the ball down to the one and Carroll scored. Again it was Leone kicking the point, giving him nine points on the day and 30 for the season.

McMahon broke loose around left end against the North reserves and went 33 yards for the only Brookline score, then passed to Kevin Heffernan for the two points.

Thanks to Anderson's great running, North had 227 net yards on the ground to 85 for Brookline. As usual, the Raiders made good use of their passes. Brown completing two of four, both for touchdowns, while McMahon hit on six of 11 for 51 yards for Brookline. North had 14 first downs to Brookline's eight.

Panthers Face Sailors, Elks Meet Apaches

By JIM NABSTEDT

The Quincy Youth Football League moves into the semi-finals of the playoffs Sunday when the Panthers face the Sailors at noon and the Elks meet the Apaches at 1:30 at Veterans Memorial Stadium. The winners will clash for the league championship the following Sunday.

The respective division champions, unbeaten Panthers (5-0), Southern winner, and the Apaches (4-1), the Northern titleist, played to a 14-14 tie last Sunday.

Eddie Page scored on a two-yard plunge and Jimmy McNamara on a five-yard run for the Apaches and Mike Gidd added a two-point conversion.

For the Panthers Kevin Cabez threw a 50-yard strike to Bob Glidden for one touchdown and Bob Burns scored from the two. Burns also added the tying points.

Rick Reardon had four sacks for the Apaches and Jim McCarthy, Bill Campbell, McNamara, John McGrath, Gino Buccella, Gill and Kevin Mahoney played outstanding games for the Apaches, while Mark Lamie, Chuck Jaehnig, Chris Shaughnessy, Bill Chaison, Rich Pettinelli, Jim Kelly, Tom Travers and Kevin Cameron stood out for the Panthers.

The Sailors ousted the Raiders, 8-6, as Pat MacDonald scored on a five-yard run and Jack Burke added the winning conversion. Dave Norton passed to Ernie Abreu for 56 yards and the Raiders' touchdown.

For the Sailors Gerard Coughlin had a fine 30-yard pass reception. Billy Doherty passed well and all the Sailors, who were winless going into the game, were praised by their coach for keeping their spirits up and working hard to advance to the semi-finals.

Bernie Waisn, Donald Norton and John Armstrong played well for the Raiders.

The Elks eliminated the winless Manets, 28-12, with Paul Kenney racing 45 yards for the Elks' first touchdown and also scoring the second on an 11-yard pass from Austin O'Malley. O'Malley passed to John Segalla for the conversion. Billy Marston scored on a 25-yard punt return and O'Malley passed to Jack O'Callahan for the points. Mike Ross ran 37 yards for final Elks' score.

For the Manets Sean Glynn scored from the three and Billy Stanley swept end for 20 yards and the second touchdown.

Bulldogs Nip South Boston, 14-6

The first-year Quincy Bulldogs, continued to be the surprises of the Boston Senior Park Football League as they averaged an earlier one-point loss last Friday topping the defending champion South Boston Chippewas, 14-6, at the East Boston Stadium, Quincy's home field.

The Bulldogs (5-2) play Eddie's Giants Friday night at 7:30 at Casey Town Field, Dorchester, and will wind up their regular season the following Friday against Charlestown 1, 1, at East Boston. The playoffs will begin the following week.

Quincy fell behind, 6-0, early in the game on an 82-yard pass, the first touchdown scored against the defense in 22 quarters.

The lead held up until halftime but the second half was all Quincy. Bo Queneey intercepted a pass to set up the first touchdown, scored by Paul Dube on a three-yard run.

A pass for the go-ahead points was incomplete.

Another interception, this one by Pete Zilonis, set up the winning touchdown and Zilonis lateraled to Queneey for an additional 20 yards.

Quarterback Bob Scibilia scored the clincher on a four-yard bootleg, a play which has clicked for several scores. He passed to Zilonis for the points.

Huck Listman Recuperating, Friends Coming To Aid

Herbert (Huck) Listman, who played football at Quincy High in the 1920's and later for Thayer Academy and the Quincy Wanderers, recently had part of his right leg amputated and is recuperating at the Braintree Hospital.

Listman, who attended Yale, was an assistant football coach at Quincy High from 1952 to 1959 and in recent years collected tickets at the Quincy games.

Friends are raising funds to help him and anyone wishing to help can call Bill Sullivan at Quincy High School.

Copeland Sets Pace For Merchants

Copeland Package Store leads the Quincy Merchants Bowling League with a 36-12 record.

Wells Grill is second at 32-16, followed by Pagnani's, Gulf, 30-18; South Shore Auto Spring, 28-20; Purity Supreme, 26-22; Sherry's, 26-22; T-Shirt Factory, 25-23; Yellow Cab, 23-25; Merrymount Alleys, 22-26; Men's Hair Style, 19-29; A&T Movers, 14-34; and Wollaston Gulf, 7-41.

Merrymount Alleys rolled the weekly high team three of 1340, and Yellow Cab rolled 1336. Merrymount also had high single of 501 and Yellow Cab had 488.

Irene Kelly Re-elected Track Club President

At a recent meeting the Quincy Track Club re-elected Mrs. Irene Kelly, widow of the club's founder, Frank Kelly, as president and general manager.

Stuart Coull was named secretary, Dave Hamilton is the new financial manager and Patrick Murphy is director of fund raising activities. Gerry Libby and Joe Santo are co-directors and John Jacoppo, Jeff Hennessey and Janice Kelley continue as the coaches.

The club's expenditures for the 1978-79 season were $5,500, the club raised $4,000 and the club is looking for other ways to raise money to support the club. The club plans a major road race sometime next spring to raise money and this Saturday will hold a jog-a-thon at Veterans Stadium.

In road race action young Harry Morash dominated the 12 and under division in the recent Powisset Road Race over a 6.2-mile course in Dover's Hale Reservation. Morash's time was 41:29. Last spring over the same course his time was 44:44, showing a 3:15 improvement this year.

Kevin O'Brien, 9, took third in that division, while Georgia Traficante (44:34) and Tracey Coull (44:36) placed 1-2 for the girls.

Other Quincy finishers were Kevin Dunn (44:53), Matty Worth (47:73), Mark Gillooly (49:19), Danny Ward (61:44), Mike Flebotte (61:47), Kelly Dunn (62:05), Don Hamilton (62:11), Terry Hamilton (64:19), Tina Hamilton (67:18). All are 10 years old and under with the exception of Dunn, 14, and Hamilton, 13.

Montclair Men To Honor Havlicek

John Havlicek, one of the Boston Celtics' all-time greats, will receive the John B. Gillooly Memorial Award at the 29th annual dinner of the Montclair Men's Club Thursday night, Nov. 8.

The award, in honor of the late sports columnist of the Boston Record and Sunday Advertiser, is made for achievements in sports, press, radio, television, entertainment and activities on behalf of youth.

Guest speakers will include Red Sox Coach Johnny Pesky, Atty. Gen. Francis X. Bellotti, a member of the club, Quincy Sun publisher Henry Bosworth, Ken Fallon of WJDA, Patriot Ledger Sports Editor Fred Turner, Sports cartoonist Leo White, former Sox Club president Harry Carlson and Quincy Executive Secretary Thomas Burke.

Dinner chairman Joe Gildea is being assisted by Andrew Orrock, toastmaster; Richard Post, Herbert Baker, Ted O'Reilly,

Havlicek holds 13 Celtics records and is tops in the NBA for most seasons over 1000 points and most games played. He was a four-time first team All-Star, selected to 13 all-star games, ranks third in scoring, was five times an all-defensive choice and was the second player to hit 10,000 field goals.

The Gillooly award was established in 1976. Last year's winner was Curt Gowdy, called by network and advertising agency sports officials as the most versatile sports announcer since the days of Ted Husing.

Mary Pratt Honored At B.U.

Mary Pratt, a physical education instructor and coach in the Quincy school system, was recognized for her service to her profession at recent ceremonies held at Boston University as a part of the Golden Jubilee commemorating Sargent College's 50th year since becoming affiliated with the university.

It was noted that Mary had pioneered in the development of women's athletic programs and team sports and in the elevation of professional standards for women officials.

Mary, one of the outstanding all-around women athletes in New England, has coached softball at Quincy High and basketball at the junior high level and is currently coaching girls' soccer at Broad Meadows Junior High.

Last fall she became one of four women to be voted and installed into the Boston University Hall of Fame, a previously all-male organization.

"It is nice to be recognized as an educator and not just as an athlete," she said following the ceremonies at BU.

Pee Wee B's

The Quincy Pee Wee B hockey team defeated Randolph, 5-2, on goals by Barry Miller, Derek Holt, Danny Kelly, Jerry Layden and Gerry Coughlin.

Kevin Zamarullo had two assists and Miller, Holt, Mark Simonelli, Pat Fenney, Jamie McArdle and Jim Milano one each. Sean Toland and Matt Higgins stood out in goal.

Hall B. Carpenter, 83, Historian, Entomologist

Funeral services were scheduled Wednesday for Hall B. Carpenter, a historian and former entomologist and accountant.

Mr. Hall, 83 died Monday in Quincy City Hospital. He was resident overseer of the Colonel Josiah Quincy Homestead in Wollaston.

Born in Somerville, he had lived in Rockland and Weymouth before moving to Quincy 17 years ago.

Mr. Hall was a graduate of University of Massachusetts and Massachusetts Agricultural College, where he majored in entomology, the study of insects.

Besides working as an entomologist for the Massachusetts and U. S. Departments of Agriculture, he was also employed by several landscaping nurseries.

He was later employed as an auditor for Patterson, Teel and Carpenter of Boston and retired as accountant for various South Shore businesses and individuals.

He was a member of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities, the Quincy and Weymouth Historical Societies, the Abigail Adams Society and the Pilgrim Society.

He was also a second lieutenant in the infantry in World War I.

Husband of Mrs. Marion (Brown) Carpenter and the late Mrs. Marguerite (Carpenter) Carpenter, he is survived by two sons, Bryant Carpenter of Wilbraham and Rev. Alan Carpenter of Framingham, a daughter, Mrs. Ottilie M. Scales of Wollaston, six grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

A funeral service was scheduled for 11 a.m. Wednesday at C.C. Shepherd Funeral Home, South Weymouth. Burial was in Lakeview Cemetery, South Weymouth.

Raymond Clark, 70, Former Union Leader

Funeral services were scheduled for Wednesday for Raymond, Clark, 70 of Weymouth, a former Quincy union leader.

Mr. Clark died at his home Sunday.

He was president of Quincy Local 8-366 of Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International, AFL-CIO. Born in Lebanon, N.

H., he had lived the last 50 years in Weymouth.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary I. (Bourget) Clark, four sons, Lee and Donald, both of Weymouth; Raymond of Quincy and Wayne of Hall, a daughter, Mrs. Bette Kelly of Norwell; two stepsons, Leo Henebury and Vincent Henebury, both of Norwell, a sister, Mrs. Dorothy Hegelton of Stuart, Fla. 27 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

A funeral service was scheduled for 1 p.m. Wednesday in Union Congregational Church, East Braintree.

Burial will be in Blue Hill Cemetery.

Eugene O'Neil, 52, Truck Driver, Union Member

Braintree before moving to Quincy 15 years ago. He was a World War II veteran.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Beverly (Coleman) O'Neil, a son, Shawn of Quincy; a daughter, Judith of Quincy; two stepsons, Francis Clarke of Pembroke and Stephen Clarke of Quincy; two stepsons, Mrs. Deborah Brancaccio and Donna Clark, both of Quincy; his mother Mrs. Franzana (Walsh) O'Neil of North Easton; a brother, Robert of Weymouth; a sister, Mrs. Mary Armstrong of California and one grandchild.

Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery, Randolph.

'Anointing Of The Sick' Liturgy At St. John's

The priests and deacon of St. John's Church, Quincy, will celebrate a liturgy of "Anointing of the Sick" Saturday, at noon for all the People of The Parish who wish to partake.

A collation will follow in the church hall.

An electric lift is available for those who use walkers, canes or wheelchairs, and assistance will be provided for handicapped persons.

Transportation can be arranged by calling Duncan McLean at 471-6416.

The sacrament of "Anointing of the Sick" used to be called Extreme Unction, and has always been intended for the sick. It is a prayer for healing.

In the past, the sacrament was often put off until the near approach of death. However, church sacraments demand conscious participants. That is why it is a requirement in this sacrament that the person be able to participate as fully and responsibly as possible in the company of family, friends and Christian community members.

For this reason, the church requests, that the sacrament be celebrated at the beginning of a serious illness, rather than at its end. This is a change not in the meaning of the sacrament but in the timing of the celebration.

Principal celebrant will be Rev. William Walsh, chaplain at Quincy City Hospital. Concelebrating the Mass will be Rev. William McCarthy, Pastor, Rev. Daniel Graham, Rev. Joseph Byrne, Rev. Joseph Connolly and Deacon Charles Sullivan.

The event is being sponsored by the Christian Service Commission and Spiritual Development Commission of the Parish Council. Confirmation students will assist the handicapped and help in feeding the guests.

All are welcome.

Church Vocations Awareness Week Observed At Archbishop Williams

Church Vocations Awareness Week was celebrated recently at Archbishop Williams with a week-long exhibit in the school library and a full school liturgy in the gymnasium.

Celebrant of the Mass was alumnus Rev. Michael McNamara, a Quincy native, who is the newly ordained associate pastor of St. Charles Parish, Waltham.

Fr. McNamara spoke to the student assembly of the call of Christians to accept Jesus in their lives. He spoke of his own days at Williams and the message of the Christian life he learned in those high school years - a message which supported him through his late seminary training and response to the priestly vocation.

The students were enthusiastic in their response to his homily.

Several seniors of the class of 1980 were designated extraordinary ministers of the eucharist to assist in the liturgy. Readings were read and prayers and petitions offered by students of the sophomore class of 1982, including Father McNamara's sister, Theresa McNamara.

Music for the liturgy was directed by Sr. Corona, S.C.

At the conclusion of the liturgy, a school jacket was presented to Fr. McNamara by the president of the student council, Ellen Hogan.

Recount Possible

LaRaia Edges Koch, Tobin Easy Winner, McCauley, Toland Top

By TOM HENSHAW

Former Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia, bidding for a political comeback, barely made it as a city councillor at-large Tuesday by a 197-vote margin over newcomer Richard J. Koch Jr. Koch said he would have to confer with his committee before he decided if he would ask for a recount.

But the big winner in the election could have been Francis X. McCauley, who topped the race for councillor at-large by a margin of nearly 3,000 votes.

He squeezed into the Council two years ago in an election that was so close it called for a recount.

Mayor Arthur H. Tobin won re-election to a second term handsily over Abe M. Itkin, a hospital social worker, with 15,516 votes to 6,775.

Much of Itkin's vote apparently came from disgruntled city workers who have been upset with Tobin for his refusal to grant them new contracts after nearly two years of negotiations.

Patricia Toland, vice chairwoman of the School Committee, who was also a target of the unions' wrath, topped the School field as she was returned to a second four-year term with 14,585 votes.

The voter turnout for the election that produced few issues was 24,990, or 52.2 per cent of the 47,861 registered.

It was the smallest Quincy vote in recent years, below even the 52.7 per cent that cast ballots in 1969 when Robert C. Prebel ran against James R. McIntyre for mayor.

An inordinately large number of blank ballots in the council at-large and school committee races were attributed to LaRaia's hard core personal following and a union campaign for Anselmo. There were 15,218 blanks in the at-large race and 16,982 blanks for school committee.

Indications were that many voters cast "bullets", or single votes out of a possible three, for the two candidates.

Union flyers had called for a bullet vote for Anselmo.

LaRaia, running strongly in Wards 2 and 4, amassed 11,210 votes in his comeback bid.

But young Koch, son of Richard J. Koch Sr., the executive director of the Park Department, polled 11,013 votes in his first bid for public office.

Koch told The Sun he wasn't sure if he would ask for a recount.

"I don't know," he said. "I'll be talking to my committee about it. We'll probably make a decision in the next few days."

City employee unions, feuding with the Tobin administration

The closest fight among the ward council races was between Joanne Condon and Michael J. Kelly in Ward 6.

Condon won, 2,187 to 1,651, for a second two-year term on the Council. Kelly ran against Condon two years ago but lost out in the preliminary election.

All three incumbents were returned to the School Committee.

Toland topped the ticket with 14,585 votes, followed by Christopher Kennedy with 14,206 and Francis Anselmo with 13,620.

over contracts, listed McCauley, Faherty and LaRaia as their favored candidate for councillor at-large and Anselmo for School Committee.

A Carolyn Donahue, frequently mentioned as a write-in candidate of the unions, gathered between 50 and 100 votes for mayor even though she was not on the ballot.

An inordinately large number of blank ballots in the council at-large and school committee races were attributed to LaRaia's hard core personal following and a union campaign for Anselmo. There were 15,218 blanks in the at-large race and 16,982 blanks for school committee.

Indications were that many voters cast "bullets", or single votes out of a possible three, for the two candidates.

Union flyers had called for a bullet vote for Anselmo.

Challengers Patrick H. Conroy and John H. McDuff trailed badly with 9,235 and 6,287 votes respectively.

In other ward council races: Leo J. Kelly easily triumphed over David MacMillan in Ward 1 by a 2,741 to 1,513 margin.

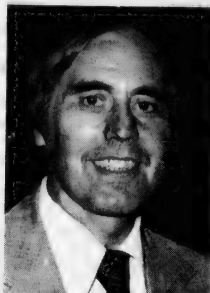

John J. Lydon Jr. turned back a challenge from Gerald V. Noble by 2,726 votes to 1,256.

James A. Sheets in Ward 4 and Stephen J. McGrath in Ward 5 were unopposed.

McCauley was the top vote-getter in four of the city's six wards and finished a strong second in the other two.

He captured his home Ward 1 with a total of 3,219 votes to 2,031 for runner-up Quinn. He also took Ward 2, 3 and 5 and finished second to LaRaia by 23 votes in Ward 4.

Koch was the big vote getter in Ward 6 with 2,239.

Bellotti Keynote Speaker

Veteran's Day Parade Ceremonies Sunday

Atty. Gen. Francis X. Bellotti, a Navy veteran of World War II, will deliver the Veterans Day address in Quincy on Sunday, Nov. 11, at 11 a.m. at ceremonies in front of the Adams Academy building.

The parade will step off on Water St. at 10:30 a.m., headed by Chief Marshal Irving Isaacson, commander of the Quincy Veterans Council, and move down Quincy Ave. and Hancock St. to Adams Academy.

In case of inclement weather, the ceremonies will be held in the Quincy High School auditorium. Official instructions will be broadcast on WJDA.

The reviewing stand will be in front of the Masonic Temple on Hancock St.

Rev. Frank Bauer of Wollaston Lutheran Church will give the invocation; parade chairman John Gillis will introduce guests; Commander Isaacson will extend the welcome and Mayor Arthur H. Tobin the greetings from the city.

Following Atty. Gen. Bellotti's address, wreaths will be placed at all memorials.

Rev. John McMahon of St. Mary's Church will offer the prayer; the Caddy Detachment of the Marine Corps League will fire the volley; and 215th Army Band of the National Guard will sound taps.

The national anthem will be played by the same band after which Rabbi Jacob Mann of Congregation Beth Israel will deliver the benediction and the line of march will be reformed by Officer of the Day Thomas McDonald, past commander of the QVC.

The parade roster includes: Chief Marshal Irving Isaacson, commander of the QVC, and his aides, James Lynch, senior vice commander, and John M. Gillis, junior vice commander, both of the QVC.

FRANCIS BELLOTTI

Co-chairmen Joseph P. McDough, Kenneth Taft, Lawrence S. Butler, Lawrence J. Perette, Adjutant William Reeve and Arthur G. McLean, all past commanders of the QVC.

Officer of the Day Thomas McDonald, Asst. Officer of the Day Henry J. Williams, Asst. Sgt. at Arms Ralph Paull; aides to invited guests, Thomas Hurlbaeus, Joseph Callahan and Richard J. Koch.

Aides de camp to the speaker of the day will be Leo P. Cardarelli, William S. Ash, Joseph Sullivan, Lawrence J. Perette, Roger Whitcomb and Lawrence Carnali.

John H. Nickerson of the Nickerson Legion Post, John G. Ward of the Cavanagh Chapter, DAV, Thomas C. Mills of the Quincy An vets Post, Robert J. Ellis of Quincy Barracks, World War I Veterans; Jason Stone of the Jewish War Veterans; David Dunderdale of the Caddy Detachment, MCL.

The staff will also have honorary representation for the Paul J. Revere Post, GAR; and the Boyd Camp of United Spanish War Veterans.

The parade formation will include:

The Quincy Police colors; the QVC colors, carried by the Caddy Detachment, MCL; Commander Isaacson, Senior Vice Commander Lynch, Junior Vice Commander Gillis, the 215th Army Band, Chairman Gillis and staff, Atty. Gen. Bellotti, and national, state, county and city officials.

The First Division will be marshalled by Lawrence Carnali, graves registration officer of the QVC, with Henry Williams, past commander of the QVC as adjutant.

The division includes the North Quincy High School Band, the past commanders of the QVC, gold star mothers, World War I veterans, World War I Barracks, U.S. Marine Corps Reserve, Massachusetts National Guard and the Quincy High School Band.

The Second Division will be marshalled by Paul W. O'Neill, past commander of the QVC, with Lawrence Perette, also a past commander, as adjutant.

Also the Waltham Legion band; Wollaston Legion Post and auxiliary; Nickerson Legion Post and auxiliary; Quincy DAV chapter; Quincy Amvets Post; Quincy Jewish War Veterans; and the Caddy Detachment, MCL.

The Third Division will be marshalled by Roger Whitcomb, past commander of Quincy Amvets; with Frederick Dwelly, past commander of the Quincy Legion Post, as adjutant; and includes the Renegade Drum and Bugle Corps, the Quincy schools' Air Force Junior ROTC cadets; and the Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts.

SCHOOL'S OUT for several hundred students who walked out of Quincy High and Vo-Tech last week in support of their teachers. Most students returned to school for afternoon classes. (Quincy Sun Photo by Steve Grouchowski)

MAKING A POINT with several hundred high school students is Mayor Arthur Tobin, who tells the youths why he won't approve a pay raise for Quincy teachers. Also present to help quell the student walkout were Quincy High Principal Lloyd Hill and School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon. (Quincy Sun Photos by Jonathan Burak)

Nurses' 'Sickout' Cuts Services At Hospital

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Quincy City Hospital director Anthony DeFalco was preparing to further cut back services at the hospital Tuesday night amid rumors the nurses' sick-out there would go into a second day.

Elective surgery at the hospital would be cancelled, emergency cases would be diverted to other hospitals and doctors would be encouraged to send patients home earlier than previously planned if deemed safe, DeFalco said.

Over 90 registered nurses had called in sick by mid-Tuesday, DeFalco said. The hospital employs about 240 nurses, split among three daily shifts.

On an average day, six to eight nurses call in sick, DeFalco said. The Election Day absences were "obviously" a protest against lack of progress in contract negotiations between the registered nurses' union and the city, DeFalco said.

But Pauline Kennedy of Weymouth, chairwoman of the nurses' union bargaining committee, said that no sick-out had been sanctioned by the union.

At a Monday night meeting with the nurses, she said, she discussed the city's latest salary proposal—no retroactive raise for the 1978-79 year, a $200 increase as of Jan. 1, 1980 and another $200 increase as of April 1, 1980. No job action was voted on by the nurses, she said.

The nurses at the hospital, like members of most other city unions, have been working without a contract since July of 1978.

"Morale has been very low," she said. "A lot of them are really disgusted with how negotiations have been handled by the city."

The Quincy City Hospital group is the only local represented by the Massachusetts Nurses Association to be without a contract for such a long period of time, she said.

"We just don't seem to be getting anywhere," she added. "People are understaffed, overworked, people are getting very tired. But nobody seems to be concerned, at least at the mayor's level and the people we negotiate with."

It's unfortunate that these things have to happen," she said of Tuesday's absences. "But people can't wait forever."

The situation has led many nurses at QCH to look for work elsewhere, she said, and five nurses have resigned in the last week.

The hospital also employs about 100 Licensed Practical Nurses (LPN's) who showed a much better health record on Tuesday and apparently were not involved in the protest, DeFalco added. The LPN's are represented by a different union.

According to rumors around the hospital Tuesday, the sick-out, which began at 6:30 that morning, would continue for 48 hours, DeFalco said.

"I don't know that for certain as yet, but we are preparing for that possibility," he said.

DeFalco seemed as much in the dark as anyone concerning the nurses' plans for Wednesday. Several attempts at arranging a meeting with Mrs. Kennedy had fallen through, he said.

A skeleton staff—including some nurses held over from the evening shift and others called in from off-duty, was able to keep the hospital functioning through Tuesday, DeFalco said. However, such a skeleton staff could not function indefinitely, he said.

Mayor Arthur Tobin commented, tongue in cheek, "first of all we're trying to identify the epidemic and find out what kind of flu it is."

"I understand that two of the nurses got sick at the hospital. They reported to their stations and got sick. We'll have to check those stations to see if it's anything contagious."

On a serious note, the mayor added, "We're concerned for the patient care at the hospital." The hospital problems may cut short a planned trip to Washington Wednesday to discuss UDAG funding for downtown redevelopment, Tobin said.

LWV Plans Program On Quincy Public Schools

The Quincy League of Women Voters will focus on the city's public schools at its meeting Tuesday, Nov. 13, at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Ruth Paven, 40 Wollaston Ave., Wollaston.

School Supt. Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon and Vice Chairwoman

Patricia Toland of the School Committee will address themselves to the problems that confront the school system.

The program will focus on five factors that impact education: the size and makeup of the community, the budget, the professional staff, administrative philosophy, and legal mandates.

The program is part of the League's year-long focus on Quincy, its people and its institutions. The public is invited to attend the Nov. 13 meeting.

Elizabeth Moltrup Delegate To White House Conference

Elizabeth Moltrup, a counselor at the Quincy office of the Massachusetts Rehabilitation Commission, is an alternate delegate to the first White House Conference on Library and Information Services Nov. 15-19 in Washington, D.C.

Nineteen Massachusetts delegates will attend the conference, which is aimed at voicing concerns for the future of public libraries in filling the informational, recreational and educational needs of the public.

Paula Burke Graduates Jet Mechanics Course

Airman Paula J. Burke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. Burke of 24 Joseph St., Houghs Neck, has graduated from the U.S. Air Force jet engine mechanics course at Chanute Air Force Base, Rantoul, Ill.

Graduates of the course earn credits toward an associate degree in applied science through the Community College of the Air Force.

Airman Burke learned how to inspect and repair turbojet and gas turbine engines. She is being assigned to Williams Air Force Base, Ariz., for duty with a unit of the Air Training Command.

A 1976 graduate of Quincy High School, she earned an associate degree in 1979 from Cape Cod Community College, Barnstable, Mass.

Legal Secretaries Collecting Books For Inmates

The Norfolk County Legal Secretaries Association is collecting books for inmates at Walpole and Norfolk state prisons as a special Christmas project.

Jean Pittman, project chairman, asks local residents, as well as members of the organization, to donate any excess books they may have.

There will be a depository box at the Liggett-Rexall drug store, Washington St., Norwood.

Members are urged to bring the books to the November meeting.

For further information contact Jean Pittman at 769-2606.

Three Residents On Wheaton College Dean's List

Three Quincy residents have been named to the annual dean's list at Wheaton College, Norton.

The residents are Lori Jean Prince, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Prince, of 35 Minahan's College, Boston. She is a graduate of Archbishop Williams High School.

DEBORAH PANOFF

Deborah Panoff United Way 'Loaned Executive'

Quincy resident Deborah Panoff is participating in the 1979 campaign of the United Way of Massachusetts Bay as a loaned executive from New England Merchants National Bank, Boston.

Miss Panoff, employed in the bank's purchasing department, is working full time for the United Way during the three-month campaign which continues through November.

She says that working for the United Way she has learned that monies contributed go where they should go ... to people who need it.

Miss Panoff is a graduate of North Quincy High School and Wheaton College, magna cum laude, with departmental honors in English.

Ninety men and women from Greater Boston firms are participating in the loaned executive program.

Goal of this year's United Way campaign is to raise $21 million benefiting 162 human care agencies.

A little bit of practical Victoriana for your home-

With winter just ahead, what is more practical than a working oil lamp?

Despite all the hard work of public utility companies to keep electric service flowing without interruption, nature at times conspires by the use of wind and sleet to knock out lights.

The most practical item for emergency lighting under such circumstances is an old fashioned oil lamp. Oil lamps can be a thing of beauty for your home--just as they were during the Victorian period.

The Quincy Cooperative Bank is now offering oil lamps of unique and unusual beauty for your home. Whether in use or not, these lamps will enhance the decor of your home. The bases are custom created for us by New England Potters Guild, Inc., the same folks who brought you the unusually beautiful flower pots when our bank offered these promotional items some months ago.

Come in and see our lamps with their pretty pottery bases. Pick the color and form you like best for your home. The deal is very simple: *deposit $200 or more into a New or Existing savings account and you can buy a lamp for $5.00. (Only one lamp per account) This regular $25.00 value is a unusual offering with both practicality and beauty. (We have scented oil available, too, at $2.00 a bottle.)

THIS OFFER IS GOOD WHILE SUPPLIES LAST.

Beth Israel Synagogue Celebrates 60th Anniversary

Beth Israel Synagogue of Quincy Point celebrated its 60th anniversary Sunday with a dinner-dance at Temple Beth Am in Randolph.

About 275 persons attended the festivities, which had to be moved from Beth Israel Synagogue because of the large turnout.

Head table guests at the dinner included Rabbi and Mrs. Jacob Mann of Beth Israel, congregation president Jack Klaver and his wife Ann; committee chairman Bernice Reisberg and his wife Marilyn; Mayor Arthur Tobin and Rabbi David Jacobs of Temple Beth El.

The mayor presented Klaver with a citation noting the synagogue's milestone.

William O'Connell of the Quincy Historical Society presented the congregation with a plaque honoring Beth Israel as the oldest synagogue on the South Shore.

The dinner-dance capped a successful year-long planning and fund-raising drive, said Bernice Reisberg, chairman of the anniversary committee.

Over $35,000 was raised to buy religious articles and fund repairs for the synagogue, he said. But most of all, it was a fun evening, he said.

"It was like a reunion," Reisberg said. "People got together who hadn't seen each other in umpteen years." Former members of the congregation came from as far as New York and California to join in the joyous evening, he added.

Officers for the anniversary celebration were Bernice Reisberg, general chairman, Saul Kurlansky, commemorative book chairman; Nathaniel Sherman, co-chairman; Mrs. Samuel Skoler, secretary; Maurice Zack, treasurer; Rena Silverman, publicity, and Mrs. Bernice Reisberg, Mrs. Jack Klaver, David Ezickson, banquet committee.

Other members of the committee include Mrs. Morris Silverman, Rabbi and Mrs. Jacob Mann, Pauline Fogel, Mary Kurlansky, Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Levenson, David Minkofsky, Benjamin Needel, Robert Nankin, Israel Schwartz, Robert Cutler, Marvin Asnes, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Steinberg, Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Kaplan, Jack Klaver, Samuel Skoler, Barry Steinberg, Leon Berger, A. Bentley Kurtis, Mr. and Mrs. Myer Kurtis, Maurice Tower, Jack Krasnigor and Mrs. Irving Stacey.

'Dick Stratton Slep Here'

"Dick Stratton Slep Here", read the inch-high pencilled words on the back of the board.

Harold Crowley, Snug Harbor school teacher and Flag St., Wollaston resident was working with other volunteers upgrading the cabins and facilities at Camp Massasoit for Quincy boy scouts in Plymouth.

CROWLEY

The board had been removed from the porch of the Poole Cabin where the foundation is being reconstructed. Every scrap of wood that can be re-used is. Crowley, a member of the Massasoit Campers Association, was looking the board over carefully for possible re-use when he turned it over and spotted the name.

"I wonder if this could be..." Crowley mused as he read the name.

Crowley isn't one to muse long. He dashed off a letter to Capt. Richard Stratton of Vietnam War fame now Deputy Superintendent of Operations at the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis.

And within the week back came a letter from Stratton.

"I do not know if I dare acknowledge that I may be the person who spelled 'slep', he wrote. "My teacher at North Quincy High and Dr. Creedon (his classmate at NQHS) will certainly be agghast."

He recalled he was a member of Boy Scout Troop 38 sponsored by the White Brothers Milk Co. with Carl Lundgren as scout master.

He remembered going to Camp Massasoit for a couple of weeks in the summer of 1944 or 1945 as a reward to the troop for selling the most war bonds in the area.

"Inspired by the shipyard workers, we were always leaving our name or 'Kilroy Was Here' every place we went," he wrote.

And, he added: "My wife and three boys enjoyed your letter. I must admit that they rode me (because of 'slep') just a little more than a little bit. I wish you well in your endeavors."

The three-foot long board apparently was once part of the side of the G.A.R. cabin Stratton stayed in while at the camp. It was later used as a porch board.

It will now become an exhibit in a planned Camp Massasoit museum.

The well-worn piece of lumber was going to be used for firewood until Crowley spotted the name and message on it.

Richard J. Koch is chairman of the Massasoit Campers Association which is seeking $30,000 in money and/or materials to improve the facility used by Quincy Boy Scouts.

The association has decided also to make Stratton an honorary member.

THERE'S NO DOUBT Ted Kennedy is running for President. His camp is busy recruiting key workers in the South Shore and Quincy. Some of them will be serving as campaign advance men and in other important posts out of state.

YOU MAY SOON be seeing one of Quincy's historic sites in a TV series. A camera crew from WGBH, Ch. 2, has been at the Josiah Quincy House on Muirhead St. in Wollaston filming a pilot for a proposed eight-program series, "Tales of Medical Life".

The pilot is called "Ephraim McDonnell's Kentucky Ride" and its subject is the first successful abdominal surgery in 1809. The Josiah Quincy House was chosen because it is from that period.

EVEN THOUGH THERE was no city preliminary election this year, a few thousand dollars was spent by candidates for Election Year '79. Times sure have changed, though.

Councillor Joseph Brett, retiring this year, was the "big" spender when he first ran for public office in 1932. Democratic candidate for state representative in the old Fourth Norfolk District, he spent—get this—$83.15. He lost. The winners were Charles Hedges and Arthur Burgess who spent $20 and $15 respectively.

$10 Million Over 30 Years

Tax Incentive Agreement For Office Building Disclosed

The Planning Department, in preparation for a meeting with the City Council's Downtown Development Committee, has disclosed details of the Chapter 121A tax agreement for the proposed Stop and Shop-Campanelli office building at the corner of Hancock and Granite Sts.

The agreement shows that the owners of the building will pay the city some $10 million over the next 30 years under a plan that taxes space at an escalating rate over that period of time instead of the standard rate based on the assessed valuation of the building.

During the period of construction, the owners, Campanelli Quincy Enterprises, will pay $50,000 in lieu of taxes, broken down like this: 1979 - None; 1980 - $12,000; 1981 - $18,000; 1982 - $20,000.

The target date for completion of the 10-story, $9,566,000 building with adjoining pedestrian park is 1981 but a one year grace period was allowed to cover contingencies, like delays in construction due to unforeseen circumstances.

Between 1982 and the year 2012, the following conditions will be in effect:

- "For calendar years 1981 and 1982, $1 for each square foot of space on the ground through 10th floors of the building and 50 cents for each square foot of basement space rented to tenants during each respective calendar year. Such amounts shall be prorated for occupancy during partial calendar years.

- "Payments shall not, however, be less than $133,000, $159,000 and $170,000 for calendar years 1982, 1983 and 1984, respectively, unless the occupancy of the building by the Stop and Shop Companies is delayed beyond Jan. 1, 1982 by reasons beyond the applicant's reasonable control, in which case such minimum payments shall be postponed one year each.

- "For calendar years 1986 through 1990, the payments per square foot set forth above shall be increased to $1.35 for the ground through 10th floors, which amount shall increase in 1991 and every fifth year thereafter by 35 cents for the succeeding five year period or a lesser period at the end of the 30 years during which the project is subject to Chapter 121A."

The building having 170,000 square feet of space on floors one through 10 and 7,000 square feet of basement space, the Planning Department calculates it will produce the following revenue under the tax agreements:

1987-1992 - $239,220 per year
1992-1997 - $301,240 per year
1997-2002 - $363,260 per year
2002-2007 - $425,280 per year
2007-2012 - $487,300 per year

Winning Essay In State Constitution Bicentennial Contest

Carol Liuzza, a sixth-grade student at the Merrymount School, wrote the winning essay in the Quincy Sun's State Constitution Bicentennial Essay Contest.

Carol's winning essay follows:

What The Massachusetts Constitution Means To Me
The Massachusetts Constitution is a document which represents the supreme law for this state. It contains the Bill Of Rights written by John Adams in the year 1779 to protect the rights of the people.

As I read the rights of the Massachusetts Constitution I realize how fortunate I am. Without the Constitution I wouldn't be living in a free society.

The two rights that mean the most to me now because of my age are Freedom of religion, because I'd like to worship whatever I believe in, and Freedom of Education because I'd like to be able to attend whatever school would give me the best education.

I am very proud to be a resident of Quincy especially so because the Massachusetts Constitution was written by a man from Quincy in his home.

MBTA To Register Seniors, Handicapped For Reduced Fares

An MBTA registration team will be in Quincy Tuesday, Nov. 13, from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. to process reduced fair identification cards for senior and handicapped citizens.

The registration will be held at the Drop-In Center on High School Ave.

Senior citizens must bring proof that they are 65 years or older -- birth certificate, baptismal record or driver's license -- proof of residency and a 50 cent registration fee.

Medicare cards will not be accepted as proof of age.

The MBTA said seniors who already have a reduced fare card need not register again, adding that what appears to be an expiration date is used only for internal control purposes.

Handicapped persons must present proof of their disability, such as a letter from Social Security, evidence of at least 70 per cent disability from the Veterans Administration, or completion of MBTA Form SN-7.

The reduced fare cards are good only during off peak hours for handicapped persons.

Deplore Ku Klux Klan

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

We wish to express our total and utter abhorrence at the vicious slaughter of the four persons in Greensboro, North Carolina last Saturday.

These four people were participating in a peaceful gathering to promote understanding and brotherhood. This gathering was in response to the recent and increasingly open and barbaric activities of the Ku Klux Klan. For over a century the Klan has been directing hate, violence, and murder against various groups in our society, including black people, Jews, Catholics, immigrants and trade unionists.

In recent months, the Klan has sought to spread its contagion of bigotry, mayhem and total disrespect for the value of human life into the Greater Boston area. We, as residents of Quincy, have totally deplored this eruption of disease in our area. We are horrified and angered to see this wanton and unprovoked slaying of four human beings by the Ku Klux Klan in North Carolina. This sort of atrocity could happen anywhere if this cancerous society is allowed to exist in our society. We must all take a firm and active stand against this evil.

The division of people in our society along the lines of race, religion and nationality must not be tolerated. Instead we must all join together to build a peaceful society where there is racial harmony and brotherhood among all peoples.

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On behalf of all the girls who took part in the St. Joseph's Youth Activities Committee sponsored softball game, please accept my sincere thanks for the coverage your newspaper provided during the recently-completed season.

Each of the girls, their coaches, and most importantly their sponsors certainly appreciated the time and effort of your staff. Your fine spirit of community awareness and cooperation is something that should be admired by all.

Again I offer my thanks and the thanks of the entire Youth Activities Committee here at St. Joseph's.

Estimated 5,000 Gallons Lost

EPA Officials Probe Town River Oil Spill

Environmental specialists are going over Town River to assess the damage caused by a major oil spill of at least 5,000 gallons of home heating fuel.

There were unconfirmed reports late Tuesday that the spill could amount to as much as 28,000 gallons since the Mobile Oil Co. reportedly could not account for 700 barrels at 42 gallons per barrel.

Coast Guard Petty Officer Mario Tuscano said, however, that the Coast Guard was sticking to the figure of 5,000 gallons that overflowed from the barge George T. Tilton at the Mobile terminal.

John Lynch of the regional office of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) dispatched two field men to the Town River area where the oil befouled fishing boats and spread a noxious odor.

The State Department of Environmental Affairs also had senior sanitary engineer Bill Cashins on the scene as a private cleanup company worked with booms to remove the oil from the surface.

Rep. Thomas F. Brownell (D-Quincy) asked the EPA for a full inventory of environmental damage resulting from the spill.

"The eel grass on the Germantown-Broad Meadows side of the river is loaded with oil," said Brownell. "The boats are covered with oil, although they tell me there is no fire hazard. It looks like the smelt fishing has gone by the boards."

"We have to find out just exactly how much damage was done and what we can do to correct it."

The Turecamo Transportation Co. of Oyster Bay, N.Y., owner of the barge, hired Jet Line Services, Inc., of Braintree to clean up the mess and the Coast Guard estimated that about 1,200 gallons had been recovered by Tuesday afternoon.

Coast Guard Petty Officer Dale Gardner said most of the oil was being driven by the winds into Adams Cove on the Germantown side of the river where Jet Line was trapping it in booms and retrieving it with absorbent pads and vacuum tubes.

"It's hard to say when the job will be completed," said Gardner.

The barge was apparently getting ready to unload the oil late Monday night when it spilled over the top of the barge and into the water.

Sea St., S. A. Crackdown Sought

A few hours after City Councillor William W. Jenness called for more rigid policing of the area, a pedestrian was killed and another was critically injured in separate auto accidents near the intersection of Sea St. and Southern Artery.

Robert F. Sawyer, 67, of 17 Algonquin Rd., Merrymount, was struck and killed by a car on Sea St. near Samoset Ave. and Eugene Ciccone, 54, of Newton was hospitalized after being run down while crossing Southern Artery near Canal St.

Mayor Thomas S. Burgin said he plans to ask the electric light company to study the lighting on Sea St. as far as Norton St., including the possibility of installing sodium ray lights in an effort to check the alarming number of accidents.

Meanwhile, Inspector Alfred T. Little of the Quincy Registry office arrested 10 motorists on Sea St. at Samoset Ave. — seven for speeding, one for drunk driving, one for hit-and-run, and one for driving a car with defective lights.

ELECTION LINEUP SET

Results of the preliminary city election in Quincy left these candidates opposing each other in contests for ward councillors in the Dec. 5 general election:

Ward 1 - William W. Jenness vs. Earle S. Bates; Ward 2 - Louis A. George vs. James P. McGuinness; and Ward 4 - Christian A. Burkhard vs. Timothy P. Daly.

EARLY SCORE WINS GAME

The visiting Lawrence, L. I., High School football team went 71 yards in five plays the first time it got the ball for the only touchdown in a 6-0 victory over Quincy at Municipal Stadium.

DISPUTE OVER QUARRIES

A group of West Quincy residents charged that Ward 4 City Councillor Christian A. Burkhard was making a "political football" out of their problem with the hazardous abandoned quarries in the area.

"He had two years in the City Council to do something to remedy the danger of the quarry holes in his ward and he has done absolutely nothing," they said. "Now, one week before election, he raises a loud cry about the danger which has existed all along."

"The fact that the majority of those who signed the statement against me are workers on the Daly Committee should convince anyone that protest is only a cheap political trick," retorted Burkhard.

First Church of Squantum Begins 'Season Of Thanksgiving'

The congregation of the First Church of Squantum began a "season of Thanksgiving" Sunday with the first of four worship services commemorating the lives and the faith of America's first Pilgrims.

Besides the traditional Thanksgiving hymns, the congregation sang three psalms as the Pilgrims sang them nearly 400 years ago. These hymns were taken from the Ainsworth Psalter which the Pilgrims used.

Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, pastor, recounted the story of the Pilgrims' flight from England and read from one of the oldest of Pilgrim writings, "Of Plymouth Plantation" by William Bradford.

The call to worship was read by Carl Anderson, and The opening prayer was led by Barbara Fluhr. The Youth Choir sang, "I Will Praise Him", and the Senior Choir sang "Psalm 86" from the Ainsworth Psalter. The pastor's sermon was, "It Cost Them Something."

Grace Holmes and May Lewis were the greeters. Tore Wallin, Marsha Anderson, Richard Williams, Don Frazer, Billy Cogswell and Mary Shionis served as ushers. The fellowship hour after the service was hosted by Doris Callbeck, Olive Brooks, Del Dougherty, Tommy Adams and Holly Bumpus.

The Pilgrim psalms and the readings from Pilgrim writings, either "Of Plymouth Plantation" or "Mourt's Relation", will also be included in the remaining three services of the series. Over the weeks, the whole Pilgrim story will be retold.

Sermon topics for the next three weeks are: Nov. 11, "Through a Sea of Troubles"; Nov. 18, "A Time for Giving Thanks"; and Nov. 25, "What We Have Received". Each Sunday, a different church choir will join the Senior Choir to provide prepared music for the service including the Youth Choir, the Junior Choir, the Boys' Choir and the Cinnamon Toast Crowd.

The record Annual Church Fair was the most successful ever held in the church with proceeds totalling almost twice that of last year. Proceeds from the fair are used to support the church and its missionary projects.

Inmate To Participate In Open House At Mission Possible

An inmate of a Massachusetts correctional facility will participate in an open house at Mission Possible, Wednesday, Nov. 14, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. at 215 Parkingway. The agency serves troubled adolescents in Quincy, Milton and Randolph.

Shari Wyner, program director, said arrangements have been made to have the inmate as a guest "so he can discuss ways in which the community can help youths avoid problem behavior."

A program service of the South Shore Mental Health Center, Mission Possible was founded in 1978, in response to requests from the Quincy District Court and the Welfare Department.

In addition to providing short-term treatment for youths, the agency works with families, too.

Mission Possible serves as coordinator for other local agencies involved with adolescents who have been designated as children in need of services (CHINS). "We are seeking ways to help these young people develop alternatives to self-destructive patterns of behavior," states Wyner.

The open house will feature demonstrations of art, family, and movement therapy, as well as other techniques used by the staff. The event is open to the public.

Memorial Mass

At St. John's Church Thursday

The Blessed Virgin Mary Sodality of St. John's Church, Quincy in conjunction with the Women's Club of St. John's and the Quincy Catholic club will hold a memorial Mass for deceased members tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m.

The Mass will be concelebrated by Fr. William R. McCarthy and Fr. Joseph M. Connolly in the upstairs church. A collation will follow in the lower church hall.

Fr. Martin Connor, a spiritual director at St. John's Seminary will be the guest speaker. Fr.

Connor grew up in Dorchester, was ordained in 1964 and has previously served in St. Mary's Parish in Hanover and St. Charles in Woburn. He studied in the Gregorian University in Rome, receiving a Licentiate in Sacred Theology.

Anyone with a family member or friend associated with any of the three above mentioned clubs and who died this past year and would like to have them remembered are asked to contact Mrs. Ruth O'Shea (479-0296) or any of the officers of the clubs.

Bible Seminar At Granite Place Chapel

Rev. Oswald T. Bellamy, D.D., will conduct an hour of religious fellowship and a bible seminar

Nov. 17 and 24, at 2p.m. in the Granite Place Chapel.

Rev. Jay Patton of Granite Place will assist. The public is welcome.

Dr. McCumber Speaker At Wollaston Nazarene Revival

Dr. William McCumber, former pastor of the Wollaston Church of the Nazarene, is the special speaker in a series of revival services now being held at the church and at Eastern Nazarene College.

Mr. McCumber, who used to be chairman of the Department of Religion at ENC, is the editor of the Herald of Holiness, the official newspaper of the International Church of the Nazarene.

The revival services began Tuesday and are being held each evening through tomorrow (Friday) at 7 p.m.

The film, "The Hiding Place," will be shown Saturday, Nov. 10, at 7 p.m. and Dr. McCumber will speak at both the 11 a.m. and the 6 p.m. services Sunday, Nov. 11.

The public is invited to any or all of these services.

CoPE, CETA Seek Handicapped To Train As Computer Programmers

Project CoPE, in conjunction with Quincy CETA, is accepting applications -- preferably from handicapped people -- for intensive training in computer programming and direct data entry occupations.

"These are ideal jobs for the handicapped who have good manual and finger dexterity," said Daniel M. Barraford III, the project director. "But we are not drawing enough handicapped applicants."

Any CETA-eligible person who lives in one of the 11 communities serviced by the Quincy CETA consortium may apply for the 32 weeks of training that begins Monday, Dec. 10.

Deadline for approval of CETA eligibility is Tuesday, Nov. 13.

The classroom training part of the program will be conducted in the old high school building on Washington St. in Braintree but three months will be spent as interns with a computer-using company.

The CETA training contract totals $252,460 for the training of 50 people for a year. They will be trained in two cycles of 25 persons each and receive the minimum wage while training.

"We are seeking 50 per cent handicapped people," said Gordon McPhee of CETA.

The Quincy consortium includes the towns of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth, as well as Quincy.

This is the third year that Project CoPE, the acronym for Collaborative Partnerships in Education, has trained computer programmers and direct data entry workers for CETA.

Barraford said the placement rate for the second year of Project CoPE was about 80 per cent with average starting salaries of $12,000 for programmers and $8,500 for direct data entry workers.

Those interested in applying for training with Project CoPE should contact Maureen Rogers at Quincy CETA, 773-3983

JWV's 'Citizen Of The Year'

Sun Publisher Honored For Ethics, Service To Young

Henry W. Bosworth Jr., editor and publisher of The Quincy Sun, was hailed Sunday as "a newspaperman with ethics."

He was also acclaimed for his "many years of selfless dedication to helping young people."

The first tribute came from John R. Herbert, former editor of the Patriot Ledger and the Boston Herald Traveler, now president and chairman of the board of the Quincy Cooperative Bank.

The second came from famed comedian Jerry Lewis, national chairman of the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Herbert's tribute was delivered in person, Lewis' by mailgram, at a breakfast honoring Bosworth as the Quincy Jewish War Veterans' 29th "Citizen of the Year" at Beth Israel Synagogue.

The "Citizen of the Year Award" was presented to Bosworth by Past Commander Irving Isaacson, program chairman and emcee, and Commander Jason Stone.

Bosworth received three other awards at the breakfast.

Mayor Arthur Tobin and former Mayor Thomas Burgin presented him with a "Distinguished Citizen of Quincy Award"; Senator Paul Harold a State Senate citation, and William O'Connell, president of the Quincy Historical Society presented him with that group's Heritage Award.

Other speakers were Rabbi Jacob Mann of Beth Israel Synagogue, a past recipient of the "Citizen of the Year Award"; Rev. William McCarthy, pastor St. John's Church; Michael Baldino, regional director Muscular Dystrophy Association and Steven Getz, director Southern Massachusetts Chapter MDA.

Herbert, a friend and associate of Bosworth in the newspaper business since 1941, at both the Patriot Ledger and Boston Herald Traveler, cited him as "a man of compassion ... a man of intelligence and honor ... and a man who still clings to the old fashioned reporting concept of presenting a fair, balanced and honest news report."

"And on this latter point," he said, "I should tell you that newspapers are in trouble. It's not the price or availability of newsprint that is their prime problem -- it is their credibility with the public."

"I see evidence that more and more people are believing less and less of what they read in the print media."

"In the old days when Henry and I were together in journalism, there was one basic rule: you used the facts in a story and you put your opinions in editorials."

"But somewhere along the line since then, some people in the publishing field felt that simply presenting the facts was not enough, there should be an explanation of what the facts meant."

"Thus has come the era of 'interpretive reporting' which I feel can be dangerous unless the interpretive articles are properly identified as the opinion of the writer."

"Unfortunately, many a news story today is simply the personal feeling for some reporter."

"I feel that despite all the other fine attributes Henry has, his insistence on his news columns being factual is his great achievement in community journalism."

Herbert told how, in 1957, Bosworth, as a Boston Traveler reporter, became involved in the story of a lonely little boy named Francis X. who was in Lakeville Sanitarium suffering from muscular dystrophy.

His story of the boy, who wanted "four or six" cards for his 9th birthday, was picked up by the wire services and so touched the heart of the nation that Francis received 500,000 pieces of mail, $12,000 in coins and three rooms full of toys and presents. The toys and presents became a stock pile to be shared with other young patients at Lakeville and other state hospitals at Christmas and on their birthdays.

Jerry Lewis, even then national chairman of MDA, arranged a closed circuit television show for the boy on his birthday, direct from Hollywood.

Appearing with Lewis were Eddie Cantor, Dinah Shore, Eddie Fisher, Hugh O'Brien, George Gobel, Pinky Lee, Jimmy Dodd and the Mouseketeers, the Skylarks, Mary Costa and others. All singing, dancing and clowning with personal messages to Francis. All of this talent performing free to help make a lonely little boy happy on his birthday.

No one realized it at the time, but the closed circuit show was the forerunner of today's Muscular Dystrophy Telethon that this year raised over $30 million to help others like Francis.

Francis, whose true identity was shielded because of a tragic family background, died in November, 1966, a few weeks after his 18th birthday. He was remembered for 10 years with cards and every birthday and Christmas.

Bosworth for the past three years with Richard J. Koch, executive secretary Quincy Park-Recreation Board, has served as co-chairman of the Quincy-South Shore Jerry Lewis Telethon Committee and co-coordinator of The Quincy Sun based Labor Day Muscular Dystrophy Pledge Center. Koch is a past recipient of the "Citizen of the Year" award.

The committee and pledge center have raised nearly a quarter of a million dollars in those three years, over $100,000 of it this year.

Bosworth's work on the committee that stages the Quincy Telethon for Muscular Dystrophy each Labor Day weekend was acknowledged in the mailgram

"Congratulations on being named 'Citizen of the Year' by the Quincy Jewish War Veterans," it said.

"It's a terrific honor and well-deserved tribute to your many years of selfless dedication to helping young people -- including 'My Kids'."

"I'm deeply grateful to you and all the members of the Quincy Telethon Committee for devoting so much of your time, love and energy to the fight against muscular dystrophy."

Herbert concluded:

"The great educator Horace Mann once wrote: 'Be ashamed to die until you have achieved some victory for humanity.' Henry has certainly achieved his victory for humanity in his work for the victims of muscular dystrophy. And Henry will go on for many years doing such good works in his quiet and modest way."

"So there we have Henry Bosworth--the humanitarian, the conscientious newspaperman, the tolerant and concerned citizen and a man with a deep love of his community and its people. He surely has earned the honor today of being named as "Citizen of the Year" by Post 193 of the Quincy Jewish War Veterans of the United States."

Nearly 500 youngsters in the three elementary grades entered the two contests.

Honorable mention honors were won by 467 students. Certificates will be presented to them at a later date.

The Poster winners are:

• Patty Feeney, a fourth grader at the St. Ann's School in Wollaston, whose poster proclaimed "My State Constitution gives me the right to speak out for what is right". Patty's teacher is Mrs. Mary Quincy and her art teacher is Sister St. Joseph.

• Joelle Roden, a fifth grader in Miss Jean Gormley's class at the Beechwood Knoll School, who drew a poster depicting the State House, where the constitution is stored. Children around the State House hold signs reading "We

The People..." and "Liberty For All".

• Andy Ayer, a Wollaston School sixth grader, who superimposed a drawing of John Adams, one of the drafters of the constitution, on a background of the historic document. The poster

• Carol Liuzza, a sixth grader in Miss Dorothy Green's class at the Merrymount School, wrote the winning essay. In it, she noted, "without the Constitution, I wouldn't be living in a free society." The two most important freedoms to her, Carol said, are the freedom of religion and freedom of education.

The contests were coordinated by John Harrington, director of social studies for Quincy Public Schools. Patricia Toland of the school committee and Miss Sheila McIntyre were co-chairwomen of the contest. The contests were sponsored by The Quincy Sun in cooperation with the Massachusetts Constitution Bicentennial.

The winning posters and essay, along with a random sampling of the other 364 poster entries, are on display in The Sun office, 1372

Hancock St., Quincy Center. The winning entries will be displayed later this month in City Hall.

The four winners were invited to take part in ceremonies noting the 244th anniversary of John Adams' birth. They joined U.S. Navy Captain Frank Sequeira and Rev. Keith Munson of United First Parish Church in placing a birthday wreath on Adams crypt in the historic church.

Later, they were presented their savings bonds in The Sun office by Editor and Publisher Henry Bosworth.

Bosworth also presented them with copies of The Sun's special Massachusetts Constitution Bicentennial supplement.

Tracking Down Pollution

Smoke-Testing Beach Drains

By TOM HENSHAW

If you live in certain sections off Wollaston Beach and you spot smoke coming out of the kitchen sink, walk, don't run, to the Public Works Department.

There's nothing to be alarmed about right now but it may mean that storm drains and sewer lines have become connected in or near your home and the result is pollution at Wollaston Beach.

Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti announced last week a $125,000 contract to the engineering firm of H. W. Moore Associates of Boston to find out where the pollution is coming from. The money comes from a city sewer bond account.

Work crews from Moore and Eastern Pipe Service of Hudson, N.H., will be dropping smoke bombs into the sanitary and storm sewer systems in an effort to trace the leaks.

The smoke, Ricciuti explained, is not dangerous. It is odorless, non-toxic and leaves no residues. But it could signal future danger from gases building up in the house.

"We want to know about it the moment it shows up in the house," said Ricciuti. "It shouldn't come out in the house at all. If there is a connection in the house it could be harmful."

The areas of Atlantic and Wollaston to be tested include:

- Webster St. from East Squantum St. to Quincy Shore Drive.
- Portions of Sharon Rd., Milton Rd., Hollis Ave., Herbert Rd., Canton St., Edwin St., French St., Marshall St., and Arnold Rd.
- A section of Watkins St. between Cleaves and Sachem Sts.
- A portion of Wendell Ave. adjacent to Bradley Field and the Eastern Nazarene College dormitories.

The city has been under court order since 1974 to clean up and reduce the choliform count at Wollaston Beach.

City Solicitor Robert Fleming said that a consent decree has been issued to Quincy, effectively ending the court order if the city abides by certain guidelines.

The guidelines, he said, require that testing be done by Dec. 1, that repairs to the storm drains be finished by Feb. 1, that retesting be accomplished by Feb. 15, and the final report submitted by March 1.

Fleming called the schedule "unrealistic" and said he will ask the attorney general's office to revise the dates to permit more time for the job.

"Our target is 1980," he said.

Robert Carleo of Moore Associates said the first phases of the project -- the sampling of the current choliform count at Wollaston Beach -- began last week and the second phase -- cleaning the pipes -- started Monday.

In about two weeks, Carleo said, flyers will be handed out to residents of the streets involved notifying them of the smoke testing.

"Should smoke enter your home," the flyers will explain, "this is not cause for alarm."

"You should simply notify a member of the crew performing the smoke testing, or the Department of Public Works, and they will investigate the source."

The flyer will also request that residents keep all dogs indoors or on a harness while the testing is going on.

The testing crews also plan to use dyes to trace the path of storm water and sewage. Some may be put in toilets of homes on the streets being tested to check the flow of water.

Ricciuti warned that it is important to notify the Public Works Department if they spot smoke in the house and show workers where it comes from.

"If smoke can enter your residence," he said, "this also means that sewer smells, roaches and other pests have had free access to your home through the same opening."

Pedestrian Lights Promised Next Summer At Wollaston Beach

MDC Commissioner Guy Carbone has promised that pedestrian safety lights will be installed and in operation by next season on Quincy Shore Drive at Wollaston Beach.

Sen. Paul D. Harold (D-Quincy) provided Carbone with a personal tour of the area to show him first-hand the danger from motor vehicles for persons trying to cross the boulevard.

"I wanted Commissioner Carbone to see for himself the serious danger and need for these lights," Harold said.

"The MDC has promised for years to install pedestrian lights near the Wollaston Light Shop, and residents of the area have repeatedly submitted petitions and asked for help, but other projects always got priority in the past."

Harold has been working with residents of the area since last April to get the project off the drawing boards. Funds are available, but delays developed during the bidding process.

Pvt. Arthur Gerwer Receives Parachutist Badge

Pvt. James A. Gerwer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gerwer of 380 Beale St., Wollaston, recently received a Parachutist Badge upon completion of the three-week airborne course at the U.S. Army Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga.

During the first week of training, students undergo a rigorous physical training program and receive instruction in the theory of parachuting. The second week they receive practical training by jumping from 34-foot and 250-foot towers. The final week includes five static-line parachute jumps.

Wollaston Lutheran Breaks Ground For $7 Million Complex

Rev. Frank Bauer of Wollaston Lutheran Church celebrated a double milestone Sunday—the celebration of his 25th year as pastor and groundbreaking for a 150-unit apartment building sponsored by the church for the elderly and handicapped.

A 10 a.m. service at Wollaston Lutheran celebrated Rev. Bauer's personal milestone. He is also in his 10th year as executive director of Wollaston Lutheran Church Apartments, Inc., which also owns Fenno House, an apartment building for the elderly at 540 Hancock St.

Rev. Louis Bier of Westwood, Pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, West Roxbury, was speaker at the service.

Groundbreaking for the $7 million Town Brook House, at 45 Brackett St., followed the service.

Among officials taking part in the groundbreaking ceremonies were Mayor Arthur Tobin, Congressman Brian Donnelly, State Rep. Thomas Brownell, Ward 1 councillor Leo Kelly, Council President John Quinn, and the board of directors of Wollaston Lutheran Church Apartments, Inc.

The building is being funded by a $6.8 million grant from the Federal Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Rev. Bauer commented: "We are grateful to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development for being able to break ground for another elderly-handicapped apartment building. This cooperative effort between the federal government and the church is a dream for senior citizens and the handicapped for distinctive, dignified, secure apartment living at an affordable rental."

Federal funding will guarantee that rent will be no more than 25 percent of a resident's adjusted income, Rev. Bauer said.

Members of the board of directors of Wollaston Lutheran Apartments, Inc. are Chairman Otto Staehr, Treasurer and Clerk Jean Bauer, Gunnar Munnick, Edward Bencks, Frederick Cashman, Lawrence Ordway and Rev. Bauer, all of Quincy, Charles Wood and I. Bradford Hutchinson of Braintree, J. David Congalton of Pembroke and Richard Mooney of Weymouth.

BLOOD DONORS AND ASPIRIN

Normally blood is not accepted from donors who are taking medication, both for their and the recipient's good. But apparently many people don't consider aspirin as a drug; at least they don't mention it when they are asked at the blood bank if they have taken any medication.

A recent experiment at a blood donor station showed that 18 percent of women donors and 8 percent of the male donors have taken from 2 to 6 aspirins or the equivalent in other salicylate preparations shortly before giving blood, but all said they had taken no drugs. The levels were high enough to harm a recipient sensitive to salicylate.

There is another reason not to take aspirin before giving blood. Donors with fever are not accepted for obvious reasons. Aspirin suppresses fever and may mask an infection which would veto a donation at the time. Don't take aspirin before giving blood.

Christmas Poster Contest Sponsored By Festival Committee

"Christmas Around The World" is the theme of this year's poster contest sponsored by the Quincey Festival Committee.

All students in Quincey public and private schools, grades 1 through 6 are eligible, according to contest co-chairman Richard Koch and Gloria Noble.

Posters must be submitted by Nov. 16 to Koch, 241 Newbury Ave., North Quincey; Mrs. Noble, 14 Myopia Rd., Wollaston, or the Quincey Center Business and Professional Association office, 1416 Hancock St.

Prizes will be awarded in two categories, according to Festival

Committee Chairman George Fay. A $100 U. S. Savings bond will be awarded to the best posters in grades 1 through 3 and grades 4 through 6. A $25 bond will be awarded to the second-best poster in each category.

Poster entries must be no larger than 22 by 28 inches, the chairpersons said.

They also suggested that teachers participating in the contest choose the best entries in the class for nomination for the finals or allow the children to vote.

This is the second year the committee has sponsored a poster contest.

Brocton Artist Guest Demonstrator For Quincey Art Association

The Quincey Art Association will meet Tuesday, Nov. 13, at the Salvation Army Headquarters, 6 Baxter St. at 7:30 p.m.

Guest demonstrator will be

Marlene Josephs of Brockton who studied in Pennsylvania under a full scholarship and has her own studio and gallery in Brockton. She has been teaching for 12 years.

Her paintings are in many galleries and private collections in this country and abroad. One of her paintings, "Sunday Morning" was used as a cover for the September, 1978 issue of Yankee magazine and is included in the 1980 Yankee Recipe Calendar. She has won numerous awards for her work.

Visitors and prospective members are invited to attend. Refreshments will be served.

Community Theatre In 'Frankenstein'

The Quincey Community Theatre will present its first production of the season, Mary Shelley's "Frankenstein" Nov. 9, 10, 13, 16, 17 at 8 p.m. at Broad Meadows Junior High Auditorium, 50 Calvin Road, Quincey.

The play provides macabre humor to relieve the mounting tension of the creature's impending vengeance.

"Frankenstein" is directed by Tony Allicata who has acted and directed in numerous shows throughout the Boston area, namely "P.S. Your Cat is Dead" and "The Indian Wants the Bronx."

Evelyn Griffin, assistant director, has acted in several productions of the Quincey Community Theatre: "Middle of the Night," "The Gingerbread Lady," "Mousetrap" and "View from the Bridge."

The cast includes Bob Cotto, Linda Sullivan, Paul DeGrassie, Karen Kennedy, Mike Coleman, Norma Assad, Eric Bogle and Lisa Snowe.

Tickets for Frankenstein will be available at Colonial Bakery and Pizza Chef, Wollaston; Sawyer's Campus Shop and Baskin-Robbins, Quincey Center; and Balducci's Pizza, North Quincey. Tickets will also be available at the door. For further information call 479-4634.

CAST MEMBERS for the Quincey Community Theatre's production of "Frankenstein" are (seated) Paul DeGrassie of Quincey and Karen Kennedy of Hull and (standing) Michael Coleman and Norma Assad of Quincey, Linda Sullivan of Boston and Eric Bogle of Weymouth.

Christmas Floats Meeting Thursday

All persons preparing floats for this year's Christmas Festival parade are urged to attend a meeting of the Festival Committee tonight (Thursday).

The committee's meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. at 55 Sea St.

A judges' seminar, to brief the participating organizations on what the judges will look for before and during the parade, has been scheduled by Float Coordinator Richard Venna. Hugh Sloan, art coordinator for Weymouth public schools, and the three parade judges will also take part in the seminar.

All Festival Committee members are also urged to attend the meeting.

Over three times as many floats as last year have already entered the 1979 parade, reports Fay, with more expected.

'The Hiding Place' At Eastern Nazarene Church Saturday

"The Hiding Place", a movie on the life of former Nazi prisoner Corrie ten Boom will be shown Saturday, Nov. 10, at 7 p.m., at Wollaston Church of the Nazarene, Eastern Nazarene Campus.

The ten Booms became involved in the Dutch Underground during the German occupation of World War II. They hid Jews in a secret room built in their house, aiding them in their escape from the Nazis.

As a result of a raid by soldiers,

Corrie's family was taken prisoner and Corrie was sent to the concentration camp, "Ravensbrück".

The book "The Hiding Place", portrays the suffering and triumph of Corrie and her family, and has been read by millions of people.

Taleb Grotto To Hold Flea Market, Band Concert

Taleb Grotto will hold its annual flea market Saturday Nov. 10, and Sunday, Nov. 11, 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. at Masonic Temple, 1170 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Refreshments will be available, and door prizes will be awarded.

Booths will be operated by well-known vendors. Other interested exhibitors may call Wallace Whynot at 767-0019.

A small admission donation is asked.

Marines To Honor Bellotti For Veterans Preference Support

The Caddy Detachment, Marine Corps League of Quincy, will present Atty. Gen. Francis Bellotti with two awards Sunday honoring his defense of Massachusetts' veteran's preference statute.

That statute, which gives the edge to veterans in hiring for many state jobs, has been under fire from women's groups, who call it discriminatory.

Bellotti, a Quincy resident, represented the state in defense of that statute in a suit before the U.S. Supreme Court. The high court upheld the constitutionality of the statute by a 7-2 vote.

The Caddy Detachment will present a Distinguished Citizen's Medal to Bellotti Sunday for his support in that legal battle, according to member and past state commandant Leo Cardarelli. A similar National Distinguished Citizen's award will be awarded to Bellotti, on behalf of the national Marine Corps League, by Caddy Detachment Commandant David Dunderdale.

The Caddy resolution seeks to honor Bellotti for "his determination, courage and true grit in this fight for the veteran despite the many obstacles thrown in his way by our Former Liberal Governor and his Administration."

A late addition to the agenda was discussion of the slaying of 4 persons by the Ku Klux Klan in Greensboro, North Carolina.

The Coalition has, from its conception, opposed the openly racist activities of the Ku Klux Klan. This particular unjustified murdering done by the Klan has alerted the Coalition to the very real danger of the Ku Klux Klan.

Discussion was scheduled to determine the appropriate public stand for the Coalition to take on this issue.

In Answer To Complaints Goodyear Service Store To Upgrade Property

Goodyear Service Store, 1132-1138 Hancock St., told the License Board Tuesday that it will try to upgrade its property in answer to complaints from neighborhood residents.

The complaints concern tires piled outside the building, snow pushed onto sidewalks during the winter making walking difficult for elderly residents, employees, unresponsive to complaints, and other matters.

Terry Stewart, Goodyear District Manager, said he may have been lax in the past and that a storage area could be built for the tires. He also said that the snow problem could be taken care of.

Fire Chief Edward Barry said Goodyear will have to get along with its neighbors. Stewart said he would be glad to talk with abutters about Goodyear's plans to upgrade the property.

According to Nick Passias, of Goodyear's Real Estate Department, the plans include upgrading the interior, removing exterior paneling and painting the concrete block, increasing motor fuel storage from 75-105 gallons, and increasing the service bays from four to six.

In regard to painting of the exterior, Building Inspector Allan MacDonald suggested that Goodyear architects work with the city architectural commission to design an exterior that would be a credit to Goodyear and the city.

Goodyear had applied for a license for the fuel and bay increases Oct. 23. The request was denied because no proof could be presented to the License Board that abutters had been notified.

It was at that meeting that neighbors voiced their opposition to Goodyear's expansion, and presented a petition to that effect signed by 20 residents. They also brought to the board's attention complaints against Goodyear.

The board Tuesday agreed to place the complaints on file.

Fire Chief Edward Barry suggested that Goodyear give a positive presentation of plans before the board votes again on the increases.

In other matters, The License Board:

- Continued for one week a request from the Friends of Quincy Hockey for a one-day all alcoholic license for a dance Friday, Nov. 16, 8:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. in St. Thomas Aquinas Hall.

The representative from the group appeared at the meeting.

- Granted a request from the Sacred Heart Parent Teachers Organization for a one-day all alcoholic license for a dance Saturday, Nov. 10, 8:30 p.m. to midnight at Sacred Heart Hall.

- Agreed to send a letter to C. Y. Woodbury, Blanchard Rd. and Quincy Ave., regarding complaints of fuel stored in parked trucks overnight.

A hearing on the selling of second-hand clothing at the Boston Harbor Marina Antique, Craft and Flea Show, Squantum, was cancelled.

Hot Raiders Host Catholic Memorial

North Quincy's football team is making a great run down the stretch as the Quincy game approaches and Saturday at Veterans Memorial Stadium the Raiders will seek their fifth win in six games when they host Catholic Memorial in a 1:30 p.m. non-league game.

North, which lost its first three games and at one time was 1-4, gained its first shutout last Sunday, topping Weymouth South, 13-0, at Weymouth for its fourth win in five games to even its record at 4-4.

Memorial, a member of the Catholic Conference, is 3-4 and North hopes to avenge last year's defeat.

Rick Anderson, who played only on defense until three weeks ago, then ran for 117 yards in the win over Brookline, had a fantastic day at Weymouth as he rushed for 155 yards and had an 82-yard run nullified by a penalty.

Pat Carroll also went over 100 yards and the Raiders unleashed a furious ground game with more than 300 yards rushing. Bill Dailey was another big gainer and Jack Brown played another good game.

North - Catholic Memorial Game On WJDA Saturday

Radio Station WJDA will carry the play-by-play of Saturday's North Quincy-Catholic Memorial football game at Veterans Memorial Stadium at 1:30 p.m. with Charlie Ross and Roy Lind at the microphone.

The station also will bring in reports of Quincy at Brookline, Cambridge at Weymouth at quarterback.

"Our offense has really picked up, thanks to a large part to Anderson," Coach Dave Burke said. "We thought Leo Graham might be back but he was sidelined again and he is a questionable starter this week against Catholic Memorial."

A big reason for the running of Anderson and Carroll has been the outstanding blocking of fullback Bob McCormick.

Lou DiPietro was singled out for an outstanding game in the offensive line, coming up with a key block on a touchdown run by Anderson. Also praised for their work on offense were Eddie Miller, Jim Dodd, Dave Penzo, Joe South, and Framingham North at Braintree.

Feeney, Joe Mullen, John McNamara and John Buckley. "The blocking was just outstanding today," Burke said.

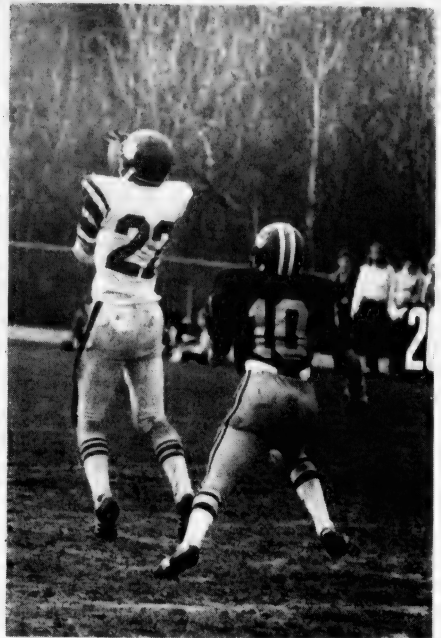

"The defense did another great job and really earned the shutout," Asst. Jack Daymer said. "Weymouth broke one long play but we stopped them and they didn't threaten outside of that. Their coach (Hank Cutting) said it was the best defense his team has seen this year."

Dave Howley played in Graham's place and was outstanding. He had a pass interception and several tackles. Tony Camillo had two interceptions and Chris Petrillo played his usual fine game. Also playing strong defensive games were John Gorczyca, Bill Feeney, Glen Segalla, Glen Ross and Paul O'Sullivan.

Anderson put North on the board with a 37-yard touchdown run on an option play in the opening period but Jack Leone missed kicking the extra point for the first time, his kick going wide.

The Raiders took the second half kickoff and drove 80 yards for their second score as Dailey, Carroll and Anderson all picked up good yardage. Brown scored from the one on a keeper and Leone kicked the point.

Presidents Must Get Ball From Brookline

By TOM SULLIVAN

You can't do anything when you don't have the ball.

Quincy's football team found that out last Sunday when undefeated Brockton controlled the ball for virtually the entire first half, took a 13-0 lead and went on to top the Presidents, 27-6, to improve its record to 8-0.

Quincy, which saw its mark drop to 5-2-1, hopes to rebound Saturday when it faces a good Brookline team (5-3) in a 1:30 p.m. Suburban League game at Northeastern University's Parsons Field. The Presidents were to practice one day this week on the artificial turf at the North-eastern field.

"We lost to a great football team, but we are still a good team and we did a good job in the second half," Quincy Coach Tom Fitzgerald said. "We just couldn't get our hands on the ball in the first half and we also got a few tough breaks. We finally got some good field position in the second half and did much better."

In the opening half Quincy ran just 12 plays to 42 for the powerful Boxers. In that half the Presidents picked up 22 yards on the ground and 17 through the air.

The one bright spot for Quincy was Tommy Brennan, who went over the 1000-yard mark rushing for the season. The little halfback had just seven yards on two carries in the first half, but, with the aid of a 44-yard run, ran for 98 yards in the second half and scored his eighth touchdown of the year. A check of the Quincy records showed that he had 910 yards going into the game and he added 105 to give him 1015 with two games still to go.

"Tommy did a great job in the second half and Scott Richardson also ran well," Fitzgerald said. "Dave Austin passed well in the second half and our defense played another good game."

Quincy's secondary, which had been so outstanding in previous games, was unable to stop Brockton's outstanding passer, Chuck Colombo, who hit on six of eight and two touchdowns. The Boxers' top runner, Greg Dunn, also had a banner day.

Defensive coaches Bill Mavor and Joe Goguen praised Ed Mackey, Ed Quinlan, Bill Murray, Chris Chevalier, Jim McNeil, Lou Matthews, Walter Kilgallon, Bill Flynn, Paul Martin and Ed Iodice.

"Give Tommy Brennan a lot of credit for his work on defense," Goguen said. "The defense was on the field for a good part of the game and he did a great job, considering all the running he did on offense."

Offensively Asst. Coach Pete Chella had good words for Fran Duggan, who continues to play all-scholastic ball. Jeff Heath, who has played well all year and has been superb in the last two games; Tom Rand, Geoff Calfish and Paul Bandera.

Quincy stopped Brockton cold after the opening kickoff but, after picking up a first down, the Presidents' Ron Pettinelli got off a good punt to Brockton's 13. Here the Boxers methodically ate up the clock, held the ball for nearly eight minutes, clicked off six first downs and early in the second period, following a 15-yard penalty for holding, the Boxers had fourth down and long on Quincy's 34. John Asack, on a fake punt, dropped the pass from center but passed in the flat to Dunn, who raced the 34 yards for a touchdown. Asack, kicked the point.

Brockton got the ball back immediately when Brennan fumbled the kickoff, the Boxers ate up nearly another five minutes and Dunn climaxed the drive by scoring from the two. The kick for the extra points was blocked. Colombo was three for three through the air on the drive.

Another Quincy fumble recovered by Brockton on the Presidents' 22 set up the third Brockton TD, Colombo passing to big Tom Dinopoulos for 20 yards. Asack kicked the 20th point.

Quincy finally got its offense rolling and drove 90 yards for a touchdown. Brennan's 44-yard run being the highlight. Brennan, apparently stopped at the line of scrimmage, bulled his way across from the right. A pass for the points failed.

It didn't take Brockton long to score its final touchdown as it marched from its 47 following an inside kick. Sophomore Jay Magee ran for 15 yards and Dunn 19 and Colombo passed to Dunn for the touchdown, giving Dunn three on the day. Asack again kicked the point.

Quincy staged another long drive but still another fumble was recovered by Brockton on its six. Austin later completed three passes in a tow two to Brennan, but the game ended with the ball on Brockton's five.

Quincy actually out-rushed Brockton, 167 yards to 143. The Boxers gained 111 yards through the air on seven for nine, and three touchdowns, while Austin hit on five of eight for 56 yards. Brockton had 13 first downs to 11 for Quincy.

Panthers, Apaches In Title Showdown Sunday

By JIM NABSTEDT

The Point Panthers, undefeated Southern Division champions, will face the North Quincy Apaches, once-beaten Northern Division winners, Sunday at 1 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium for the championship of the Quincy Youth Football League.

The Panthers rolled over the Squantum Sailors, 28-6, last week at Merrymount Park (the games were shifted from the stadium due to Saturday's rain, which resulted in a high school game at the stadium).

Bob Glidden scored on a 37-yard pass interception return for the Panthers and Bob Burns added the two-point conversion. Kevin Cabez scored 40 yards for the second race and also scored the third on a 50-yard punt return. Mark Lamie scored the last TD on an 80-yard run and Cabez converted.

Rick Pettinelli, Pat Glidden and Chris Shaughnessy played well for the Panthers.

The Apaches topped the Quincy Elks, 22-6, in a hard-hitting game. The Elks scored first on a pass interception and 40-yard return by Dave Skinner and they held the lead until halftime.

However, the Apaches came out strong after the intermission and took control of the game with some outstanding blocking and tackling. Kevin Mahoney scored the winning touchdown on a 60-yard punt return and Dan Ceuvrels rushed for the winning two points.

A few plays later Eric Peterson recovered a fumble in the Elks' end zone for a 14-6 lead. Jim McNamara scored the final touchdown from the three and Mahoney rushed for the points.

Apache Coach Tom Carter praised the Elks for their sportsmanship and hard play and hailed his "more offensive line and the defensive performances of Peterson, Mahoney, Bill Campbell and Jim Quinn.

McManara rushed for more than 100 yards and Ceuvrels ran for more than 50. For the Elks Paul Kenney, John Cacciatori, Billy Marston, Dave Skinner, John Meade and John O'Callaghan played outstanding ball.

Bulldogs Finish Third, Qualify For Playoffs

The first-year Quincy Bulldogs ended their regular Boston Senior Park Football League season on a disappointing note last Friday when they lost to the Charlestown T. T., 21-14, at Charlestown.

However, the Bulldogs, the surprises of the league this year, finished third with a 5-3 record and qualified for the playoffs.

Quincy joins the first place Hanna Club (6-1-1), the runnerup Shelburne Cobras (5-2-0) and fourth place Charlestown (3-2-2) in the playoffs. The defending champion South Boston Chippewas (2-3-3) were eliminated as were Eddie's Giants (1-6-1) and the Layden Club (0-5-1).

The Bulldogs hope to join the Eastern Football League next season and also hope to be able to play their home games in Quincy. This year they have had to use East Boston Stadium for their home games.

Four turnovers and a rash of penalties hurt the Bulldogs last week against a team they had earlier defeated, 14-0.

"This was not one of our better games," Coach Bob DeVoe admitted. "Charlestown needed the win to make the playoffs, which we already qualified for, and they just played a better game."

The Bulldogs, who had the best defense in the league and had played 21 straight quarters without giving up a point, started well as they forced Charlestown to punt on its first series and quickly scored when quarterback Bob Scibilia passed to Jack Marshall for 40 yards and a touchdown, but a rush for the two points failed.

Charlestown quarterback Ken Kinney led a 71-yard scoring drive which culminated with a 38-yard touchdown pass to Pat Sweeney. Steve Bryzlyck kicked the go-ahead point.

A Quincy fumble set up another Townie drive with Jack Kitteredge scoring from the one. A pass to Mousie Anderson put Charlestown up, 15-6.

Quincy's Pete Zilonis intercepted a pass and returned it 70 yards for a touchdown and a pass to Marshall moved the Bulldogs to within one, 15-14.

Quincy drove to the Charlestown two but an interception in the end zone ended the threat and in the last period Anderson raced 69 yards for the touchdown which clinched things.

Two more pass interceptions cut off the Bulldogs' final scoring chances.

● Youth Soccer

Mass. Fields Wins, Ties

Mass Fields blanked Wollaston, 2-0, and tied Montclair, 1-1, last week in the North Quincy Kickers Youth Soccer League.

Mark Scanlon, the league's top scorer, put Mass. Fields ahead with a penalty kick and Derek Holt scored the second goal, also on a penalty kick. Patrick Feeney played well in net for Wollaston despite the loss.

Mass. Fields hit the post three times in the tie with Montclair.

Scanlon scored the Mass. Fields goal with an assist for Walter Downing. Louis Morales scored the Montclair goal.

Montclair defeated Parker, 6-0, with Tom Mellor scoring the first goal with an assist for Bill Lynch. Lynch scored with Mellor assisting. Joey Rabs scored on a penalty shot as did Kevin McCarthy, and Lynch scored his second goal with an assist going to Melanson. Mark Britton scored the final goal unassisted.

Wollaston and Squantum tied, 1-1, with Neil Hatfield scoring for Wollaston with an assist for John Corrigan and Bobby Salton tying it up for Squantum with Dave Gerry assisting.

Quincy bombed Parker, 13-0, as Vin Capone scored five goals and Dave Fasano added four. Eric Roukey had two goals and Nick Cangelmi and Bob Bradley one each. Bradley had five assists.

● Roller Hockey

Russo's 7 Goals Spark Minutemen

South Boston's Minutemen cruised to a 27-4 victory over winless Cambridge in the South Shore Roller Hockey Association with Sal Russo leading the charge with seven goals.

Paul Ballou added five, Steve Carter, Pat Quigg and Bob Turner had hat tricks and Jack Gonzales had two goals. The minutemen remain undefeated and tied for first place with Durgin Park. Durgin Park topped Harvey's Fishermen, 14-10, as goalie Jim Buchan, turning in another fine performance, held off the rallying Fishermen. Durgin jumped off to an early lead but Harvey's became unhooked and outscored the winners, 6-1, in the final period. Mike Bondarick, the league's top scorer, had five goals, Mike Shea had three, Tom Ward two and brothers Ron and Rick Drew, Tom Bambrery and Don Robertson each had a goal. Jack McInnis scored four for the Fishermen.

Joe Seleparis played one of his best games as he scored five goals to spark the Savin Hill Red Devils to an 11-5 win over Dorchester's Dare Devils. Jerry Martin and Don Carter scored two goals apiece and Dan Beaton and Bill Clark one each. Don Murphy scored two for Dorchester.

North Takes 4 Medals In Meet

North Quincy had four medal winners in last Saturday's State Coaches Cross Country meet over the Franklin Park course.

In ninth grade girls Sheila Barrett finished fifth and Linda Kennedy ninth among 122 starters over the two-mile course.

In ninth grade boys Paul Seagraben finished eighth among 119 and in 11th and 12th grade boys John Barrett placed 21st among 160 starters.

Saturday Deadline For Church League Registration

Area churches wishing to enter teams in the South Shore YMCA Church School Basketball League are urged to submit entry blanks, complete with necessary fees, to the Quincy YMCA before Saturday.

Late entries cannot be accepted.

Entry blanks are still available at the main desk of the "Y." Team entry fee is $20, with a registration fee of $5 for each player listed on the blank. Birth certificates must also be turned in for players whose birth dates are not on record with the League Advisory Board. The season, for all except the Senior Girls Division, will open Saturday, Dec.

1. The Senior Girls entries are due in on or before Saturday, Dec. 15. Their season will get underway on Saturday, Jan. 5.

Any questions concerning the league should be directed to director Jim Rendle at the YMCA.

Weymouth Savings Promotion

She's Millionaire For A Day

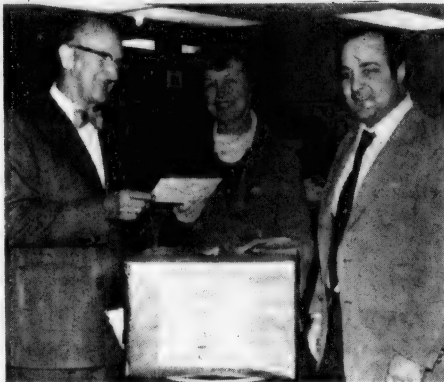

Mrs. Francis J. Cassani of East Weymouth was the winner of the "Millionaire For A Day" drawing held by Weymouth Savings Bank. The drawing was held to celebrate the opening of the bank's new branch at 372 Quincy Avenue, Braintree.

Bank president George H. Thompson presented Mrs. Cassani with a check for one day's interest on $1 million.

Mrs. Cassani was present in the bank when her name was drawn by Mrs. Rose Pearson of North Weymouth.

Other winners in the grand opening drawings are:

- 19-inch color TV—Margaret Wyman, East Weymouth.
- 12-inch black and white TV—Larry Dunlap, Jr., Braintree.
- Basket of champagne—Andrew Decker, 1000 Southern Artery, Quincy.
- Dictionary—Helen Perry, Weymouth.

Investigation Continues

Second Suspicious Fire In Week Strikes Granite St.

A Granite St. plumbing firm was struck by an apparent arsonist early Sunday, less than a week after another suspicious fire gutted the building next door.

The most recent fire hit George H. Peterson, Inc. of 99 Granite St. A fire on Monday, Oct. 29 caused an estimated $200,000 damage to the First American Bank for Savings branch, still under construction, at Granite and Whitwell Sts. A Fire Department spokesman termed that fire a "suspicious origin."

Both fires are under investigation by the State Fire Marshall's office. No definite link between the two fires has yet been established so far a spokesman said.

The fire at the plumbing firm "is definitely arson," said Smith. Two separate fires were found on the premises and entry into the office was forced, he said. The fire was reported at 12:54 a.m., Sunday. There are no suspects and the fire is still under investigation.

Smith added.

Damages caused by the fire, which affected mostly files and office equipment, is still being determined said Smith.

"There was a lot of smoke damage," he said.

The building housed the plumbing offices on the first floor and apartments on the second. The apartments were evacuated during the fire.

Richard A. Fee of Hingham is listed as owner of the building.

Sterling Essay Contest Winners To Be Announced Next Week

Ten Sterling Junior High School teachers are casting ballots in preparation for announcing the winners of next week's fourth annual Sterling American Education Week essay contest.

A total of 281 Sterling students submitted essays this year on the American Education Week theme of "Teach All the Children."

The three winners at each grade level will receive trophies from the Quincy Savings Bank, which co-sponsors the contest with the Student Centered Learning System of the public schools.

The winners and their families will also receive a booklet containing copies of the nine winning essays. Those interested should call Mrs. Helen Higgins at 786-8729.

Contest judges, all from Sterling, are Denise Dalton, Helen Metcalfe, Christine Sullivan, James Snodgrass, Katherine Adams, Karl Smith, Sam Goldfarb, Peter Cella, media specialist; Marcia Gordon, assistant principal; and Paul Breslin, principal.

George Raymond Elected President Of Realtors Board

George Raymond was elected president of the Quincy and South Shore Board of Realtors at the board's annual meeting Monday night.

Raymond will serve a one-year term to begin Jan. 1, 1980 as will the other officers and directors chosen at the Sons of Italy Hall in Braintree.

Also elected were: Eleanor King, first vice-president; James Nuss, second vice-president; Stedman Beckwith, secretary-treasurer; and John Abdelahad, Vito Barresi, Richard Cahill, Joseph Connolly, Virginia Crismond, Edward Flavin, Daniel Lauria and David Walsh, directors.

Hearings Nov. 13 Zoning Change Sought For Shea-Ruscitto Land

The Planning Board will hold a public hearing Tuesday, Nov. 13, at 7:45 p.m. on a proposal to rezone the Shea-Ruscitto property in West Quincy, which includes the city dump, to planned unit development (PUD).

The proposal was filed last May as a Council resolution by City Councillor James A. Sheets, who called PUD "essential for future development of the area" to prevent piecemeal development.

It is currently zoned part Industrial A and part Industrial B. In other public hearings that same night, the Planning Board will take up:

A proposal to change the zoning of land on Adams St.

between Common St. and Old Coach Rd. from Residence B to Residence A to control building on the site of a vacant gas station at the corner of Common and Adams.

A bid by Harold D. Williams to have a restriction removed from land on Angus St., Montclair, so that he can build a two-family house in the Elmwood Park subdivision.

The restriction is that no house can be built on that lot in case the city of Quincy wants to use it to extend Dahlgren St. to connect with Angus St.

The restriction was placed in 1966 when the city approved Williams' plan for the Elmwood Park subdivision.

'Education For 80s' Program At Quincy Junior College

Quincy Junior College will hold an open house on the theme "Education for the 80s" Thursday, Nov. 15, from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. in the Quincy High School Method Center.

Rep. John Finnegan (D-Dorchester), chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, will be the guest speaker.

Several graduates of the Junior College have been invited to speak on their experiences and how their college educations have helped them after graduation.

After the formal program, the faculty and administrators of the college will be available to discuss educational needs and answer questions during a social hour. Coffee and cake will be served.

Adams School Education, Constitution Programs Nov. 14

The staff and pupils of the Adams School have planned a combined observance of American Education Week and the Constitution Bicentennial for Wednesday, Nov. 14.

The program will begin with a classroom visitation for parents and friends, beginning at 9:15 a.m.

Following this, parents will meet in the Media Center to be welcomed by Dr. Henry F. Paterson Jr., principal, and special guests will be introduced.

Refreshments will be served by members of the PTA.

In observance of the Massachusetts Constitution Bicentennial, an historical pageant, entitled, "My Country 'Tis of Thee" will be presented by the sixth grade pupils under the direction of Mrs. Anne Foster and Mrs. Joan Filippone, teachers and assisted by Mrs. Christine Pucci, music teacher.

All parents and friends of the Adams School are cordially invited to attend.

Council Recesses On Election Eve

tonight (Thursday).

Preceding the meeting at 5:30 p.m. will be a session of the Downtown Development Committee to discuss documents pertaining to the proposed Campanelli-Stop & Shop project at the corner of Hancock and Granite Sts.

The City Council, with the opening of the Election Day polls only 12½ hours away, recessed its regular meeting Monday night without even a glance at the agenda.

It will be resumed at 6:30 p.m.

Strand Theater May Close If Game Room Not Approved

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

Owners of the Strand Theater, Quincy Sq., say they are willing to spend $10,000 to construct a game room in the back of the building in an attempt to make the business financially solvent.

Anthony DelPideo of the Strand, told the City License Board Tuesday that the theater is losing $500 to $600 weekly and may have to close Nov. 15, if the financial outlook doesn't improve.

DelPideo said that $150,000 has already been invested in the theater, and that he is willing to gamble what money he has left on a game room.

He said the owners would like to apply for a temporary license to see if they could make a go of the venture.

DelPideo said the game room would be run in the same manner of the theater, and that he would be willing to hire a police detail for Friday and Saturday nights. He said he would be the one to close it after the first complaint.

The game room would have 30 electronic games, and has the approval of businesses abutting the theater, he said.

If the game room proved a success, owners would eventually like to make the theater into a twin movie house, DelPideo said.

License Board members Police Chief Francis X Finn, Fire Chief Edward Barry and Building Inspector Allan MacDonald suggested that owners not spend any money yet.

They also suggested the owners talk with Austin Wickens of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association before submitting a formal license application.

The full License Board toured the area for the proposed game room following last week's meeting.

The entrance is on Maple St. and the room is located in the backstage area which has an 80-foot high ceiling, the only one of its kind in the state, according to DelPideo.

The area also includes two floors of dressing rooms vaudeville performers used more than 20 years ago.

School's Instructional Materials Fair Nov. 13

The 10th annual Quincy Public School's Instructional Materials Fair and Conference will be held Tuesday, Nov. 13, 11:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., at Broad Meadows Junior High School.

Michael Daly, Executive Deputy Commissioner of the Massachusetts Department of Education, will be welcomed to Quincy. Daly will speak at 1:30 p.m. on contemporary issues surrounding policy development at the state level.

Over 150 publishers will display equipment and materials to help meet the variety of challenges facing the modern teacher.

There will also be demonstrations and a variety of sample materials available.

All Quincy staff members are invited to attend. Communities on the South Shore and Greater Boston area are also invited.

Hosting the conference fair are: members of the Quincy School Committee; School Supt. Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon; David P. Tenney, principal, Broad Meadows Junior High School; Allen E. Goldfarb, conference chairman; Vincent E. Quagge, discipline coordinator.

BERMUDA

There's an island in the sun called Bermuda. It's a place where pink and white hibiscus grow. A sunny, friendly place, caressed by gentle Gulf Stream breezes all year round. It's an island where honeymooners go—and come back to, again and again, to toast fond memories over frosty rum concoctions. Bermuda's seas have a color all their own, neither blue nor green but, instead, a bit of both. It's a kind of brilliant color that makes you stop to take a picture—more than once.

The rooftops of the island's frescoed homes and shops are clean and white, as if each one had been freshly scrubbed and bleached for your visit.

Bermuda's winding roads unravel quickly astride a jaunty motorbike. A one-minute lesson is all it takes to become a cycling expert. But remember, in Bermuda, keep to the left!

History buffs will enjoy a visit to the island's ancient fortresses in St. George, where massive cannons, now rusting in their places, once fended off pirate ships in defense of the Union Jack.

A visit to Bermuda is not complete without a shopping trip to Hamilton or historic St. George's to take full advantage of the many bargains in woolens, china, stemware and spirits. A nice way to get there is in a horse-drawn surrey, complete with fringe on top.

Nightlife on the island is indeed an exciting adventure. Steel bands, limbo dancers, and calypso turn each night into a romantic event.

Resort Hotels Large

most offer usual luxury resort facilities & accommodation, porter, bell, room service, beach club, pool, shops, beauty salon, night club/entertainment, restaurants, bars, cycle livery, taxi stand on premises.

Ward 5 Challenge, Also Raymondi, O'Donnell Feud Renews For Ward 2 Committee

The political clash between City Councillor Daniel G. Raymondi and Democratic State Committee woman Kathleen O'Donnell is going to continue into next March's presidential primary.

Two rival slates of candidates for the Democratic Ward 2 Committee, one featuring Raymondi and the other O'Donnell, have been filed for balloting that will take place in conjunction with the primary.

Raymondi most recently turned back a challenge by O'Donnell for the Ward 2 seat on the Council.

On the committee slate with Raymondi are Rep. Robert A. Cerasoli, Sheriff Clifford H. Marshall, Mayor Arthur H. Tobin, Executive Secretary Thomas R. Burke and City Clerk John Gillis.

Joining O'Donnell on the rival slate are former Assessor James P. Papile, former City Budget Coordinator Sarah Saccone and current committeemen George A. McCall and Noel Hadad.

There will also be a contest for the Ward 5 Democratic

Council O.K.'s $350,000 For Full Revaluation

By TOM HENSHAW

The City Council voted by the narrowest of margins Tuesday night to transfer $350,000 to the property appraisal account to hire a commercial firm to reassess the city at full cash value.

The vote was 5-4 with Councillors Leo J. Kelly, Francis X. McCauley, Daniel G. Raymondi and James A. Sheets voting in opposition.

The transfer of funds apparently will take the city out from under a court order handed down by Supreme Court Justice Herbert P. Wilkins demanding such action by the city by Monday, Nov. 19.

The firm that will do the job was not specified, but indications are it will be either P.R.C. Jacobs of McLean, Va., one of the best-known appraisal companies in the business, or Systems Technology of Concord.

Jacobs bid $561,794 on the contract and Systems Technology bid $575,000, an offer that was later reduced to $547,300 when the original bid was discovered to include specifications not in the bidding.

Assessor Chairman John Comer told the Council that the high bid of $738,400 by K. M. Clemishaw of Cleveland was not acceptable and the low bid of $509,000 by Robert J. Finnegan and Associates of Acton would not necessarily

Officials, Nurses Reported 'Optimistic'

Negotiations between city officials and registered nurses from City Hospital continued late Tuesday night in the City Hall office of Mayor Tobin.

State Mediator Roberta L.

crolick said she was hopeful that the two sides could get together on something during the night. She described both city officials and nurses as "optimistic."

Koch Won't Seek Council Recount

Richard J. Koch Jr. has announced that he will not seek a recount of votes in his narrow loss to Joseph J. LaRaia for the third at-large seat on the City Council.

Koch, who lost to LaRaia by 11,210 to 11,013, a margin of 197 votes, has until tomorrow (Friday), 10 days after the election, to ask for the recount, which would cost the city $4,000 to $6,000.

Koch, who is the son of Richard J. Koch, longtime executive secretary of the Park Department, said most of the people who took part in his campaign favored a recount.

"However," he said, "an analysis of past recounts indicates that the possibility of changing election results is remote and can only result in additional disappointments for workers and voters."

There is no reason to doubt the integrity of the Board of Registrars, Election Department supervision or its workers. Each worked hard to insure fair and impartial election day procedure.

"A recount would inflict an additional expense of thousands of dollars for the city and its taxpayers to absorb during a serious fiscal period and there is no assurance that the results would change."

"The recount action would only guarantee the candidate additional publicity without justification to the overburdened taxpayers."

"The city of Quincy and its elected officials are in the midst of a series of crucial municipal problems and it's time for those governing to close ranks in a spirit of unity with the ultimate goal the effective and efficient delivery of public service to the people of Quincy keeping in mind the residents ability to pay and the inflationary cost to the taxpayers."

Early News Deadline For Next Week's Sun

Because of the Thanksgiving Day holiday, there will be an early deadline for news releases for next week's issue of the Quincy Sun.

All releases from Women's clubs, sports leagues and other organizations must be in The Sun office, 1372 Hancock St., Quincy Sq. by 10 a.m. Monday, Nov. 19.

The Sun will be delivered to subscribers Wednesday, the day before Thanksgiving.

$125,000 Needed

'Crisis Shelter' Drive Underway

The Salvation Army, St. John's Church and the City of Quincy are cooperating to start a "crisis shelter" for the city's unfortunate.

About $125,000 must be raised to fund such a shelter, according to Rev. William McCarthy, pastor of St. John's. No such facility, to aid persons needing shelter, care and support, now exists in the city.

The crisis shelter plan was born in mid-October when Major Charles Waddington, commanding officer of the Salvation Army's Quincy community center and his Family Service Director Esther Sanger visited Mayor Arthur Tobin to discuss the need for such a shelter in the city.

By coincidence, later that same day, Tobin was visited by Fr.

The Nurses' Side:

'It's Not Fair To Say We Don't Care--We Do'

By LESLIE THOMPSON

"It's not fair to say that we don't care--because we do!"

That's Jean Leslie, R.N., speaking. She is a member of the Quincy City Hospital nurses committee meeting with the city administration in a contract dispute.

"The patients are getting adequate care and not suffering in any way."

She was responding to people questioning the nurses' dedication to their profession because of the current "sick-out" at the hospital.

As many as 96 nurses called in "sick" during the first 24-hour day, Nov. 6. Since then, the number of sick calls has declined each day, but not yet to the level that would allow restoration of the normal patient capacity. At the current reduced patient population of 194, the hospital loses $30,000 per day in revenue, according to Hospital Director Anthony DeFalco. The hospital's patient capacity is 364.

Pauline Kennedy, president of the Quincy City Hospital Chapter of the Massachusetts Nursing Association says:

"All we want is to be treated as professionals; our patients have been well taken care of. We agree with Mr. DeFalco, that there has always been adequate care. Some nurses have even worked 16 hour shifts to see to it that the quality of care is maintained."

The major obstacle in the negotiations has been salary. The nurses note they have continued to work without a contract for 16 months at a salary below that of other local and comparable institutions including Carney, Waltham, Cambridge City Hospital, New England Medical Center, St. Elizabeth's and Peter Bent Brigham.

"Our peers have received 7-10% increases," says Mrs. Kennedy. "For the administration to withdraw proposals off the table due to city finances is hard to accept. To our knowledge, there has never been any other group of nurses in negotiation this length of time."

The nurses strongly feel they have not been dealt with in good faith. They were upset that Mayor Arthur Tobin was in Washington on business from Wednesday morning until Friday night. Asked why he left the city during the "sick-out", Tobin responded:

"I was assured by Mr. DeFalco and the hospital personnel director Harold Coose that the situation was under control and the hospital adequately covered. I was only a quick plane ride away if any crisis had developed."

"I can't abandon my other responsibilities for one group. I can't run the eighth largest city in Massachusetts on the whims of Pauline Kennedy. And you may quote me."

Mayor Tobin, however, had also praise for the nurses.

"That they want their level of professionalism recognized and expect competitive wages is respected and accepted by us. What they have rendered in service is most commendable and they are to be treated and compensated accordingly."

"The problem is that I must negotiate on the basis of the city's ability to pay. As far as the pay increase is concerned, a percentage would be picked up in the hospital rate structure and the rest would come from budget appropriations."

The nurses say they are upset about meeting their financial responsibilities. Effective in 1982, continuing education will be required to be re-registered as a nurse. "There is some assistance from the hospital for education, but most of the money must come from the nurses," Mrs. Kennedy pointed out. "We feel salaries should be competitive with our peers."

Asked why the nurses have not gone to the other hospitals where the salary is higher, Mrs. Kennedy says:

"I am proud of the wonderful, dedicated group of nurses I am associated with. Many of these nurses have worked here for years and years. That is a life commitment. Though we are disillusioned and frustrated, we all have deep feelings for the hospital and deep respect for our colleagues."

"When a hospital loses experienced personnel, it creates a unique situation of problems. All the groups of workers from technicians to nurses to doctors all work together for a common purpose; the patient."

Concern has been expressed for what would happen if a local disaster should suddenly occur during the "sick-out".

"I am sure we would do what we have done before, and come into work sick whenever we are needed," says Mrs. Kennedy.

Betty McDevott was one of many nurses in attendance at the city council emergency meeting called Sunday, to "Clarify the situation." Following the meeting, as a member of the nurses committee, she went into an 11:00 a.m. negotiation meeting.

"Some of these girls worked all night and came directly here this morning. We asked for a 3 p.m. meeting this afternoon, but the

A 'Sick-Out' Continues

4 Nursing Stations Closed At Hospital

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Four "nursing stations" at Quincey City Hospital were scheduled to be closed Wednesday as a result of the continuing nurses' sick-out there, according to Hospital Director Anthony DeFalco.

A nursing station is a group of adjacent rooms, similar to a ward, handled by the same team of nurses. About 35 patients at four of the less populated of the hospital's 18 nursing stations would be transferred to new rooms sometime Wednesday, DeFalco said.

The "contingency consolidation plan" was made necessary by a one-third drop in patient occupancy at the hospital, which has resulted in a $40,000 daily loss for the city, according to Mayor Arthur Tobin.

The topics of patient care, staffing and the hospital's growing deficit were discussed in a three-hour meeting Tuesday with DeFalco and other aides, Tobin said. The new policy was announced after that meeting.

But DeFalco said later, the patient transfers won't be much of a factor in cutting the hospital's losses.

"It probably won't save me any real money at the moment," DeFalco said. The principal advantage to the consolidation would be to give him added flexibility caring for the patients with his reduced number of nurses, he said.

Some money would be saved in overtime payments to the nurses, Tobin said, although he declined to discuss what other money would be saved by the move.

An average of about 40 nurses per day have called in sick since last Tuesday, according to DeFalco.

Both Tobin and Pauline Kennedy, head of the nurses union bargaining committee, object to the term "sick-out," however. Tobin calls the absences "an illegal walk-out," while Mrs. Kennedy has said that no sick-out or other job action has been approved by the union.

Since the sick-out began, admissions at the hospital have been limited to emergency cases, most surgery has been cancelled and as many patients as possible have been sent home.

The daily "patient census" has dropped from 288 to 190 since the sick-out started, DeFalco said. The hospital's capacity is 364 patients.

The loss of patients, who pay an average $300 per person per day, has cut more than half of the hospital's average $78,000 receipts, Tobin said.

'Nipper' Dognapped $50 Reward Offered

Nipper has been dognapped.

The three-foot tall plastic fox terrier, a resident of Quincey for the past 30 years, was taken sometime Saturday night from his most recent post on the sidewalk at 12 Revere Rd., in downtown Quincey.

Nipper is the symbol of RCA phonographs everywhere ("His Master's Voice") and stood guard over South Shore Television Sales and Service, owned by Remo DeNicola.

"I locked the store at 5:30 Saturday night," said DeNicola, "and he was right there, chained to the window."

"I drove by a few hours later and he was gone. They took part of the chain and the window frame with him."

DeNicola said Nipper is irreplaceable.

"I had him about 30 years," he said. "They don't make Nippers that size anymore."

Ten years ago, Nipper was the victim of another attempted dognapping.

NIPPER

That time the thieves didn't realize he was chained to the building and pulled his head off in the foiled getaway. DeNicola obtained spare parts from another Nipper and patched him up.

DeNicola is offering a $50 reward for Nipper's return.

35-Foot Christmas Tree Erected On McIntyre Mall

A 35-foot blue spruce Christmas tree has been erected on McIntyre Mall to be the focal point of the Christmas tree lighting ceremony scheduled for the day after Thanksgiving.

The ceremony will be held on Constitution Common in front of the new City Hall annex on Friday, Nov. 23, at 6:30 p.m., when Mayor Arthur H. Tobin switches on the holiday lights.

The tree lighting ceremony will initiate a series of Christmas events sponsored by the Christmas Festival Committee of the Quincey Center Business and Professional Association.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Swalnick of 77 Newton Rd.,

Merrymount, donated the tree from the front of their home.

Richard J. Koch, executive secretary to the Park and Recreation Board, said John Koegler, Forestry department director, and Franklin McLaughlin selected the tree from a number of residents who offered trees from their property.

The Forestry Department employees removed it from the Swalnick's property and transported it to the Mall location where it will be decorated and lighted.

Forestry section personnel also have installed the Christmas manger at the Hancock Cemetery and are in the process of providing lights at strategic locations throughout city park land.

DOVE Shelter Providing Home For Battered Women

Dove (Domestic Violence Ended) is now in its second year of providing a shelter and other services for battered women on the South Shore.

The organization, which began operation in September, 1978, provided a temporary home for 103 women, with 170 children, in its first year. In addition, the DOVE 24-hour hotline (471-1234) handled 1,639 calls on wife abuse and similar complaints.

A product of the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women, DOVE began as a volunteer-staffed project. Later, a CETA grant in February, 1979 guaranteed a full-time staff of 15 persons. Volunteers still take part in public speaking on behalf of DOVE, fund raising and other activities from which the CETA employees are prohibited by federal guidelines.

"Although we have a full staff now, we continue to need volunteers and we are strengthening our efforts to ensure permanent funding for DOVE's future," said DOVE president Esmeralda Santiago. "This coming year, we hope to provide more services for the children of victims as well as broaden the housing and employment services offered to our clients."

In addition to shelter and hot line services, staff and volunteer workers offer counseling, court and welfare advocacy and other support services in cooperation with other agencies on the South Shore. These services are provided to both shelter residents and women who choose not to enter the shelter.

DOVE's records for the first year show that victims have ranged from 17 to 69 years old. Women who enter the shelter have an average of three dependent children, whose average age is 6. Most women enter the shelter between noon and midnight, at the end of the week and complaints also increase markedly during the holiday season and the heat of the summer.

The average woman stays at the shelter ten days; the maximum stay allowed is two weeks.

The average male assailant, on the other hand, is 32, employed and often has an alcohol or drug problem.

Among the most difficult decisions faced by a battered woman, according to DOVE, is whether to press charges against her assailant. DOVE's philosophy is to provide the woman with enough information and counseling so that she can make her own decision. About half of the women who sought shelter at DOVE eventually returned home, about half of them with court orders as protection.

DOVE provides counseling for the various factors which may affect a woman's decision - financial dependency, fear of retaliation, lack of job skills and low self esteem.

City License Board Told:

Oil Odor To Be Corrected

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN
 Clifford Erwin of Northeast Petroleum told the License Board Tuesday that he will correct oil odor problems at C. Y. Woodbury which is owned by Northeast.

Building Inspector Allan MacDonald said trucks parked at Woodbury, 117 Quincy Ave., had saturated the crushed stone surface with oil and neighbors had complained about the odor.

Fire Chief Edward Barry said that a deputy from the Fire Department had inspected the area last week and couldn't see any oil on the ground.

Barry also said that Woodbury had been in operation for many years and has a good reputation, and now has the opportunity to correct the problem for people in the area.

Abutter Guido Cellucci asked the board if a permit was needed to store fuel in tanks of cars outdoors. City Clerk John Gillis said that a permit was only needed for storage of fuel in tanks of cars within a building.

In another matter, Health Inspector Dr. Robert McKeogh reported that problems had been resolved regarding the selling of second hand clothing at the Boston Harbor Marina Antique, Craft & Flea Show.

McKeogh said he spoke with operators of the show and that no second hand clothing will be sold without notifying the License Board.

He also said the marina will notify the board a week in advance of any new food concessions at the show, and that periodic inspections will be made.

A hearing on the selling of second hand clothing at the show had been withdrawn at Dr. McKeogh's request from last week's agenda.

In other action, the License Board:

- Agreed to send a letter to owners of the Strand Theater, Quincy Sq., requesting specific plans for a game room, tentatively named "Back Stage Arcade". A list of plans was sent to the board Friday, but neither of the owners appeared at Tuesday's meeting.

- Granted a request from the Renegades Drum & Bugle Corps for tag day permits for Nov. 23-24, with the stipulation that no soliciting be done at intersections.

- Granted a one-day all alcoholic license to the Friends of Quincy High Hockey for a dance Nov. 16, 8:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m., at St. Thomas Aquinas Hall, Houghs Neck. The license fee was waived because proceeds from the dance will benefit the high school.

- Granted a one-day all alcoholic license to the Squantum Softball Team for a benefit dance Nov. 16, 8 p.m. to 1 a.m., at the Knights of Columbus Hall, North Quincy.

- Granted subject to a routine police check, change of manager of the Sagamore Grille, 78a-78b Sagamore St., from the late Walter R. Sweeney to Walter R. Sweeney III.

- Granted Joseph and Marguerite Hurley, 230 Washington St., a permit to store 8,000 gallons of gasoline underground. The permit is subject to inspection of the establishment by the fire and building inspectors.

- Moved to have the manager of Parkway Mobil appear before the board next week in reference to a recent court case.

- Continued for one week a request from Anthanasios Kotoulas of Braintree for a common victualer license for Sam's Restaurant, 423a Hancock St., formerly Hassan's Lunch. The joint inspection team will inspect the establishment as well as the 1100 Restaurant, of which Kotoulas is a member of the corporation.

- Granted, subject to approval by the joint inspection team, a common victualer license to Richard J. Burke, for Burke's Seafood, 61 Billings Rd. All improvements must be made within 30 days.

A request from the Squantum Yacht Club for a change of license from club-wine and malt to club-all alcoholic was withdrawn without prejudice.

Managers of the club must notify the three abutters and the MDC of the proposed change before reapplying.

Also withdrawn without prejudice was a request from Peter Kelly of Kelly's Pub and Grub, 27 Billings Rd., for a seven rather than six day all alcoholic common victualer license.

Ice Skating Lessons At Shea Rink

Ice skating lessons for adults and children 12 years old and older will be held Tuesdays at 8 p.m. beginning Nov. 20, at the MDC Shea Rink, West Quincy.

Classes are for beginner, intermediate or advanced hockey or figure skaters.

Conducting the classes will be Beverly Messina, of Braintree, a Boston College graduate who has been instructing professionally for over five years.

To register, call 969-3816, Monday through Friday.

St. Mary's Students Volunteer Service For 'Vocation Week'

Inspired by Pope John Paul's message to youth, the over 250 students of St. Mary's School in West Quincy took part in "National Vocation Week" recently.

The students scheduled a week of activities based on the theme "We are called to be Christians." As evidence of their faith, the students pledged over 450 hours of service to persons around them.

These include help for those in hospitals and nursing homes, and the elderly and shut-ins, said Sister Mary Owen, principal of St. Mary's School. The volunteer services include errands, clean-up work and other duties.

"They are striving to take to heart their Christian vocations and to have St. Mary's make a difference in Quincy," said Sister Mary.

As part of the week's celebrations, the school also held a vocation rally. Two Stonehill College students, Donna Iavicoli and Ron Britto addressed the students on "What It Means To Be A Christian Today."

After joining in prayer and song, the students left the church hall and released hundreds of balloons, symbolizing their dreams for the future.

Camp Fire Girls Plan Annual Candy Sale

Camp Fire Girls will be knocking on doors in Quincy for their fund-raising Candy Sale Nov. 16 through Dec. 2.

This year Camp Fire Girls will be selling Toffee Miniatures and Mint Truffles, made by the Heath Candy Company. Camp Fire serves 3000 youth on the South Shore. Proceeds from the sale will help the girls finance their special activities and projects, develop their interests and to become self-sufficient within an informal, supportive environment. The Candy Chairwoman in Quincy is Sylvia Gelsomini, 75 Webster St. North Quincy.

Denture Screening Clinics Scheduled For Seniors

The Nurses' Side Of Issue

KIDNEY TRANSPLANT Dialysis Association Week is proclaimed by Mayor Arthur Tobin for the week of Nov. 12-17. With Tobin are Gino Giorgi and Mrs. Marlene Adams, both of Quincy, co-chairmen of the association's fund drive committee. The committee will hold a fund-raising dance at the Morrisette Post Nov. 17.

Mayor insisted on 11 and here we are. We will be here all day and we brought our own coffee. We have lots of coffee, cream and sugar and we have lots of stamina."

Jean Leslie added: "Many nurses that have called in have legitimate sicknesses. I myself have not called in, though I am under a doctor's care for a back injury that has only allowed me to work four hour days. Since this started, I have worked eight hour days to be sure of coverage. I am a supervisor for the operating room."

Has she thought of leaving because of the salary problem? "I have worked here for 10 years and I graduated from the nursing school here. I have looked elsewhere."

"I have spoken to the Quincy administration. I have been involved in active bargaining since I have been here. But I would not leave now - you don't walk out on a sinking ship."

Fr. William Walsh, chaplain at QCH, believed the nurses are doing a good job and that they have just cause for what they are doing.

"They conduct themselves in a fine Christian way," he says.

"They spend their days in fine Christian service. Justice should be rendered to them. They should be accommodated and complimented on how they have handled themselves these past 16 months. I'm sure what they are doing is for the good of the city."

GOLD MEDAL is awarded to Atty. Gen. Francis Bellotti by Anthony Melrick of the William Caddy Detachment of the Marine Corps League during Sunday's Veterans' Day ceremonies. Receives Distinguished Service Award

'I Shall Always Defend You', Bellotti Promises Vets

"I cannot promise you many things," Atty. Gen. Francis N. Bellotti told a Veterans' Day audience, "but I can promise you this:

"As you have always defended me, so shall I always defend you." Bellotti, a Navy veteran of World War II himself, was the main speaker at the ceremonies conducted by the Quincy Veterans Council outside the Adams Academy building.

He also collected a Distinguished Service Award from the Marine Corps League for his successful fight to establish the principle of veterans preference before the U. S. Supreme Court.

"I am pleased that we won," said Bellotti, "not just because it was a legally sound decision, not just because it was morally and legally right, not just because veterans deserve it."

"I am pleased because the strength of a nation, its ability to assume moral leadership within the community of nations, is almost directly proportional to its commitment to those who stood up to defend it in time of war."

"The soldier cannot be pushed up front to defend us in time of war and then, pushed to the back behind us and forgotten in peace."

Bellotti was proposed for the national Marine Corps League award by the Caddy Detachment of Quincy.

Mayor Arthur H. Tobin announced that the annual Thanksgiving Dinner for Quincy senior citizens will be held Thursday, Nov. 22, at 1:30 p.m. at Montello's, Washington St., Quincy Point.

HONORING THE VETERANS in Sunday's ceremonies were Anthony Pusateri, Caddy Detachment Past Commandant; Lawrence Perrette, past commander of the Quincy Veterans Council; former Mayor Thomas Burgin, Mayor Arthur Tobin, Atty. Gen. Francis Bellotti; former Mayor James McIntyre, and Thomas Pennor, past commandant of the Caddy Detachment.

and of the country as a whole is so deeply rooted in the public schools, you as a parent must also be aware of a special duty to communicate to other members of the community just how much the schools do for all citizens. People who do not have children in school do not always realize how important it is that the particular needs of every student—whether from the mainstream of the society or from a special group—be met in the classroom. They need to know why every cut in a school budget is a direct threat to the future. They need to know, too, what programs the school provides not only to help students develop essential skills, but also to prepare them to cope with the problems of the future. They need too to hear about the importance of teaching media in the classroom and the necessity for keeping such equipment and materials available to all students. You as a parent can help others distinguish the real contemporary essentials from the trappings that are sometimes mistaken

Teach All The Children

Every child in the United States has the right to learn. The laws that guarantee equal opportunities to all persons, regardless of race, cultural background, skin color, or religious persuasion, include education among those opportunities. Girls and boys, men and women alike, share the right to learn. The handicapped, as well as non-handicapped students also share this right. Indeed, the right to learn is what public education is all about. It is the purpose of our public schools to teach all children. Your child's teacher is dedicated to that task, and every child in the classroom has an equal chance to absorb the knowledge and experience available there.

What does this mean to you, the parent?

For one thing, you can be assured that your child has many opportunities every day to participate in all of the rich resources of the school. You can be more confident today than ever before that no child will be consciously discriminated against because of a handicap, the distinguishing marks of race, a different language, or a sex stereotype. You can feel secure in the knowledge that your child's teacher is prepared to bring experience, expertise, and understanding to meet the particular needs of each student.

William Callahan, 77, City Assessor For 28 Years

A funeral Mass was celebrated Saturday for William J. Callahan, 77, former city assessor, lawyer, businessman and advisor to several mayors.

Mr. Callahan, a lifelong Quincy resident, died Nov. 6 at Quincy City Hospital. Mayor Arthur Tobin ordered flags in the city lowered to half-staff in his honor.

He was a city assessor from 1942 to 1970, the last 10 years as chairman.

A graduate of Bentley College and Northeastern University Law School, Mr. Callahan was a lawyer since 1932.

He was also a former treasurer of Watch City Cooperative Bank, supervisor for Homeowners Loan Corp. and lawyer for the Howard Johnson Company.

He was also a member of the Quincy Bar Association and the Quincy-South Shore Board of Realtors, director of the Quincy Taxpayers Association and chairman of the Quincy Industrial Revenue Financing Authority.

Husband of the late Mrs. Dorothy (McCarthy) Callahan, he is survived by a son, Lawrence of Quincy, a brother, John and a sister Margaret Callahan, both of Quincy, and five grandchildren. He is also father of the late William J. Callahan, Jr.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at Most Blessed Sacrament Church, Houghs Neck, serving as honorary pallbearers were Mayor Arthur Tobin and former Mayors Thomas Burgin, James McIntyre and Assessors Board Chairman John Comer, City Clerk John Gillis and Sgt. Joseph Nichols. Burial was in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery. Funeral arrangements were by Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, Independence Ave., Quincy.

Richard T. LaBrecque, 71, Patriot Ledger Reporter

Funeral services were held Saturday for Richard T.

LaBrecque, 71, who served 33 years as a staff member of the Patriot Ledger.

Mr. LaBrecque, a lifelong resident of Quincy, died Nov. 7 in Norfolk County Hospital, Braintree after a long illness.

Born in Quincy, he was a graduate of Quincy High and studied at Boston University and Harvard University. In his early years, he reported for New York and New Jersey newspapers, as well as the Boston Post.

Most of his career with the Ledger was spent covering and editing Quincy news. Much of his writing also focused on travel features and foreign affairs. He eventually became district editor.

He is survived by a son, Richard T. LaBrecque, Jr. of Lexington, Ky.; a brother, Phillip A. LaBrecque of Quincy; a sister, Frances Pompeo of Weymouth and two grandchildren.

Funeral services were held in the Wickens and Troupe Funeral Home. Burial was in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

Services Friday For Edna B. Austin, 93, City's First Councilwoman

Some 400 leaders of the Quincy community jammed Broad Meadows Junior High School back in 1960 to pay tribute to Mrs. Edna B. Austin when she retired after 15 years as the city's first woman city councillor.

Heartfelt telegrams were read from Richard B. Wigglesworth, the ambassador to Canada; Henry Cabot Lodge, the ambassador to the United Nations; and Sen. Leverett Saltonstall, all of whom were among her friends.

"If all her friends were included tonight," said toastmaster Frank Remick, "we would have had to hold this in the Harvard Stadium."

Flags in Quincy flew at half-staff this week for Mrs. Austin, teacher, lawyer, stateswoman and civic leader, who died Tuesday in City Hospital at the age of 93.

Services will be Friday at 11 a.m. at Deware Brothers Memorial Chapel, 576 Hancock St., Wollaston. Burial will be in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

Visiting hours at the funeral home will be Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m.

A native of Springvale, Maine, she was graduated from Bates College in 1906 and taught school in Connecticut and Montana before marrying W. Scott Austin and settling in Quincy.

She established a long string of firsts in Quincy, — first woman city councillor, founder of the Quincy League of Women Voters.

EDNA B. AUSTIN

co-founder and honorary vice president of the United Nations Council.

She wasn't the first woman lawyer in Quincy but that may have been because she started late, getting her law degree from Portia Law School in Boston in 1929 at the age of 43.

Mrs. Austin started her political career in 1942, winning an at-large seat on the city council. She lost it by a mere 400 votes two years later, then bounced back in 1947 and remained until 1960.

A lifelong Republican, she was a member of the Quincy Women's Republican Club, the Wollaston Women's Club and once served as an officer in the State Federation of Women's Clubs.

McCarthy, who wanted to talk about the need for a shelter to help the crisis victims who come to St. John's for help. Tobin indicated his support of such a project and appointed Carol Pisano, assistant city planner, to coordinate the city's efforts on behalf of the plan.

Since then, a committee consisting of about 100 persons has been formed, according to Fr. McCarthy. The group will begin a fund-raising drive in earnest around the beginning of next year with an eye towards possibly opening the facility next spring. Committee members are now investigating sites in "residential B" zoned neighborhoods that could house 20 to 25 people, he added.

The crisis shelter would be run and maintained by the Salvation Army. After the $125,000 starting price, the shelter would be financed by a "room and board" fee paid by social service agencies sponsoring a resident at the shelter. Fr. McCarthy said. The Salvation Army, St. John's and other organizations would pay a fee of about $10 per night for each person referred to the shelter.

Boys Choir Debuts At First Church Of Squantum

The newest choir at the First Church of Squantum made its singing debut Sunday morning during the worship service.

The group, the Boys' Choir, consists of seven boys, all under the age of 12.

They are Brian Colwell, Greg Gale, Andrew Ogilvie, David Scott, Christopher Shionis, Jim Sumner and Matthew Sumner. The group is directed by Mary Ruth Scott and Kathi Fluhr.

The anthem they sang was "Thank You, Lord" by Diane Davis. Also participating in the service were Susan Mildram, who gave the Call to Worship; Barbara Walter, who read the Scripture; and the Senior Choir which sang "Prayer of Thanksgiving" as arranged by E. Kremser.

Other music in the service included traditional Thanksgiving hymns and four psalms from the Ainsworth Psalter used by the Pilgrims.

This was the second in a series of four Thanksgiving services being held at the First Church of Squantum this month.

Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin Pastor read a passage from a Pilgrim writer, William Bradford, and preached on the topic, "Through a Sea of Troubles."

A special prayer led by the pastor concluded the service. The congregation prayed for the safety of the 60 Americans now held captive in Iran, for the American people that they will have courage to do what they must and patience to wait this situation out, and for the President of the United States and the leaders of this country that they might know the best course to pursue.

Greeters for the morning were Mr. and Mrs. Ted Adams and their family.

The sermon next Sunday will be "A Time for Giving Thanks." Both the Junior Choir and the Senior Choir will sing.

Upsala Chamber Singers At Faith Lutheran Friday

The Upsala College Chamber Singers will launch a New England tour Friday when they present a concert, "Baroque and Contemporary Music", at 8 p.m. in the Faith Lutheran Church, Quincy.

Featured in the first part will be music by Handel, Purcell, Bach, Monteverdi and a performance of the complete third act of Purcell's opera, "Dido and Aeneas". Recorders, harpsichord and piano will be used. Special choreography and staging will take place during the opera presentation which will be accompanied by Mark Mitchell who coaches voice for Upsala students.

Highlighting the second portion of the program will be the double chorus work, "Peaceable Kingdom", by Randall Thompson, one of America's leading choral composers who now is celebrating his 80th birthday. A bassoon Sonata by Paul Hindmith, a German composer who taught at Yale, will be performed by Upsala student Norber Mamet of West Hartford, Conn.

Junior College Open House

Quincy Junior College will hold an open house for those considering a college education Thursday, Nov. 15 from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Quincy High School Method Center, Quincy Square.

Information will be available on financial aid, admissions, career programs and evening classes.

The evening will begin with a short program. John J. Finnegan chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, will speak on "Education for the '80's"

Two Quincy Junior College alumni will speak on their college experiences.

The alumni are Bob Trankis Energy Program Manager, Office of Energy Conservation, Quincy; and Sarah Saccone, accountant in the City Auditor's office.

A social with coffee and cake will be held after the program, and tables will be staffed with people knowledgeable about specific areas of interest.

Koch Victim LaRaia Beneficiary

Former Mayor Joseph LaRaia got a new lease on his political life in last week's city election.

LaRaia may have been the beneficiary of current circumstances as much as young Richard J. Koch, Jr. may have been the victim.

LaRaia squeaked to victory on a 197-vote margin. Ninety-nine votes the other way and he would have gone down the chute. And, may never have come back up.

For Koch it would have been instant political stardom. In his first run for public office, he would have been defeating not only a long-time political figure but a former mayor.

Disgruntled city employees, still simmering over the stone wall they have run into on the pay raise issue, helped LaRaia and hurt Koch. The unions backed Frank McCauley, Michael Faherty and LaRaia considering them the most sympathetic to their cause.

McCauley topped the field—but probably would have, anyway. His independent image has voter appeal. But some of the votes Faherty got might, under different circumstances, have gone to Koch.

The 15,218 blanks cast in the at-large race indicate there was a lot of "bulleting"—voting for one candidate—instead of for three.

There may have been 4,000 to 5,000 bullets for one candidate and another 3,000 or 4,000 for two candidates.

LaRaia, no doubt, got his share of the bullets. But there were bullets on the other side, too. Council President John Quinn got some from followers who wanted to keep him safe. And young Koch, himself, got some.

Polls taken about four weeks before the election showed McCauley topping the field with Quinn second and LaRaia third. That's the way it came out.

But the polls didn't hit it smack on the nose. They had Koch and Faherty trailing together far behind LaRaia.

Koch started to come on strong in the final two weeks and maybe, if the election were just a week later, he might have edged LaRaia.

Circumstances should be different two years from now. At age 24, young Koch would seem to have a bright political future. He'll be heard from again.

AND, WHAT WILL LaRaia do with his new chance in political life?

LaRaia watchers are convinced he plans a mayoral bid in 1981 and see him campaigning from the City Council chamber during the next two years.

Those close to him, however, say you'll be seeing a "new LaRaia" that he's going to hang his controversial uniform in the closet. He's going to be less controversial. He's not going to toss hand grenades. He's going to be charming, easy going.

At which his opponents scoff: you can't change a leopard's spots. It won't be long before he'll be the same old LaRaia, they predict.

Either way, though, it should be an interesting two years. But it may set the stage for one of the bloodiest mayoral brawls two years hence.

FOR FRANK McCAULEY it had to be a sweet victory. He topped the at-large field by nearly 3,000 votes, finishing 2,869 above John Quinn, the "dean" of the council, and 3,721 over LaRaia.

McCauley has long had thoughts of some day running for mayor. His performance last week could make that a soon day.

AND, IF Pat Toland is still smiling, you would too, if you were her. She was the target for teachers dissatisfied with their bogged down contract progress. Her headline stand on issues symbolized the opposition as far as the teachers were concerned. The word went out to "bullet" for Frank Anselmo.

There were 16,982 blanks cast for school committee, meaning there were a lot of "bullets". But Toland topped the field and Chris Kennedy finished second. Anselmo was third. The difference between Toland and Anselmo was 965. Between Kennedy and Anselmo, it was 586.

WELL, THEN, HOW come the city employees affected the election of LaRaia and the defeat of Koch but the teachers' backing of Anselmo failed to affect Toland's top position?

The probable answer would seem to be that there are more regular city employees living and working in Quincy than teachers.

Donnelly Tells Veterans:

U. S. Should Break Dipl

By TOM HENSHAW

Cong. Brian J. Donnelly has expressed the hope that recent events in Iran will have a unifying effect on the United States and may eventually restore some of the pride that has been missing in this country for a long time.

Donnelly told the Quincy Veterans' Council luncheon Sunday at Sherry's that, once the hostage incident is resolved, the United States should break diplomatic relations with Iran, call all Americans home, ship Iranians in the U. S. back to Iran and have done with it.

"Unless we take some drastic steps after this incident is concluded," he said, "we will continue to slide in world opinion as we have slid over the past 15 years."

"There comes a point in time where we can no longer allow ourselves to be blackmailed, where we have to say to the world community that this country will no longer allow our people to be humiliated."

"I can promise you, as your representative in the U. S. Congress, that when this situation is resolved, this country will stand tall and stand tough once and for all and take the action that's necessary."

Donnelly said that it is plain from the actions of the Iranians in taking 80 Americans hostage in the embassy in Teheran that "they don't like us. They don't want to have anything to do with us. We ought to get that message."

"If they don't appreciate what this great country has done for the world then they can go off on their own."

The text of Donnelly's address, as recorded by WJDA, follows:

"I don't think today, especially today, that any one of the 435 members of Congress cannot talk about one subject that affects this nation in the greatest and most extreme circumstances and that's

"There comes a point in time in this country where we can no longer allow ourselves or our people to be blackmailed."

"There comes a point in time where we have to say to the world community that this country, which has been so good to so many people through the breadth and length of this world, will no longer allow our people to be humiliated, will no longer allow our people to be blackmailed, will no longer allow our people to be treated worse than serfs."

the situation in Iran.

"Today, which is the eighth day, the Iranian government holds as hostages 80 citizens of the United States of America in a move that is unprecedented and unparalleled in the modern history of diplomacy."

"We, as a government, are in a very unenviable situation. We have a man, the Ayatollah Khomeini, who is running that government who literally does not remember what he does from day to day. We have a citizenry in Iran that has lost hold totally of any sort of rational, realistic behavior. And 80 of our people are held captive and hostage and, again, in a move that has never happened before in modern diplomatic history."

"The President has counselled each and every member of Congress as we came home for Veterans Day to be very careful in what we said about this situation. But I don't think there is anything else on the minds of the people of this country than what's happening over there in Teheran this afternoon."

"We have to do, at the present time, what we're doing in terms of diplomatic overtures through the world community to try to put some sense and reason into these people in Iran, to try to save the lives of those American citizens so they will not be tried and executed like so many Iranian citizens have been over the last few months."

"But I can tell you this: After it's all done, one way or the other, I think we in this country ought to reassess our position in this world and uniquely reassess our position in relation to Iran."

"It seems to me that until those people over there can put together some sort of logical, systematic rational government that governs by laws of the international community that we in this nation ought to take some drastic steps."

"I am advocating that when this situation is completed we singly and immediately break off

Donahue Gets 163

336 Voters Cast Write-ins Fo

A total of 336 Quincy voters apparently were not satisfied with the choice between Mayor Arthur H. Tobin and Abe M. Itkin during the recent election.

They cast write-in votes for assorted non-candidates, some identifiable, some not, including one vote in Ward 3 for "Tubbs".

Election officers concluded this to be a vote for Jeremiah Tubbs, a character in the book written by Joseph J. LaRaia. The character is thought to resemble former Mayor James H. McIntyre.

Mayor Tobin, of course, defeated Itkin handily for re-election, 15,516 to 6,775.

The top collector of write-in votes was Carolyn Donahue, a nurse, who was apparently the choice of city workers who are upset with Tobin for his refusal to grant them new contracts. She had 163 votes.

LaRaia, whom Tobin defeated in 1977, was second in write-ins with 42 followed by city Councilor James A. Sheets with 20 and a person identified only as "Thibodeau", who got 14 votes from Ward 1.

Other write-in vote-getters were: P. Bregoli 8, John Ross 5, Walter Hannon 5, Francis X. McCauley 4, Michael Faherty 3, Fagerlund 3, Donahil 3, Beniers 3, Joanne Condon 3, Michael Morrissey 3.

Two votes each went to Denver, Frederick Gilliatt, Richard Young, Ira Quin, Cunningham, Thomas Barron, Mullaney, Esdale, Bonomi, Shine, Richard Koch, Joan Picard.

Single votes were cast for Mat Tobin, Hennessy, Richard Blake, William Dwyer, William Norton, Mackay, Rollins, Yoemans, Priestley, Cheney, Pepe, Tubbs, Johnson, O'Connell, Crowley, Beaudry, Maguire, Caiewski, Francis, Patricia Toland, McIntosh, John Mont, Brennan, Paul Harold, John Quinn, Stephen McGrath, Rosemary Nolen, Struford, Sweeney, Bridgi, Blaney, Ryan, Long.

There was a scattering of write-in votes for School Committee with David Colton and Paul Operach getting three each and Donahue and Leahy two apiece.

Single votes for School Committee went to Dr. Adams Moore, LaRaia, Francis, O'Donnell, Mullaney, Mary Mulligan, Gallagher, Sweeney and Wilcox.

Dolph Dufrenes, Toth and Sweeney each got a vote for the Church Commends Fire Dept. For Efforts At Fire

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I would appreciate it if the following letter could be printed publicly in your paper. The members of my church are so thankful for the protection that the firemen gave to our church the night that our neighboring bank burned.

To the Fire Department of Quincy:

In behalf of the members of the Covenant Congregational Church of Quincy we want to publicly thank you for the concern and extra effort you put forth to protect our church from fire on the night of Oct. 29 when our neighboring bank was burned.

We know that there were moments when there was real danger to our church and it was only through your unselfish effort that our church was saved from any damage. We thank God for your deep concern.

omatic Relations With Iran diplomatic relations with Iran, that we tell them we get their message that they don't like the United States of America and we will pack up immediately and move our people back here.

"And we will demand that they close their embassy in Washington and their consulates throughout the United States, that we freeze the assets of the Iranian government and the Iranian people here in the United States, and that we go forward with what the President did yesterday and reassess the presence of over 60,000 Iranian students and over 150,000 Iranian nationals that reside in the United States.

"There comes a point in time in this country where we can no longer allow ourselves or our people to be blackmailed.

"There comes a point in time where we have to say to the world community that this country, which has been so good to so many people through the breadth and length of this world, will no longer allow our people to be humiliated, will no longer allow our people to be blackmailed, will no longer allow our people to be treated worse than serfs.

"And if they don't appreciate what this great country has done for the world then they can go off on their own. Iran sits on the border of the Soviet Union and if they want to deal with the Soviet Union then let those cards fall where they may.

"But unless we take some drastic steps after this incident is concluded, we will continue to slide in world opinion as we have slid over the last 15 years.

"I can promise you, as your representative in the U. S. Congress, that when this situation is resolved --- and I know we all pray that it is resolved in a peaceful way, that those 80 people will be returned home to their families and their loved ones --- that this country will stand tall and stand tough once and for all and take the action that's necessary to take and not to allow ourselves to continue to be punched and kicked and mistreated and abused by the worldwide community.

"I am not advocating an isolationist position. But I think, uniquely in the situation of Iran, that if we don't get the message that these people are trying to give us then this country is not what I think it is. They don't like us. They don't want to have anything to do with us. We ought to get that message. We will take our people home. We will send their people home.

"Maybe this one incident can restore some of the pride that has been missing in this country for a long time. Maybe it can end the division in this country that has been going on these last 15 years and we can restore the pride that we ought to have as citizens of the United States and stand up tall and say to the world community:

"We are proud to be Americans. We live in a democracy that allows people to self-determine their own destinies. We don't force our system of government upon anybody else nor will we allow anybody else to force their system of government upon us."

"Maybe that strong stand will bring this country together.

"But if we take a strong stand like that, I won't lie to you, we will pay some economic price. We will probably return to gas lines. We will probably have to cut our vacations a little short next year. We will probably have to conserve a little more.

"But for the integrity of this country and the pride of this country to me that's worth it."

'Gripe Night' At Houghs Neck Nov. 20

The Houghs Neck Community Council will hold a "Gripe Night" for all area residents Nov. 20, at 8 p.m. at the new Houghs Neck Multi-Service Center, Sea St.

Councillor Francis X. McCauley, Councillor Leo J. Kelly, Sen. Paul Harold and Rep. Thomas Brownell will be asked to comment on and reply to questions on local problems.

These include street construction, vandalism, drug and alcohol abuse, noise pollution, and improvements needed in the area.

The program was arranged by Jack Nigro, council president-elect.

A house-to-house membership canvass is scheduled for Sunday afternoon, Nov. 18, with Raymon Keefe, membership chairman, and Jack Nigro in charge.

The annual Christmas tree lighting ceremony will be held Dec. 9 with Mrs. William Gardner as chairman.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Marciano Pep Talk Sinks Quincy

Recently crowned world heavyweight boxing champion Rocky Marciano delivered the pre-game pep talk and the Brockton High School football team carried on to a 19-14 victory over Quincy.

The defeat spoiled the sensational debut of punter Marv Weinstein as a starting quarterback as he threw for one Quincy touchdown and set up the second with another pass.

TIP ON MATSON BOY

An anonymous letter to Atty. Gen. Francis E. Kelly, signed by "One Who Knows," said that 4-year-old Danny Matson, missing since Jan. 19, 1951, "is now within a mile of the Quincy Police Station."

The City Council voted to appropriate $1,000 to drain Field and Wilde quarry near the boy's Cranch St. home. Also about a mile from the police station were Faulkner's and Skimp's quarries.

DEEGAN DENIES IMPROPRIETIES

City Manager William J. Deegan Jr. defied rumors that favored relatives and friends of city officials were getting tips on coming sales of city-owned land that gave them an advantage in buying it.

"It is true," he said, "that I am proposing a change in the routine but I am making such a recommendation for the sole purpose of stimulating the sale of city-owned land so it can be converted into tax-yielding property."

LIBRARIAN URGES VIGILANCE

Dr. Walter M. Whitehill, librarian of the Boston Athenaeum, urged "vigilance against the plausible half truths which threaten the freedom of libraries and the general decency of American life."

Whitehill spoke at the dedication of the Albert Crane Memorial Wing of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

He condemned the "unhappy spectacle of recent unprincipled attacks" by John Fox, publisher of the Boston Post, on the Boston Public Library for having Russian newspapers in its reading room.

FARE CUT PROPOSED

Frederick C. Dumaine, president of the New Haven Railroad, told the Quincy Chamber of Commerce that a lower rate for single ride passengers on South Shore railroads is a "definite possibility."

Another speaker at the Chamber's fall membership meeting was former Massachusetts Gov. Joseph B. Ely, now chief counsel for the New Haven Railroad.

QUINCY-ISMS

'I'm Going To Feel Safer'

First Smoke Detectors Installed In Atlantic Homes

By TOM HENSHAW

"I smoke a little," said Michael McGonagle; then he corrected himself: "No, I smoke a lot. I'm going to feel a lot safer with these things around."

McGonagle, a retired Boston Gear Works machinist, and his wife, Agnes, had fire detectors, three of them, installed recently in their home at 106 East Squantum St., Atlantic.

They were the first installed for senior citizens in the Atlantic target area by the Atlantic Self-Help Program with funds from the federal Housing and Community Development Act of 1974.

Locations for the detectors were spotted in the McGonagles' two-story, six-room home by a Fire Department crew under Deputy Carl Valenti and installed by Paul Smollett of the Atlantic Self-Help Program.

One of them was placed in the basement on ceiling level at the foot of the stairs; another in the center of the living room ceiling; and the third outside the second floor bedrooms.

"Three is the ideal number for a house like this," explained Deputy Valenti, "one in the basement and one on each habitable level of the home."

Most home fires, he said, occur in the living room, followed in order by the basement (because of the oil burner), the kitchen and the bedrooms.

"If we place a smoke detector at the foot of the cellar stairs," he said, "it activates before the smoke goes up the stairwell. Outside the bedroom door, it activates before smoke reaches the sleeping quarters."

The fire detectors that were installed in the McGonagles home are the photo-electric type which, says Valenti, is a little more sensitive than the other popular variety that is activated by ionization.

"It activates at 2 to 3 per cent smoke obscuration," said the deputy, which means that cigarette smoke is unlikely to touch the detector off by accident.

The detectors "are battery-operated, cost about $20 apiece and should be tested once a month by pressing a test button."

"We've never had a fire in the house," said Michael McGonagle, "but there's been a lot of them around the neighborhood. I'm going to feel a lot safer with these things around."

Evaluation Team

Joseph G. McGregor of 252 West Squantum St., North Quincy, is the sophomore class representative to the faculty evaluation team in the Education Department at Curry College, Milton.

An Education student, he was chosen by members of the sophomore class in the Education program. The Education faculty evaluation team reviews and determines the competence and performance of each student within the program.

Member Of The Way Up Active In Outdoor Programs

Two groups of teen-agers from THE WAY UP were active in outdoor programs in various parts of the state this past week.

THE WAY UP is a church-sponsored program for teen-agers on the South Shore which operates out of a Quincy storefront in Wollaston.

One group participated in a day outdoors with other teen-agers from throughout the state at a camp in Grotton.

The other group headed to the Cape to research the various historical sites associated with the original landing of the Pilgrims there.

Both groups consisted of boys and girls between the ages of 13 and 16. They were led by the Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, director of THE WAY UP.

James Gerwer Completes Army Training

Pvt. James A. Gerwer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gerwer, 380 Beale St., Wollaston, recently completed One Station Unit Training (OSUT) at Fort Benning, Ga.

OSUT is a 12-week period which combines basic combat training and advanced individual training.

The training included weapons qualifications, squad tactics, patrolling, landmine warfare, field communications and combat operations. This qualifies the soldier as a light-weapons infantryman and as an indirect fire crewman.

Soldiers were taught to perform any of the duties in a rifle or mortar squad.

Catherine McCarthy On Northeastern Dean's List

Catherine E. McCarthy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James McCarthy of Wollaston, has been named to the Northeastern University dean's list for the summer quarter.

win. Comer said the difference between the $350,000 transferred by the Council from other accounts and the bid total would be taken from the $375,000 already in the appraisal account in the 1980 budget.

The $350,000 was transferred from three different accounts: $125,000 from temporary loan interest, $100,000 from revenue sharing and $125,000 from street maintenance.

Although Comer was called upon to explain most of the technicalities of the transfer and appraisal procedure to the Council, it was Asst. Solicitor Dennis E. Harrington who lent the decisive note of urgency to the session.

"If we do not appropriate money to hire the appraisal firm," he said,

"the judge will issue an order on Nov. 20 withholding money from the Dec. 15 payment of state aid to the city.

"The withholding will be significantly more than $350,000 because it will include the entire appraisal cost, including administrative costs incurred by the State Department of Revenue.

"It could be as high as $750,000 or $1 or $4 on the next tax rate. You can look at this as Quincy's punishment for being in contempt of court."

Councillor McCauley probed Comer on what happened to the CETA workers who were hired out of federal funds and trained to gather data prior to revaluation.

Comer said the number of CETA workers eventually dropped to 14 and their work was "not as acceptable as we would like" but some of the data will be used as raw material by the commercial firm.

He said the CETA people had reviewed 1,200 parcels, mostly in the North Quincy area, and that work will be used by the company.

The rest of the $231,000 CETA grant, he said, will be used to photograph all property in the city and to collect data and revalue all exempt properties.

Under questioning by McCauley, City Auditor Charles L. Shea said the transfer from revenue sharing and street maintenance were no problems but "we could be on thin ice" with temporary loan interest.

"The only other source would be the revenue of 1979-80," he said.

Harrington said Mayor Tobin is scheduled to meet with officials of the State Department of Revenue today (Thursday) to discuss the transfer and possibly the tax rate for 1980.

"They will not set the tax rate until this is settled," he told the council. "If you do not make the transfer they will simply add this to the bottom line and there will be a tax increase."

Earlier, Tobin told The Sun that the tax rate might not be set for another two weeks, because of the "lawsuits, fringe benefits and state mandates" facing the city.

Teachers Closer To Settlement

The city's teachers and School Committee negotiators seemed closer than before, but still not within reach of an agreement as bargaining continued Tuesday night.

Both sides reported some progress as a result of last Thursday's meeting, but talks Tuesday evening showed no sign of an imminent agreement.

"We made some progress," QEA

President Robert Garner said of last week's meeting. Representatives on both sides agreed not to discuss details of the bargaining, he said.

Garner said Tuesday night agreement was possible, but not probable.

School committee representatives indicated during Tuesday's meeting that the session could be a long and possibly fruitless one.

John Duke Art Exhibit At N.Q. Crane Library

Quincy Art Association member John Duke of East Wareham is exhibiting his art work through November at the North Quincy Branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Duke's work is in mixed media: pastels, acrylics and oils.

His early art influence began with oil painting as a pupil of Miss Carmen Ungar of Quincy, Crane art librarian. He studied at the Massachusetts College of Art and was graduated from the Art Institute of Boston. He also studied Europe's Impressionist masters in Germany.

He teaches oil painting at the Quincy Public Schools Division of Continuing Education, and is continuing his education at Massachusetts College of Art.

Also a member of the Milton Art Association, his work has been shown at the Quincy Art Association's annual exhibitions and Quincy City Hospital, as well as other locations.

'Cheaper By The Dozen' At Archbishop Williams

Three Quincy residents have major roles in "Cheaper by the Dozen" being presented by the Archbishop Williams senior class Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium.

The residents are Nancy Erickson, John Coleman and Matthew Hammerle.

"Cheaper by the Dozen" is a comical look at the trials and tribulations of a large family as the children grow up and begin to emancipate themselves from an overly structured family.

Other seniors with major roles are Daniel Andrea, Robert Pernice, Kathie Sullivan and Laurie Mahoney.

Sister Corona MacDonald, SCH, is directing the production and Debbie Kasmouski is in charge of choreography. Musical accompaniment will be by Jeanne Machon at the piano and David West at the drums.

Tickets can be purchased at the door. For more information, call the school at 843-3636.

Two Residents At Berklee College Of Music

Two Quincy residents, Brian P. Morse and Ralph A. Pickering, are members of the freshman class of Berklee College of Music, Boston.

Brian is the son of Alan Morse, of 385 Highland Ave., Ralph is the son of Mrs. Mary Pickering of 25 Glendale Rd.

Raiders Must Get Offense

Defense Act Together

By TOM SULLIVAN

Week in and week out the North Quincy football team's defense had been superb, and in the past few weeks the offense had come alive as the Raiders, after a slow start, won four of five games to bring their record to 4-4.

But last Saturday at Veterans Memorial Stadium North broke down completely both ways and the team will have to regroup as it prepares for the Thanksgiving Day classic.

Catholic Memorial, a Division 2 Catholic Conference entry, tore the North line apart and the defense completely bottled up the Raider attack to walk away with a 35-0 victory.

"What can I say? They just beat us badly both ways," Coach Dave Burke said. "I was surprised the way they went through our line and they really stopped our offense. Once they scored that early touchdown after a fumble, things went downhill for us. We were very flat and they were really up."

"It was our first bad game of the year but we'll bounce back for Quincy, that I can promise."

The big win came in the next to last game for Memorial Coach Jim O'Connor, the school's only football coach, who retires after the Thanksgiving Day game.

A look at the statistics shows how North Quincy was outclassed.

Memorial ground out 265 net yards on the ground to 54 for the Raiders. Neither team did much passing with Memorial picking up 33 yards on three for eight and North 27 on three for six. Memorial clicked off 18 first downs to just four for the Raiders.

The defensive coaches, Ken McPhee and Jack Raymer, were understandably dejected.

"I never thought any team could go through our line like that," McPhee said. "We had even contained undefeated Brockton's attack. There's nothing much I can say, they just pushed us around."

"But, I thought our secondary did a good job. Tony Camillo had his fifth pass interception and Rick Anderson played a good two-way game."

The usually loquacious George Liset, who had plenty of reason to praise his offensive line the past few weeks, was understandably quiet after the game. Quarterback Jack Brown was sacked three times.

Memorial's hard running back, Tom Murphy, nearly doubled the entire Raider output on the ground by rushing for 97 yards.

Bill Dailey and Anderson were the best North ball carriers.

North's best plays were two kickoff returns, Devin Durkin handling off to Jim McGinnis, who raced all the way from his 25 to Memorial's 45 on the first and going from his 15 to his 40 on the second.

Fumbles set up the first two Memorial touchdowns. The first, early in the game, was recovered on the Raiders' 22 and six plays later quarterback Gerry Byrnes scored from the one. Bill O'Brien kicked the first of his five extra points.

The Knights recovered the second on the second play of the second period on North's 47 and, following a 19-yard run by Bob Johnson and a 21-yarder by Murphy, Murphy scored from the seven.

After holding the Raiders on its 15, Memorial drove 85 yards to make it 21-0. With a minute left in the half Byrnes scored from the six.

Things didn't improve for the Raiders after the intermission and after a punt by Brian O'Leary, the Knights marched from North's 37 and Johnson scored from the three.

On the first play following the kickoff Memorial's John Laubenstein intercepted a Durkin pass and returned it to North's seven and two plays later Joe Phinney scored from the one.

The reserves took over for both teams in the final period and before it was over Burke had used four quarterbacks, Brown, Durkin, Jamie Walsh and Dave Cavanaugh.

Pre-Season Ski Show

At Lincoln Hancock School

The Quincy Recreation Department and Boston Globe will co-sponsor a pre-season ski show Monday Nov. 19 in the Lincoln Hancock Community School Auditorium.

The ski show is designed not only for beginners, but as a refresher course for the intermediate and advanced skier as well.

Bob Dunn, owner and operator of Boston Hills Ski Area in North Andover and a professional ski instructor for more than 10 years, will conduct the session.

The ski show will start at 7:45 p.m. The public is invited. There is no admission and advance registration is not necessary. Those attending the show will receive a free booklet in the right way to prepare for skiing written by Dunn

Presidents Tune Up 2-Way Performance

Quincy's football team turned in another fine two-way performance last Saturday and improved its record to 6-2-1, giving it some momentum going into the Thanksgiving Day game.

The Presidents moved the ball for 300 yards rushing and the defense had another good day, yet they were able to top Brookline by only a 14-6 score and had a couple of last minute scares on the artificial turf at Northeastern's Parsons Field.

"We moved the ball real well and I am disappointed we didn't score more," said Coach Tom Fitzgerald. "We failed to convert on several fourth down situations and some costly penalties also hurt us. But, we did a good job both ways." Tom Brennan, who scored both touchdowns, his ninth and 10th of the season, rushed for 96 yards and goes into the North Quincy game with 1111 yards rushing on the season.

But the big man on offense was fullback Dan Goldrick who, in addition to his fine blocking, rushed for 115 yards. Scott Richards also ran well and was praised by his coaches for "a brilliant display of blocking."

"Brennan and Goldrick ran well as did Richardson, but it was Richardson's great blocking which enabled the others to pick up yardage," Fitzgerald said.

Quincy stuck to the ground and added only 24 yards passing. Brookline was held to 77 yards running but did pick up 124 passing. Quincy had 16 first downs to Brookline's eight.

Asst. Coach Pete Chella singled out Geoff Caffish for an outstanding game at offensive tackle, and also had good words for Fran Duggan, Paul Bandera, Tom Rand, Jeff Heath, Howie Chadbourne and Ed Quinlan.

"Caffish and Rand have played well all season and continued their fine play, while Bandera played his best game," Chella said. "He caught a pass which set up our second touchdown."

Defensive coaches Bill Mavor and Joe Goguen praised Lou Matthews, who had his usual strong game with four sacks and nine tackles, and also lauded Chris Chevalier and Bill Murray. Paul Martin was singled out for his work in the secondary.

"Martin intercepted a pass to halt a Brookline threat and on the last play, with Brookline on our five, he drove the quarterback out of bounds, forcing a quick pass which went incomplete," Goguen said.

Quincy drove 65 yards after the opening kickoff, with Brennan, Goldrick and Richardson all running well and Brennan scored from the 13. Ron Pettinelli kicked the point.

Brookline scored just before the half on a pass from Joe McMahon to Dave Ewanowski for 37 yards.

The Presidents drove 60 yards in the last period and Brennan scored from the three. Pettinelli added the final point.

10 A.M. Kickoff Saturday

Quincy, North Sophs In Thanksgiving Preview

Saturday is the big day for the Quincy and North Quincy sophomore football teams.

The rivals will meet in their annual game at 10 a.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium with Quincy trying to avenge last year's 15-14 loss.

This game is played annually at the stadium with all the trappings of a varsity game. Last year's thriller was witnessed by a crowd larger than those at several varsity games.

North, coached by Ted Sadowski, who has been a Raider coach for 22 years, pulled out last year's win when it lined up for an extra point kick by Jack Leone but, instead, Bill Barter took a shovel pass and scored the winning two points.

Sadowski's team had a 9-1 record with seven shutouts a year ago, while Mark Conroy's Quincy sophs finished with a deceiving 4-4-1 mark, playing better than the record indicated.

This year, however, the young Raiders have only a 2-6 record while Quincy takes a 5-2-1 record into the finale.

"This has been a tough year but I know the kids will be up for Quincy," Sadowski said. "We have a small squad and have been outmanned in several games."

On offense Ted has Jim Hutchinson and Rich Gray at end, Paul Ciarsella and Bob Pound at tackle, Rich Kallenberg and Mike Pinaro at guard, Neal Fisher at center, Ed Carroll at quarterback, Joe Dudek and Ray Mallory at halfback and Mike Miceli at fullback.

Ed Geran will see action in the offensive line, Dan Linehan and Paul Murphy at halfback and Kevin McSweeney at fullback.

On defense Steve Lee, Ed Leary, Rich Hernon and Eric Riley will be playing up front, Steve Howley, Rich Stevens and Paul Melanson will be inside and Walter Sullivan, Mike Pimental, Chris Butler and Mike Hutchings outside. Darby Flaherty will also see service on defense.

The young Presidents were beaten decisively only by Scituate, 18-0, and dropped a last second 12-8 squeaker to B. C. High. They defeated Cambridge, Hingham, Newton North, Weymouth North and Brockton and tied Waltham.

The second unit has Jim Austin and Bill Walsh ends, Paul Reinhardt and Paul Martin tackles, Steve Ricci or Dennis LaCarte and Eric Swanson guards, Steve Spencer quarterback and Mike Chiochio halfback.

The first defensive unit has Giudici and Paul Quigley ends, Donnelly and Burnes tackles, LaCarte middle guard, Nevins and John Taglieri line backers, Goguen and Straughn cornerbacks and Shaughnessy and Spencer safeties. Backing them up are Eric Swanson, Reinhardt, Picot, Paul Martin, Jim DiPietro, Steve Ricci, Malchione, Jim Zupkowski and Chiochio.

"Bill Heal, a volunteer coach, has been an asset this year," Conroy said. "He is stationed at Weymouth Naval Air Base and worked with the linemen and defense. I feel our best games were in the losses to Scituate and B. C. High."

Giordani Brothers Shine At New Haven

Two Quincy brothers, Mark and Jeff Giordani, who played at Quincy High, have had outstanding seasons for the University of New Haven football team, which recently clinched its first New England Conference championship and last week finished undefeated (8-0-1) with an easy win over Mass. Maritime.

The Chargers are very much in the running for a Division III playoff game.

Mark, a sophomore, scored two touchdowns in leading the Chargers to a thrilling 36-34 win over Boston State, improving their record to 7-0-1 and clinching the title.

In New Haven's previous win Mark also scored two touchdowns to lead the attack.

Jeff, a freshman, is one of the leading punt and kickoff returners in the East and has played a prominent role in the team's success.

He leads the Chargers in both departments, averaging 33.6 yards per kickoff return and 8.2 yards per punt return.

New Haven recently staged one of the season's best comebacks as it overcame a 19-7 deficit to edge Plymouth State, 21-19, with Jeff starting in his specialties.

Also playing for New Haven are Peter Cassidy, offensive guard from Quincy, and Paul White, freshman defensive tackle for North Quincy.

ENC Women Win Volleyball Tourney

The Eastern Nazarene College Women's volleyball team added some luster to a successful season last weekend when it won the New England Women's Invitational Tournament at Wheaton College.

The Crusaderettes, now 26-2 on the season, polished off Wheaton, Bates, Wellesley and the U. of Maine at Farmington in the preliminary rounds, topped Wellesley in the semi-finals and Bates in the championship game.

ENC's Lois Malvesti of Quincy and Janet Ransstrom of Weymouth were named to the all-tourney team.

Boxing Course At YMCA

The Quincy YMCA will offer a new course in adult boxing for beginners, intermediate, and experienced boxers.

Classes will be held in the "Y's" new boxing facility starting Monday, Nov. 19 through Feb. 25, from 5-7 p.m. The course will run for 13 weeks and is for full or social members of the "Y." Fundamental boxing skills will be taught with advancements to boxing matches. Pre-registration is required.

DAN CEURVELS of the Apaches picks up some ground in the Youth Football League championship game against the Panthers.

BOBBURNS of the Panthers catches a pass for a short gain in last Sunday's 6-6 tie with the Apaches in the Youth Football League title game. The rivals wound up as co-champions.

Apaches, Panthers Tie 6-6 For Co-Championship

By JIM NABSTEDT

The North Quincy Apaches and Quincy Point Panthers played to a 6-6 tie Sunday in a steady rain at Veterans Memorial Stadium to finish as co-champions of the Quincy Youth Football League.

The undefeated Panthers won the Southern Division championship and the once-beaten Apaches won the Northern Division crown.

A steady cold rain fell during the game and by halftime the field was virtually unplayable, but the players didn't seem to mind. One player was playing with the flu and a fever because he wanted to help his team.

Both teams hit hard and moved the ball well between the 20-yard lines but each defense stiffened at that point.

The Panthers opened the scoring in the second period when Kevin Cabez scored from the two.

The 6-0 score held until the final 20 seconds of the game when Jimmy McNamara tied it up with a seven-yard run.

The tying touchdown was set up when Jimmy Quinn sacked the quarterback, who fumbled and Mike Gill recovered on the Panthers' 18.

There was a question as to whether the teams would go into overtime but a league rule specifies that no overtime will be played unless both coaches agree and notify the officials before the game and this was not done.

For the Apaches Kevin Mahoney, Brian Webb, Ricky Reardon, Dan Ceurvels, Billy

Campbell, Jim Quinn, John McGrath and Mike Gill were singled out for their efforts.

Among those thanked by league officials for their help this season were Dave Eastwick, Dick Conroy, Bill Peters, Jim Galvin, Bob Cameron, George Page, Bill Meyers, Frank Brillo, Tom Carter, Bob Noble, John Morrissey, Sandy Burns, Mark Mullaney and the staff of the Quincy Sun.

PET THERAPY FOR GRANDPA

Pets are good therapy for lonely, old people say psychologists. It has been proven that animal companions help such people overcome feelings of being unwanted and useless. For the old person, the pet is often a love object and dependent on him. By taking care of his pet's needs, the older person pays more attention to his own needs.

Affection for a dog, for example, spurs an ailing person to carry on his daily chores despite his liabilities. Walking his dog forces him into physical activity that benefits his own health. When he buys food for his pet, he may also think of some foods that would stimulate his own diminishing appetite. A fringe benefit of dog walking is that it provides occasions for meeting other people.

For the bed-ridden person, an aquarium may offer an ideal form of pet life. Fish require minimum care and watching them can provide hours of amusement.

Hancock Bank Wins Second Straight Softball Title

The Hancock Bank softball team won the South Shore Bankers League for the second year in a row and, by winning the playoffs, the team retained the Bankers' Cup.

Led by veteran coach and designated hitter Charlie Cahill, the team compiled a record of 17-3, reflecting a total team effort.

The heavy hitting was handled by "Hoss" Thayer, "Spinner" Connolly and Bill Hopewell.

The outfield of Kevin Cahill, Ed Kelly, Al Sassi and Bill Guerard was sensational on defense, while the four's timely hitting and speed on the bases were a big factor in making things happen.

Bob Marsh, Tom Rizzo, Bob Gava and Brian Griffiths manned the infield and all turned in outstanding performances.

The season was culminated by a breakup dinner at Walsh's hosted by bank president and Mrs. William Kelley.

● Soccer

North Closes With 3-1 Win Over Norwell

The North Quincy boys' soccer team, one of the youngest in the Suburban League, closed out its season recently with 3-1 non-league win over Norwell of the South Shore League, avenging a loss in the opening game of the season.

The young Raiders, who were beset by numerous injuries during the season, finished with a 5-13-2 record but came on well as the season progressed and Coach Paul Bregoli will have most of his squad back next fall.

Joey Flynn, the leading scorer, scored his eighth goal off a corner kick with the assist going to Dave Lapsley at four minutes of the third period for the first goal of the game. Seniors Steve Morrissey and Matt Keenan played well and put a lot of pressure on the Norwell defense.

North continued pressuring into the fourth quarter and after four minutes Bob Biagini booted home his fourth goal on a nice feed from Steve Dodd. The Raiders kept that lead, thanks to some fine defensive work by Lapsley, Chris Dunn and Paul Gill.

With four minutes left and darkness setting in, Norwell scored out of a scramble and put on a lot of pressure, but, with 40 seconds left, Biagini scored his second of the game and fifth of the year.

"I started all seniors in this last game, including Ed Ahearn in goal, and Mr. Versatile, Rich Farmer, who has played every position but goal," Bregoli said. "We have a ton of young kids coming back and things look better for next year. I want to give special thanks to my seniors, who through their leadership, helped pull the underclassmen along until they were ready. We certainly will miss them, but everyone is anxious to get started for next year."

In their previous game the Raiders were flat and dropped a 6-1 league decision to Brookline. "They needed the win to qualify for the tournament and we handed it to them," Bregoli said.

Brookline popped in two quick goals and North cut it to 2-1 on Dodd's first goal on a beautiful cross from Rich Palma. Palma scored a goal which would have tied it but the referee disallowed it, despite Bregoli's vehement protest. Brookline then went on to add four goals.

Earlier North was edged by Weymouth North, 2-1, as the Maroons avenged an earlier defeat. North Quincy tied the game at 1 near the end of the third quarter as Flynn scored his seventh goal. Gary Donaghey's perfect cross to Palma started the play. Weymouth scored the winner at 2:45 of the fourth quarter.

Flynn led the Raider scorers with 11 points on eight goals and three assists, followed by Bill Bradley with six goals and an assist, Biagini with five goals and an assist, Palma with two goals and three assists, Lapsley, three assists; Ahearn, a goal and two assists, Gary Donaghey, two goals, Gill, a goal, and Farmer, Steve Sacchetti, Bill Bourikas and Charlie Spiropoulos, an assist each.

Mass Fields, Squantum Tie 3-3

In a battle of undefeated teams, Mass. Fields and Squantum tied, 3-3, last weekend in the North Quincy Youth Soccer League.

Squantum took an early 2-0 lead on goals by Dave Gerry and Chris McDonough and an assist for Harrington, and held the lead until the last eight minutes of the game. Ted Shionis played superbly in the Squantum goal.

Mass. Fields' Tony Orlando scored with eight minutes to play with Mark Scanlan assisting, and Joe Cahill tied it up two minutes later. Tony LaSorda put Mass. Fields ahead with a minute left, Orlando assisting, but Gerry scored his second goal with 30 seconds remaining to tie it up. Kerry Kemp assisted.

Montclair blanked Wollaston, 3-0, on two goals by Chris Gray and one by Brian Morris. Louie Morales and Joe Rabs had assists. Neil Hatfield played well for Wollaston.

Quincy walloped Beechwood,

Knoll, 6-0, with Dave Fasano scoring two goals and Eric Roukey, Leo Rooney, Rob Bradley and Vinnie Capone one each. Capone, Bradley, Rooney, Nick Cangemi and Rossi had assists. For Beechwood Dan Jones played well in goal and Paul Kurtzman, Kevin Caldwell and Scott Kearns did well.

Quincy defeated Wollaston, 4-1, with Chris Connolly and Fasano scoring two goals each. Rossi, Roukey, Capone and Paul Flaherty had assists. For Wollaston Pat Feeney played well.

Quinn Tackle At Assumption

Matt Quinn, son of City Council President and Mrs. John Quinn of Wollaston, is an offensive tackle on the Assumption College varsity football team.

Matt, who played at B.C. High is a junior and a two-year veteran. He is a key performer for Coach Paul Cantani.

One of the Quinn's other sons, Garrett, is a guard on the University of Michigan football team.

Buckley Opens With Inexperienced QJC Team

Brian Buckley of Quincy, new basketball coach at Quincy Junior College, leads an extremely inexperienced team into the Jaguars' opening Greater Boston Small College Conference game tonight (Thursday) against the Essex Aggies at Danvers.

"I have only two returnees from last year's team and only three of our players played varsity ball in high school," said Buckley. "This means we are going to go up against a lot of teams with more experience."

Buckley was a long time coach for the Quincy Recreation Department.

The Jaguars' opening home game will be on Nov. 20 at 4 o'clock against Wentworth at Quincy Vo-Tech gym. All home games will be played there.

Recently QJC played in a conference jamboree at Wentworth.

Each of the nine conference teams and Bunker Hill Community College, which isn't a member but plays all the teams, played one half and Quincy edged Bunker Hill, 39-38, in overtime.

Bradley singled out Kevin Penney, Jim Holleran, who won the game with two foul shots, and Ed Richard for their performances. "We played well defensively but we need work on offense," he said.

The other conference teams are Mass. College of Pharmacy, Daniel Webster College of Nashua, Essex Aggies, Northern Essex Community, Hellenic, Emerson, Wentworth and North Shore Community.

The lone returnees from last year's squad, coached by Wayne Hamilton, are Bob Evans from Abp. Williams High and Mike Noonan from B.C. High.

Holleran, a fine player at North Quincy High; Evans, Paul Donoghue from Quincy, the oldest player on the squad at 24 who played at B.C. High, and Paul Waters, who lives in Boston but played his high school ball at New Town, Conn., are the only players with high school varsity experience.

6-5 Penney from Braintree High is the tallest player on the squad, with Richard of Quincy at 6-2 and Donoghue at 6-1 the only other six-footers.

Also playing for the Jaguars are Quincy's Ed Hanratty, Brian Connolly of North Quincy, Jim Murphy and Tom O'Brien from Catholic Memorial and Quincy's Steve Jachnig, who played at B.C. High.

"With little height, we must depend on speed and good shooting," Buckley said. "Holleran, Evans and Donoghue look like potentially good scorers."

"The players have shown a lot of hustle in practice and I was pretty well pleased with our showing in the jamboree."

Buckley, who played four years of basketball at Abp. Williams and freshman ball at Boston State College, is being assisted by Steve Mele, son of Red Sox scout Sam Mele. Steve was an outstanding player at Abp. Williams and Dartmouth College. Also giving Buckley a hand on a voluntary basis is Earl Vermillion, who until last year had coached the Jaguars for several seasons.

An Alumni game is being planned for Christmas week and Jim Hurley is coordinator for this game. Any former QJC players interested in playing is asked to call Hurley at 773-8070.

Your Dental Health

by Daniel P. Sweeney D.D.S.

Like all growing tissue, teeth need adequate amounts of protein, minerals, fats and other food elements. These are obtained through the blood which supplies the pulp area of the tooth. If there is a limited or poor supply of food, the blood will take the necessary elements from other body tissues. It is therefore imperative that a balanced diet be provided for the proper growth of teeth. This is especially true of children. Whereas adult teeth no longer need calcium, the bone tissue which keeps teeth in place must be supplied.

A nutritious diet plus good oral hygiene habits can help you keep a healthy mouth and attractive smile. At the office of Dr. Daniel P. Sweeney, D.D.S., 539 Adams St., East Milton Square, we stress preventive dentistry and teach patients how to care for their teeth between office visits. Regular dental checkups are the best way to keep dental costs down; small developing problems can be located and corrected before they become serious. Call our office at 698-3636 for an appointment. Most dental insurance plans are honored.

Steam Carpet Cleaning

HOW IT WORKS

Sally: Gentle hot water cleaning mixture is sprayed into the carpet which forces embedded soil particles into suspension; then a "Super Power" vacuum motor recovers the soiled solution from the depth of the carpet; thereby eliminating sub-surface wear; soil build-up and carpet life is extended up to 40%.

CLEAN MASTER recovers up to 85% of the moisture to minimize drying time.

A little bit of practical Victoriana for your home-

With winter just ahead, what is more practical than a working oil lamp?

Despite all the hard work of public utility companies to keep electric service flowing without interruption, nature at times conspires by the use of wind and sleet to knock out lights.

The most practical item for emergency lighting under such circumstances is an old fashioned oil lamp. Oil lamps can be a thing of beauty for your home--just as they were during the Victorian period.

The Quincy Cooperative Bank is now offering oil lamps of unique and unusual beauty for your home. Whether in use or not, these lamps will enhance the decor of your home. The bases are custom created for us by New England Potters Guild, Inc., the same folks who brought you the unusually beautiful flower pots when our bank offered these promotional items some months ago.

Come in and see our lamps with their pretty pottery bases. Pick the color and form you like best for your home. The deal is very simple: *deposit $200 or more into a New or Existing savings account and you can buy a lamp for $5.00. (Only one lamp per account) This regular $25.00 value is a unusual offering with both practicality and beauty. (We have scented oil available, too, at $2.00 a bottle.)

THIS OFFER IS GOOD WHILE SUPPLIES LAST.

*NOW accounts are not included in this promotion.

Hancock St. Parking Banned During Parade

Parking will be prohibited from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday on both sides of Hancock St. from Elm St. to the junction of the Newport Ave. Extension in North Quincy because of the Christmas Parade.

The Police Department also is asking motorists not to park on Quincy Ave. from Faxon Park Rd. to Elm St., on Chestnut St. from Maple to McGrath Highway; on Elm St., from Hancock St. to Mechanic St.; on Mechanic St. to Revere Rd.; and on Revere Rd. to McGrath Highway.

The Newport Ave. Extension can be used as an alternate route to North Quincy, Montclair, Wollaston and Quincy Square.

Parking for parade spectators will be available at the MBTA parking area on Burgin Parkway, the Della Chiesa parking lot on Granite St., the Ross parking garage and the Ross Parkingway.

Police said additional parking will be available at Adams Academy, at the Vo-Tech School, at the Coddington St. school, at Quincy Junior College, at Capitol Market in Wollaston, at the Burger King on Burgin Parkway Extension.

Also in the MBTA lots in Wollaston and North Quincy, at State Street South and Kemper Insurance off Newport Ave. Extension, at Pageant Field and Collins Rest Awhile in Merrymount Park and on Southern Artery from Furnace Brook Parkway to Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The comfort station in the Hancock Parking Area will be open from 12 noon to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Quincy Center To Norfolk Downs

Biggest Christmas Parade Starts Holiday Season Sunday

The 28th annual Quincy Christmas Festival Parade which kicks off the holiday season Sunday, Nov. 25, promises to be the biggest and most colorful yet.

"With a record number of floats and participants along with a longer parade route I anticipate more than 300,000 spectators from all over New England," said Chairman George C. Fay.

At least 25 floats, built in response to the parade theme, "Christmas Around the World," will be competing for prizes in the commercial and non-commercial divisions.

Some of the finest high school bands in Massachusetts and Rhode Island head the list of 26 music-making aggregations that will set the tone and tempo for the festivities.

The parade route this year has been lengthened to 2.8 miles, starting in downtown Quincy and finally disbanding in the area of the North Quincy High School.

The old route went the opposite way for a mile and a quarter from Veterans Memorial Stadium down Hancock St. to St. Johns Church.

This year's parade will step off from the intersection of Elm, School and Hancock Sts. and Quincy Ave. at 12:30 p.m. and proceed through downtown Quincy and through Wollaston and Norfolk Downs for the first time.

Floats will be judged prior to the parade as they assemble in the parking area of Shaw's Supermarket at the corner of Quincy Ave. and Scammell St.

Judges are Thomas Folan, past president of the Milton Art Association; Harold Hawkes, past president of the Braintree Art Association; and June Osgood, past president of the Weymouth Art Association.

Folan and Hawkes have judged the Christmas Festival Parade in the past while Ms. Osgood will be judging for the first time.

Floats will be judged on the basis of adherence to the parade theme, originality, use of materials and color, and overall appearance. Movement and sound will be encouraged.

Richard Venna, coordinator of the floats division, reports enthusiastic cooperation from school, civic and fraternal organizations.

The Koch Club will have a float showing "Christmas in Germany"; the South Shore Campfire Girls float will have a Mexican theme; the Supporters of Survival float features Christmas caroling in New England.

The Archbishop Williams High School Alumni Association is sponsoring a float called "In Memory of Frank," honoring the late Frank McNally of the Quincy Savings Bank, longtime parade organizer. Mrs. McNally will ride in the parade.

The Trophy Float entered in the parade by Bernie's Modern Formal Shop will feature some Misses Quincy Bay of recent years, while Miss Massachusetts and Miss South Shore also will appear.

High-stepping drum major-ettes, drill teams and pom pom girls will be in the line of march with the various bands, which will be judged from a stand in front of City Hall.

Among the regionally and nationally known high school bands in the parade are those from Quincy, North Quincy, Gloucester, Ludlow, Warwick, R.I., Hoosac Valley, Shepherd Hill and Chocomaque Comprehensive High Schools.

In case of inclement weather, the rain date for the parade will be Sunday, Dec. 2. Any postponement will be announced over WJDA and other metropolitan Boston radio stations at 8 a.m. Sunday.

Santa Claus Arrives Saturday By Helicopter

Santa Claus will arrive in Quincy Saturday, Nov. 24, at 11:30 a.m., stepping from his helicopter onto the roof of the Paperama building in the Parkingway.

The old gentleman will give candy canes to the children who meet him and proceed by fire engine to the Lerner Shop, 1535 Hancock St. where he will set up shop for the season in the children's department.

His photo schedule will be Saturday, Nov. 24, from 12 noon to 5 p.m.; Sunday, Nov. 25, from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.; and after that Thursday, Friday and Saturday, 12 noon to 5 p.m., and Sunday from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. through Sunday, Dec. 23.

'About $10' Tax Hike

By TOM HENSHAW

The Quincy tax rate is going up about $10 for fiscal 1980.

It was to be announced this week, perhaps today (Wednesday) or, failing that, almost certainly Friday.

The final documentation -- proof that the city will operate under the state tax cap -- was to be delivered by hand to the Department of Revenue in Boston.

'Mini-Layoffs' After Sickout?

One-Day 'Payless Furlough' Proposed At Hospital

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

A one-day payless "furlough" for all employees at Quincy City Hospital is one of the alternatives being considered to recoup a possible $500,000 loss caused by the recent nurses' sickout.

Hospital Administrator Anthony DeFalco proposed the furlough plan in a meeting last Thursday with Mayor Arthur Tobin. The plan, one of several proposed to ease the hospital's current cash-flow problem, is "my personal preference," DeFalco said.

"I would lean towards that if we do have to take some steps," DeFalco said. "And it's pretty much a certainty that we are going to."

The eight-day nurses' sick-out cut the hospital occupancy from an average of around 300 patients to 190, according to DeFalco. The drop in the number of patients, who pay an average $300 per person per day, has caused a daily deficit of between $30,000 and $40,000, according to Tobin.

The end of the nurses' sickout early Tuesday morning.

The tax rate for fiscal 1979 is $196.60.

Mayor Arthur H. Tobin refused to confirm or deny the $10 tax hike but he indicated that it would be at least $9.50.

"We have said right from Day One," he said, "that we were looking at a $20 tax increase."

"In our meetings with the Department of Revenue to date they have substantiated $19 of it.

"We informed them that it's unconscionable. We don't want to announce a $19 tax hike."

"The city auditor, the city treasurer and I put a plan together to cut that $19 figure in half."

"We presented the plan to the Department of Revenue and they have it under review at this time."

doesn't mean an end to the hospitals' problem, the mayor added.

"The hospital won't go back to normal overnight," said Tobin. Surgery and other schedules for the next several weeks have been disrupted because of uncertainty over services at QCH, he said.

Despite the drastic drop in receipts, Tobin says, "Mr. DeFalco tells me that we still have the same overhead at the hospital."

"Just from a pure business viewpoint, we have to look at where we can be cutting back, to try to get the hospital out of this deficit," Tobin said. "To do otherwise would be unfair to the taxpayers who are footing the bill."

The hospital has already closed four "nursing stations" to help consolidate services and personnel. About 35 patients in some of the less populated wards were moved last week.

No permanent layoffs of employees are being discussed, Tobin said. But the furlough plan is one of several temporary options being considered.

The furlough, in effect a one-day layoff, would save the hospital about $53,000, based on the hospital's weekly payroll of $265,000, DeFalco said.

Although he was unsure of how the furlough would actually be conducted, DeFalco said the "mini-layoffs" would be scheduled so as to maintain services at the hospital.

Workshop Nov. 28 For Women Considering Higher Education

The Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women is sponsoring a workshop for women considering the pursuit of higher education, Wednesday, Nov. 28.

Toby Felton, assistant to the President at Quincy Junior College and Donna Rothenberg, Outreach Counselor, will head the workshop designed to better prepare women to make the decision.

Among the topics covered will be pros and cons, handling work and family responsibilities, and part-time versus full-time study.

The workshop is also designed to allow the participants to discuss their individual situations and get support from other women in similar situations.

"Deciding to Return to School" will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the new City Hall. All are welcome. For more information call Miss Felton at Quincy Junior College, 786-8777.

Today's Women

Six From Quincy In Running As Outstanding Young Women

Six young women from Quincy have been named by the Board of Advisors of the Outstanding Young Women of America Awards Program for inclusion in the 1979 edition of its annual awards volume.

They are:

Anne Therese Corcoran of 57 Independence Ave., South Quincy, a member of the Editorial Department of the Boston Globe.

Patricia Marie Jones of 20 Bishop Rd., Wollaston, director of marketing for the Quincy Cooperative Bank.

Diane Marie Mackie of 1 Canton Rd., Atlantic, director of the Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP).

Mary Anne DelCupolo of 58 South St., Quincy Point, dentist.

Ann M. Leahy of 30 Stedman St., West Quincy, an auto damages appraiser for the Insurance Company of North America.

Kathryn Doliver Roberts of 37 Estabrook Rd., Wollaston, Republican State Committee-woman from the Quincy district.

The program is designed to honor and encourage exceptional young women between the ages of 21 and 36 who have distinguished themselves in their homes, professions or communities.

The designees are now under consideration for a state award for noteworthy contributions to Massachusetts.

Out of the 51 state winners, the Ten Outstanding Young Women of America will be chosen and honored at an annual awards luncheon in Washington in the fall.

Woodward School Students Visit The Quincy Sun

Eleven students from the Woodward School for Girls visited The Quincy Sun recently to see first hand how a newspaper is produced.

Making the tour were Patti Baldassini, Michelle Dennis, Cheryl Donovan, Beth Driscoll, Nancy Hannan, Kelly Keeler, Janine MacKinnon, Patricia Roche, Bridget Smith, Michelle Trahan, and Kristan Yngve. The students were shown by Headmaster Robert L. Johnston.

The students were shown how news stories are written, set in type and placed on a page, including the story of their visit.

They saw an IBM computer

typesetter, two Compugraphic photo typesetter, and a new Varityper phototypesetter that sets news stories, headline, advertisements, and has a video screen for editing. It is one of the latest typesetters in newspaper production today.

They also saw how a stat camera reduced enlarges and screens original photographs so they can be used in The Sun.

They were also shown how pages of The Sun are put together for printing.

The students were presented with copies of the current issue of The Sun at the end of their tour.

A little bit of practical Victoriana for your home-

With winter just ahead, what is more practical than a working oil lamp?

Despite all the hard work of public utility companies to keep electric service flowing without interruption, nature at times conspires by the use of wind and sleet to knock out lights.

The most practical item for emergency lighting under such circumstances is an old fashioned oil lamp. Oil lamps can be a thing of beauty for your home--just as they were during the Victorian period.

The Quincy Cooperative Bank is now offering oil lamps of unique and unusual beauty for your home. Whether in use or not, these lamps will enhance the decor of your home. The bases are custom created for us by New England Potters Guild, Inc., the same folks who brought you the unusually beautiful flower pots when our bank offered these promotional items some months ago.

Come in and see our lamps with their pretty pottery bases. Pick the color and form you like best for your home. The deal is very simple: *deposit $200 or more into a New or Existing savings account and you can buy a lamp for $5.00. (Only one lamp per account)

THIS OFFER IS GOOD WHILE SUPPLIES LAST.

*NOW accounts are not included in this promotion.

Sons Of Italy Charitable Donations $52,123 For 1979

Over 300 persons turned out Saturday to welcome Humberto Cardinal Medeiros and to celebrate the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center's eighth anniversary.

Cardinal Medeiros lauded the lodge's many charitable activities and called on adults to set a good example for youth to follow.

Contributions of $17,500 were presented to various charities Saturday. These included a $2,000 check to the Cardinal's Charity Fund and $10,000 to the City of Quincy's Capital Improvement Fund. Mayor Arthur Tobin said this money would be spent for Little League playing fields.

Other donations presented Saturday were to the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, the Grand Lodge's Scholarship Fund, the Bishop Ruocco Charity Fund, the Italian Home for Children, the Paul A. Dever Home, ($1,000 each), and the Don Orion Home, ($500).

This brings the Sons of Italy total charitable contributions during 1979 to $52,123 and the eight-year total to $226,618.75.

The charities, youth activities, scholarship funds and other activities aided by the Quincy Sons of Italy during 1979 are:

Christmas Lights To Be On Friday

Quincy's Christmas Festival will be officially opened Friday, Nov. 23, with the lighting of the Christmas tree at 7:30 p.m. on McIntyre Mall.

Santa Claus will arrive at the Mall with a special police escort, accompanied by costumed characters familiar to children, to turn on the lights.

City officials and others joining in the ceremony will assemble at Christ Church and march down Hancock St. to McIntyre Mall, led by the Klassy Klowns.

The Jay Nolan Trio from Yarmouth will lead the crowd in the singing of Christmas carols and members of the committee will distribute candy canes, to the children.

Santa Mailboxes Ready For Youngsters Nov. 26

Richard J. Koch, member of the Christmas Festival Committee, sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, announces Santa Mailboxes would be set up again this season in Quincy Center starting Monday, Nov. 26.

The four locations include: The parkingway to the rear of Child World, Baskin Robbins Ice Cream Store, Sears Roebuck on Hancock St. and the Quincy MBTA walk adjacent to the Quincy Cooperative Bank and McIntyre Mall.

Adults are cautioned that the mailboxes are restricted to Santa mail only and are for the convenience of the younger children wishing to write to Santa Claus c/o the North Pole.

Letters must be written and mailed at the Santa mailbox locations no later than Friday, Dec. 21.

The Santa Mailbox Program is one in a series of events sponsored by the Christmas Festival Committee. Others include the Christmas Lighting Ceremonies Friday, Nov. 23, the arrival of Santa by helicopter on Nov. 24, the Christmas Parade on Nov. 25 and the Christmas Pageant, Sunday, Dec. 16.

Want Layoff Agreement

Hospital Technicians Accept Contract

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Hospital technicians at Quincy City Hospital voted 58-12 Monday to accept their new three-year contract - with a catch.

The vote is dependent on union leaders and hospital administrators negotiating a mutually agreeable plan for proposed layoffs at the hospital, according to Local 880 President Ed Miller.

"If it is decided to lay off, say, 25 percent of the hospital workers because the workload is off, we want to be sure that 25 percent of the administrators are laid off, too," Miller said. "We want to be sure that this is not just harassment of a couple of unions."

On the contract itself, Miller said, "there was some heated discussion. We were not 100 percent pleased with it, but we voted to accept it on the basis that we would make a sacrifice for the next three years while the city straightens out its budget problems."

Gerry Shea, union representative for Quincy City Hospital's technical workers, didn't sound like a man who had just negotiated a successful contract.

"It's not something we would settle for in a normal negotiating situation," he said after reaching a "tentative agreement" with city officials last Thursday. "Obviously, this isn't a normal situation."

The contract calls for a total $2,400 annual increase for the hospital technicians, which will take effect in seven steps between January, 1980 and January, 1982. Several other increases in fringe benefits were also agreed upon in the three-year deal, which expires in July, 1982.

Local 880 represents about 130 workers at the hospital, including lab and X-ray workers, EKG and EEG technicians, social workers and others.

The city's financial problems caused Mayor Arthur Tobin to void an earlier signed contract and renegotiate a deal based on "the city's ability to pay."

"We don't ever want to hear that kind of crap again..." said Shea. "Other cities are handling their financial situation. When we go back to the bargaining table in 1982, I don't want to hear this squawking about money."

"Our people are making very big sacrifices on this contract," he said. "The (negotiating) committee was pleased to have a contract to bring back to them to vote on."

"I expect Mr. Shea to make these sort of comments to the press for the benefit of his members and I don't fault him for that," Tobin said. "I appreciate what he and the other union leaders are doing in negotiating agreements based on the city's ability to pay."

"I certainly don't hope to have the same sort of situation in 1982," the mayor added. "I agree with him on that."

A variety of factors - the state's spending cap, the state Supreme Court's Tregor decision reducing assessments on business property, more court decisions against the city and others - have hindered the city's ability to grant the sort of pay raises city employees deserve, Tobin said.

The voided contract, signed in February of 1979, called for an $800 increase for all employees, effective July 1 and a seven-percent increase effective Jan. 1. That would have amounted to an average raise of $1,900 per person during that original two-year deal.

That contract included a reopener clause, which allowed the city to void it and renegotiate if the city's finances made funding impossible. Tobin used that law to void the contract after the passage of the state four-percent spending cap.

The "tentative agreement" reached last week called for:

- Four $250 increases in annual salary (actually raises of $4.81 per week) to take effect Jan. 1, April 1, July 1 and Oct. 1, 1980.
- Two $350 increases ($6.73 per week) to take effect Jan. 1 and July 1, 1981.

- A $700 annual increase ($13.46 per week) to take effect Jan. 1, 1982.

Thus, by the end of the contract, the salary of all the Local 880 members will have been increased by $2,400 per year or $46.16 per week.

Those salary increases are the same ones agreed to by Quincy City Hospital nurses the previous day, Shea said.

Time glassware is produced all over the world but different countries have their own specialties. Finland and Ireland are famous for their traditional patterns of cut lead crystal. Germany makes similar lead glassware but also creates a great deal of plain blown glass in striking modern designs. Sweden has developed glass-making to a fine art. The country has master craftsmen who excel at etching, engraving and shape design. Italy has the world's experts in glass coloring. France produces Baccarat crystal, renowned for its quality. We manufacture large quantities of pressed glass in the United States.

When looking for fine crystal from Ireland, as well as many other beautiful gift items, see us at GRONO & CHRISTIE, INC., 536 Adams St., East Milton, 696-1490. Reed & Barton and Royal Holland powder, Cornwall clocks, Bielek china and Waterford crystal are carried. Hours: 9 a.m. - 5 p.m., Mon. thru Sat. Have a nice Thanksgiving!

Philip Richenburg, 85, Founder of Insurance Firm

Funeral services were held Monday for Philip Richenburg, 85, of Milton, founder and treasurer of the Philip Richenburg Insurance Co., Inc. of Quincy.

Mr. Richenburg died last Thursday after a long illness.

Born in Boston, he was graduated from English High School and Northeastern Law School. He was a resident of Milton for the last 15 years.

Former director of the U. S. Trust Company, he was a past president of Boston Fire Underwriters, past member of Prospect Masonic Lodge, a member of the Aleppo Temple, Boston and Wollaston Golf Club.

Husband of the late Mrs. Gertrude (Ellerston) Richenburg, he is survived by a son, Philip A. Richenburg, Jr., of Weymouth; a sister, Carrie Eldredge of Harwich; three grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

A funeral service was conducted at East Congregational Church, East Milton, by the Rev. Malcolm E. Washburn. Burial was in Mt. Olivet Cemetery.

Arthur J. Bragel, 63, Vo-Tech Head Custodian

A funeral Mass was celebrated Tuesday at St. John's Church for Arthur J. Bragel, 63, a custodian for 37 years in the Quincy school system.

Mr. Bragel, who died Friday in Quincy City Hospital, served as custodian at Quincy Vocational Technical School and the former Quincy Trade School. He retired as head custodian this year.

Born in Tewksbury, he lived in Quincy most of his life and attended Quincy schools. He was a past member of the Quincy Custodians Association.

He is survived by his wife, Dorothy (Luckie) Bragel, of Quincy; a son, Arthur J. Bragel, Jr., of Quincy; two daughters, Judith Moran of Dorchester and Ellen Holton of Quincy and six grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements were by the Joseph Sweeney Funeral Home, 74 Elm St., Quincy Center. Burial was in Blue Hills cemetery.

Frederic A. Roache, 82, Oldest Member FB Golf Club

Funeral services were held Monday for Frederic A. Roache, 82, of Quincy, who died last Friday in Braintree.

Mr. Roache, who retired from the hardware business in 1968, was the oldest member of Furnace Brook Golf Club and the person with the longest continuous membership. He was Class B champion at the club in 1932.

A Quincy resident for 57 years, Mr. Roache was born in Hinsdale and also formerly lived in Ayer and Andover.

He graduated from Quincy High School in 1916 and Yale University in 1920. He was also a member of the Wollaston Masonic Lodge and the Wollaston Royal Arch Chapter.

He is survived by a nephew, John Taylor of Lexington; a cousin, Clifford T. Francis of Rhode Island; one great-nephew and two great-nieces.

Funeral services were held at Deware Funeral Home, 576 Hancock St. Burial was in Maple St. Cemetery, Hinsdale.

Five New Members Received Into First Church Of Squantum

Five new members were received into the First Church of Squantum Sunday morning at the third of a series of special Thanksgiving services at the church this month.

They were Evelyn Ahearn, Ruth Gerry, Kathryn Kelly, Doris Sinceler and Drucilla Warnes.

Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, pastor, recommended all five for membership during the service, and members of the congregation voted to receive the new people as members.

All five had previously been baptized and confirmed or baptized as an adult. All that remained was for the new people to agree to the Church Covenant, which they did by reading it with the other church members before the Lord's Supper.

After communion, the five women were welcomed into the church with the right hand of fellowship by the pastor and persons representing the various church boards, including Stewart Scott, Board of Trustees; Genevieve Todd, Board of Missions; Don Frazier, Board of Deacons, and Ellen Ogilvie, Board of Christian Education.

Others participating in the service were David Stohlberg who gave the Call to Worship, Barbara Fluh who led the Opening Prayer and Jens Thornton who read the Scripture. The pastor also read passages from two Pilgrim writings, "Of Plimoth Plantation" by William Bradford and "Mourt's Relation" which contained a letter from Edward Winslow.

The Junior Choir sang "All the Earth" to a tune from the Diapason of 1680. The Senior Choir sang "Thanks Be To Thee" by Handel. Both groups are directed by Mary Ruth Scott.

Besides the traditional Thanksgiving hymns, the congregation sang psalms from the Ainsworth Psalter which was used by the Pilgrims. The sermon was entitled, "A Time for Giving Thanks."

Greeters for the service were Carl and Barbara Anderson. The ushers were Claudia Young, Ken Johnson, Barbara Frazer, Charles Todd, Kathi Williams, Bonnie Adams, Susan Midram and Steven Williams.

Deacons preparing and serving the Lord's Supper were Edna Swenson, Don Frazier, Ellen Ogilvie, Dave Mildram, Sandra Stohlberg, Tom Williamson, Grace Holmes and Ken Ray.

A reception was held for the new members after the service hosted by Genevieve Todd, Sandy Ahearn, Vi Willner, Richie Williams and Sally Wainwright.

The sermon next Sunday at 10:15 a.m., will be "What We Have Received". The Senior Choir and the Cinnamon Toast Crowd will sing.

South Shore Council of Churches Urges Cambodia Relief Contributions

The South Shore Council of Churches is urging members of area churches to contribute to Cambodian relief through Oxfam America, Church World Service or other denomination relief agencies.

In a letter mailed to area pastors, the council outlined the situation in Cambodia where out of a population of eight million people a decade ago, only four million are alive today.

The letter also said that over half of the remaining population is starving to death, and private and church sponsored groups are now being allowed to bring in critical food and medical supplies.

Officers of the South Shore Council of Churches are Rev. James Kimmell, president; Rev. Kenneth Lehman, first vice president; Rev. Daniel Allen, area vice president; Mrs. Gladys Johnson, area vice president.

Ecumenical Thanksgiving Eve Service At Blessed Sacrament

The annual Ecumenical Thanksgiving Eve service of the six peninsula area churches will be held Wednesday, Nov. 21, at 7:30 p.m. at Most Blessed Sacrament Church, Houghs Neck.

Rev. Daniel D. Allen, pastor of Adams Shore United Methodist Church, will speak on the International Year of the Child.

Others taking part will be Rev. James Hart and Rev. Richard Ufring, of Most Blessed Sacrament Church; Rev. Peter Martocchio, Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, Merry Mount; Rev. Gerald Osterman and Rev. George F. Carlson, St. Boniface Church, Germantown; Rev. Wayne Yerxa, pastor, Bethel Beach Church of the Nazarene; Rev. M. Alicia Corea and Dr. Peter V. Corea, Houghs Neck Congregational Church, and laymen from the various churches.

Rev. Ufring will direct an ecumenical choir.

Children are encouraged to attend with their parents and present gifts of canned goods for the needy, to be distributed by the Protestant Social Service Bureau.

The Thanksgiving offering will go to the DeVanna Child Abuse Center.

An informal get-together will be held after the service at St. Thomas Aquinas Hall.

Members of the Squantum community are planning a "Night of Appreciation" for Rev. Stephen Rock Saturday, Nov. 24, at 7 p.m. at the Star of the Sea Church hall.

Fr. Rock was at Star of the Sea Church for four years before being transferred recently to St. Mary's Church, Hull.

While in Squantum he was active with community members of all ages, especially the youth. The public is invited to attend the appreciation night.

Thanksgiving Day Service At Christian Science Church

A verse from First Thessalonians—"In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you"—is the opening text of a special Thanksgiving service at First Church of Christ, Scientist, 20 Greenleaf St., Quincy.

The hour-long annual service will be held Thursday, beginning at 10 a.m.

Scriptural passages chosen for the occasion point to God's abundant goodness and healing power.

Related passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy will also be read, including:

"The rich in spirit help the poor in one grand brotherhood, all having the same Principle, or Father; and blessed is that man who seeth his brother's need and supplieth it, seeking his own in another's good."

Hymns of thanksgiving, reading of the President's Thanksgiving Proclamation, time for quiet prayer, and expressions of gratitude by members of the congregation will be included in the meeting.

Mrs. Kathryn B. Selden and Miss June B. Wilson, presently serving as Readers of the church, will conduct the service. All are welcome. Care will be provided for very young children.

Special Thanksgiving Mass, Social At St. John's Wednesday

A special Thanksgiving Mass will be held Wednesday, Nov. 21, at 7:30 p.m. at St. John's Church.

Music will be by the church's folk group and adult choir.

A Thanksgiving social will follow in the church hall and parishioners are asked to bring desserts to share with the parish family.

The desserts can be dropped off at the church kitchen before Mass, and should be individually prepared for easy serving.

The parish will provide coffee and cider.

There will be a Thanksgiving Day Mass Thursday at 8 a.m., the only Mass of the day.

St. Joseph's, Point Congregational Ecumenical Mass

St. Joseph's Parish was scheduled to celebrate an ecumenical Mass with Point Congregational Church Tuesday.

Nov. 20, at 8 p.m. at the Congregational Church, 444 Washington St.

A family Thanksgiving Mass will be celebrated at St. Joseph's Church Thursday at 8 a.m. All families are welcome to attend.

There will also be a 9 a.m. Mass at St. Joseph's on Thanksgiving.

Labor Guild To Present

Cushing Awards At Nov. 30 Dinner

William Ryan of Warren Ave., Wollaston, president of the Labor Guild of the Archdiocese of Boston, announces the selection of three Greater Boston men for the 1979 Cushing Awards.

The awards will be presented at the 13th annual dinner Nov. 30, at the Sheraton-Boston to John F. O'Malley, management executive; Bertram W. Creese, negotiator in leather manufacture; and Robert S. Fuchs, head of a federal labor office.

The labor guild is a membership group of almost 900 men and women of all faiths whose work lies in labor relations.

Flu Alert Issued

The Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association has issued its annual alert for the mild outbreak of influenza that is expected by the State Department of Public Health this winter.

Dr. Raymond L. H. Murphy, president of the Massachusetts Thoracic Society, has urged physicians to obtain needed vaccine for those patients who might run the risk of being infected.

"The segment of our population most likely at risk includes those who have any chronic respiratory disorder, those with heart disease or anemia," he said. "Older persons are also susceptible."

2 Slates Explanation

No Ward 2 Feud Say Cerasoli, Raymondi

There is no feud among members of the Ward 2 Democratic Committee, says Rep. Robert A. Cerasoli (D-Quincy) and City Councillor Daniel G. Raymondi. But there are slightly differing versions of why there are two slates of 35 candidates each running for the Ward 2 Committee in the March 4 election.

James P. Papile, current chairman of the committee, said the second slate was put together because the name of State Committee woman Kathleen O'Donnell was left off the first slate.

Raymondi and O'Donnell were opponents earlier this month for the Ward 2 seat on the City Council. Raymondi won.

Cerasoli said the slate which contains his name and Raymondi's name was drawn up because Papile, as chairman, failed to contact them about a new slate and they got nervous as the deadline (Nov. 9) approached. "The old committee was relatively inactive," said Cerasoli. "We are running a slate of people who are active and want to be involved in the affairs of Ward 2."

He said 16 members of the present committee are on his slate.

"We waited until Wednesday (Nov. 7) to be contacted by anyone to put together a slate," said Cerasoli. "No one contacted us and it was getting late."

"Thursday I sat down with Raymondi and we talked to a number of people who were on the old committee. Then we went to people who expressed an interest in the past. In 36 hours we called as many people as we could."

Cerasoli said one of those contacted was Papile.

"He said he had a number of people who wanted to be on the slate," said Cerasoli. "He said he did not want to serve on the slate we were drawing up. He said there could be another slate."

Cerasoli said he was the impetus for organizing one of the slates "because we weren't getting any direction from the officers of the committee."

"We didn't feel that the present Ward 2 Committee was active enough," he said. "We are running a slate of people who want to be involved in ward activities."

"I told Jim Papile what I intended to do. I asked him to be on the slate. He said 'no'."

Cerasoli denied that the rival slates were the result of a feud between Raymondi and O'Donnell.

"I don't have time to get involved in feuds and petty factionalism," he said. "There are too many important things to be done in the ward."

Papile, who served as an assessor in the administration of former Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia, agreed he was asked to be on the slate but refused.

"I was approached by Cerasoli and Raymondi who showed me a list," he said. "My name was on it. I was told that the list included the active Democrats in Ward 2."

"But one of the most prominent Democrats was not on the list. We are honored to have the State Democratic Committee woman in our ward. Her name was left off. You can draw your own conclusion."

"A new list was put together with grass roots people on it."

Koch Club Plans 24th Year Of Christmas Charity Programs

The Koch Club of Quincy is preparing for its 24th year of Christmas charitable activities, announces Richard J. Koch, executive director of the organization.

Volunteers are welcome to assist and participate in the series of projects to help those in need during the holiday season.

Food will be provided to about 50 families for the holiday season including turkey, canned foods and fresh fruits and vegetables. The families are chosen with the assistance of local charitable and social service organizations. The supply of food is given to last for several days rather than just a Christmas dinner.

Each year families and individuals wishing to remain anonymous provide the Koch Club with donations to purchase the food for the projects. Additional assistance is required to help offset the rising price of food.

Koch said it would be impossible to accomplish the monumental task without the cooperation of many generous persons and organizations, including the students of Broad Meadows Junior High School, the Parker School, Mass. Fields School, Sacred Heart School of North Quincy, Quincy Senior Citizens of the Drop-In Center, Granite City Grange, the William C. Hanrahan Trust, Montclair Senior Citizens and Woodward School for Girls.

The Christmas project is now too enormous for the Koch Club to undertake alone and the assistance of organizations, families and individuals makes the annual food and gifts for needy families and children a reality, Koch explained.

One of the major events conducted by the Koch Club is the annual program to collect and recycle used toys for refurbishing and presentation to less fortunate boys and girls during the Christmas season. The "Conservation For Kids" project was initiated in 1971 with 300 gifts presented to boys and girls displaced by a pre-Christmas blaze at a housing project. A some of 14,000 items have been received, refurbished and distributed in Quincy, the South Shore and Greater Boston in the past nine years, making a brighter Christmas for thousands of children.

The Dress-A-Doll Program has become one of the most popular projects, with the discarded dolls donated for reuse, cleaned, repaired and new clothing provided, the result of many hours of work by women and girl volunteers.

Mrs. Simone Koch coordinates the Collection of Dolls for Gifts Program in Quincy while Mrs. Ginny Derringer heads up the other South Shore communities. Mrs. Sadie Wesley and the Granite City Grange have joined in with the donation of new and newly dressed dolls.

The Otis Elevator Company employees of Quincy have given up their annual employees' Christmas party for the past seven years and have instead purchased and provided new gifts for needy children. Mrs. Alice Buchan has coordinated the Otis Elevator donations for the Koch Club Christmas Charitable Activities.

The Koch Club is a coordinating agency of organizations, families and individuals wishing to share their holidays with those less fortunate and in need of help.

Penn's Hill Seniors To Meet Nov 27

The Penn's Hill Senior Citizen Club will meet Tuesday, Nov. 27, at 12:30 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church, 270 Franklin St., South Quincy.

Coffee and dessert will be served. The business meeting will follow. Entertainment will be by Mr. and Mrs. James Alfred who will play the piano and marimba.

Auction To Benefit Rainbow Girls Saturday

An auction to benefit the Rainbow Girls will be held Saturday, Nov. 24, at 10 a.m. at Quincy Masonic Temple, 1170 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

William Tuori will auction kitchen appliances, small furniture, games, children's musical instruments and other items.

Telephone Survey Of Class Of '79 Begins Nov 26,

The Quincy Public Schools will conduct a telephone survey of the 1979 graduating class beginning Monday, Nov. 26th and continuing until early December.

The phone contacts will attempt to determine the occupational and/or educational pursuits of last year's graduate. If the graduate is not available at the time of the call, any member of the family may provide the information.

Calling hours will be during week days and occasionally extend into early evening.

Since this data is required by the State Department of Education, the cooperation of those contacted will be appreciated, the school department said.

Vo-Tech Open House Nov. 29

Persons interested in vocational education are invited to attend Quincy Vocational Technical School's annual Open House Thursday, Nov. 29, 7-9 p.m.

The Open House provides an opportunity for parents, students and prospective employers to talk with instructors and become familiar with the programs offered 9th, 10th, 11th, and 12th grade students, and post-graduates in the 13th and 14th years.

All departments of the school, will be open including Electro-Electronics, Metals and Machines, Power Mechanics, General Woodworking, General Piping, Food Preparation, Computer Science, Health Occupations, and Graphic and Commercial Arts.

Student guides will assist visitors in locating departments and teachers within the building.

Marshall To Serve On Prison Committee

Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford H. Marshall has agreed to serve on the Special Sentence of Imprisonment Committee that will study sentencing procedures, including weekend sentence commitments.

Marshall said he hopes to be able to illustrate the problems of such commitments in Norfolk County and thus upgrade the county's operational procedures.

"I also hope that the committee will act as liaison among the judiciary and correctional segment in implementing a more comprehensive process regarding special sentencing," he said.

He said the committee may also assist the county judiciary and the sheriff in planning a new house of correction and jail, which was recently approved by the governor.

A Report to the Citizens of Quincy

From the Quincy School Committee Negotiating Team

Negotiating Team

We, the members of the Quincy School Committee Negotiating Team, wish to report to the citizens of Quincy on our position concerning the status of current collective bargaining negotiations. In our judgement, the major issues between the Quincy School Committee and the Quincy Education Association are three:

- SALARY
- LENGTH OF THE WORKDAY
- STAFF EVALUATION AND SENIORITY

This report reflects the position of the Quincy School Committee Negotiating Team relative to these three issues.

Salary

Since the summer of 1979, the Quincy School Committee Negotiating Team has had pending before the Negotiating Team of the Quincy Education Association a salary offer as follows:

- 4% - September 1, 1979
- 5% - September 1, 1980
- 4% - September 1, 1981

The average salary for a classroom teacher in the Quincy School System is $19,454.00. However, in no way does the Quincy School Committee Negotiating Team suggest that teachers are overpaid. It is the Team's firm conviction that Quincy has an excellent school system largely due to its corps of competent and dedicated professionals. Nonetheless, the Quincy School Committee Negotiating Team contends that its position is one of fairness and justice.

Figure 1.1 represents the minimum and maximum salary levels of teachers currently in effect in Quincy and neighboring communities. The salaries are listed in rank order.

Length of the Workday

It is the opinion of the Negotiating Team of the Quincy School Committee that its request to have staff at their work stations for a period of time before and after school is reasonable, and does reflect what is already common practice in other school systems. The purpose of such a request is to implement a common standard that will prevail throughout the school system. Such a standard will also provide for the orderly reception of students in the morning and their safe dismissal in the afternoon.

Figure 1.2, which is in rank order, represents the total number of contractual hours required per week by staff in the Quincy School System as compared with staff in other school systems within the greater metropolitan area.

Staff Evaluation and Seniority

The Quincy School Committee Negotiating Team believes that a program of evaluation for all those employed by the Quincy School Committee should be implemented for the purposes of:

- Recognizing the Quality of Performance
- Improving the Educational Process.

Unfortunately, we currently face the reality of declining enrollment, thus, the necessity of a lay-off. At present, the lay-off action of the Quincy School Committee Negotiating Team is tied to seniority and the Negotiating Team is not proposing to change that for at least three years. It feels such a stance to be more supportive of the teachers' position on this issue since it is expected that three years from now the enrollment decline should diminish to a significant degree the need for further reduction in force. Under the Quincy School Committee Negotiating Team proposal, individual evaluations would begin to take place in the 1980-1981 school year but they would not be used for a reduction in force until at least the 1983-1984 school year. If each educator were to be evaluated at least once a year, it would take that long a period of time to gather a fair and accurate record of evaluation of each person. The evaluation process that the Quincy School Committee Negotiating Team wishes to implement is summarized as follows:

1. The person being evaluated will participate in determining who the evaluator or supervisor will be. If a disagreement emerges appeal procedures will be provided.

2. All evaluations will be done against a common standard for all people in a particular category, level, or subject area.

3. The model of supervision to be implemented is a clinical supervisory model. It is a process that aims at helping an individual identify and clarify problems, receive data from the supervisor, and develop solutions with the assistance of the supervisor. The clinical supervisory process seeks to have each person become a self-actualized individual. Steps within this process include:

- 3.1 The supervisor and supervisee plan together. This plan would include specification of outcomes, anticipated problems, conditions, and criteria of evaluation and provision for feedback.
- 3.2 The supervisor and supervisee plan jointly the period of observation and the process by which data will be collected.
- 3.3 The evaluator will observe the performance of the evaluatee.
- 3.4 Jointly, the individuals will analyze the information that was gathered during the period of observation.
- 3.5 The supervisor and supervisee will confer together and discuss the impressions each had concerning the performance of the individual being evaluated.
- 3.6 The evaluator and evaluatee will undertake renewed planning. If the data gathered indicates that there is a need to improve the performance then the supervisor and supervisee will mutually agree to the kind of change that should occur and the supervisor will provide whatever assistance is required to help the person being evaluated.

It is the Committee's hope that these long and frustrating periods of collective bargaining can come to a speedy end so that all of us can redirect our full attention to the education of the young people of Quincy.

Edna Austin: A Standout 'First'

Quincy has had many "firsts" in its illustrious history. Edna Beatrice Austin, the first woman to serve in its City Council, has to be one of the outstanding firsts.

AUSTIN

Although outnumbered 8-1 during a time when women in public office was still somewhat of a novelty, her male colleagues never overwhelmed her. No one pushed her around. She was never afraid to stand up and speak out clearly on any issue. She never straddled an issue. She never ducked a controversy.

Urban renewal, for example, have been virtually obscene words to some city councillors down through the years. She voted for it. And for revaluation, too, another "dirty" word. And she voted for them knowing she was in the minority and that it would hurt her politically.

She served 15 years as Quincy's first "Madam Councillor". She championed the city ordinance that makes it mandatory to install fire detectors in new homes in Quincy.

It was her resolve that led to the appointment of women school traffic supervisors.

She proposed the state law which gives cities increased borrowing powers for public projects.

In her final act as a City Councillor in December, 1959, she introduced a resolve to ban space heaters in homes because of the many tragic fires they had touched off and the many lives they snuffed out. It became a state law in 1965.

She was a woman of foresight. This was further quite evident as you look back on her retirement announcement in July, 1959 when she said:

"In spite of the long hours of hard work, I shall miss the satisfaction derived from the completion of some long-awaited improvements, such as a new city hall, an incinerator, urban renewal to provide room for new homes and industries, the development of the area of west-of-the-tracks, a cross-town artery from the expressway and a revaluation of real estate." When she died last week at the age 93, she had lived long enough to see most of these projects become realities or to see them now in the serious planning stage.

Some 400 persons—including civic, political, educational, religious and fraternal leaders—jammed into the Broad Meadows Junior High School to pay tribute to her in January, 1960.

There were many eloquent words of praise for her including: Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa: "Quincy is known as a progressive city and it is due largely to her."

Dr. Edward Mann, then president of Eastern Nazarene College and a Quincy School Committeeman: "Faithful in service, she stood head and shoulders above the average public servant. She probed to find the truth and took her side in what in her judgment was the right side."

But perhaps, the finest tributes came from three political opponents who were there that night. As the crowd was leaving, one said:

"Well, I'll take my hat off to her. I seldom agreed with her but you know, she had a lot of guts. She was never afraid to take a stand regardless of how controversial it was."

The second said: "She never waited to see which way the political wind was blowing. When she had something to say, she said it—and she didn't count the votes first."

And, the third probably said it all: "Quincy is going to miss her."

IN CASE YOU like to keep track of such trivia, the biggest voter turnout in the city election was in Ward 1 where 57.6 per cent cast ballots compared to 52.2 per cent in the entire city. Most of those ballots in Ward 1 were for favorite son, Francis McCauley, who easily topped the at-large field to win his second term.

SMALLEST VOTE, incidentally, was in Ward 4 where only 46.2 per cent of the registered voters turned out, probably because Councillor James Sheets had no opposition for a fourth term.

DID YOU KNOW that George F. Bryan, for whom the Bryan VFW Post is named, was the first Quincy boy killed in World War I. He was six days short of his 17th birthday when he went down on the destroyer Jacob Jones, torpedoed by a German submarine Dec. 6, 1917 off the coast of Ireland. The skipper of the Jones was Lt. Comdr. David Bagley, brother-in-law of Josephus Daniels, then the Secretary of the Navy.

In Quincy Visit

Barbara Speaks For George On GOP Campaign Trail

By TOM HENSHAW
George couldn't come so he sent Barbara which, once you get to know Barbara, isn't such a bad idea at all.

Barbara is Mrs. George Bush and her husband, the one who couldn't come, is the former U. N. ambassador, head of the CIA and congressman from Texas who is one of the horde running for the Republican nomination for President.

Mrs. Bush, looking for all the world as if she had just returned from a brisk canter through the Blue Hills, visited The Quincy Sun last week to talk about her husband.

"I'm really a housewife," she said, "and I think that's a very good job. But I'm going to be talking about his qualifications and that's what I've been doing all over the country."

She was born in New York City, either Brooklyn or the Bronx. She's not sure and apparently no one had ever asked her the question before.

"My mother drove me right home to Rye, N.Y., where she lived," she said. "I've got to ask my brothers and sisters sometime. I must have a birth certificate around."

"I'm trying very hard to talk about George's background which I think is extraordinary when you think that he did all those jobs that were tough and difficult and nobody's ever cast aspersions on anything George Bush has ever done."

They were married when he was 20 and she was 19 and a student at Smith College.

"I attended Smith," she said, with the emphasis on attended. "Someone said to me the other day, 'I didn't say that when I introduced you because I thought maybe you were thrown out. I was not thrown out. I married George Bush."

"The world has been very good to the Bushes. And I think George wants to put something back into the system. He looked all around and there's nobody better than George Bush to run for President. He feels he can make a difference."

Barbara Bush has lived in 27 houses in 17 cities in the 34 years that they have been married.

"I've always been very supportive of my husband," she said. "What he wants to do, that's what I want to do. When we were married I thought I'd be like my own mother, a housewife and a mother. I've been all those things and more."

"We've had a very exciting, interesting life. George built a business from scratch. He felt that money wasn't the whole answer to anything so he sold out his business and ran for Congress and he has sort of served ever since."

She makes it plain that she speaks for her husband, not herself, on the campaign trail.

"If Barbara Bush were running for office -- and I wouldn't think that unusual -- I would want George to either say what I think or not say it at all," she said. "And that's what I'm trying to do."

"I've heard George Bush say that he wants a three-ocean Navy and I know that he feels the Navy should be returned to a world Navy and I also know he feels that the government should retrain people so that they can be relocated with other jobs."

"I know you're having problems with your shipyard," she added apologetically, "and I know that I'm not really up on some issues as I should be."

"But I'm a terribly good housewife."

-Could Be Another Cleveland

Tobin: 'Bite The Bullet'

By BERNIE O'DONNELL
It's time to "bite the bullet," says Mayor Arthur Tobin.

He says the city must not appropriate any money to fund increases in fuel costs or raises for city employees.

Tobin told The School Committee he would not accept a request for $1.875 million in supplemental funds beyond the $33 million school budget approved last spring. That extra money would have to be found in the school department's existing budget, he said.

"I cannot in good conscience add another $7 to the tax rate," Tobin said. "I'm asking you to bite the bullet the way I'm biting the bullet at City Hall."

Without some check on city spending, Tobin said, "we could be heading the way of Cleveland."

"We could run into payroll paydays - city-wide," the mayor added.

The city is now studying ways to make what money it has already appropriated go further, he added.

"We are rearranging certain priorities, he said after last Thursday's meeting. We may be halting certain contracts and looking at various programs to see what can be eliminated without hurting services."

"If a request comes before me for $5,000, for example, I will send it back, ask people to rethink their position and see if we can make it $3,500," Tobin said.

Positions held by retiring persons may be held vacant to try to hold down the city payroll, he added.

Tobin seemingly hinted at layoffs in Thursday's meeting but later denied that any long-term layoffs were being discussed.

After Tobin told the committee that all raises negotiated with city employees would be funded out of existing funds, member Mary Collins said that would be impossible, unless there were layoffs.

"Well, you just hit it; but I'm not going to say that," Tobin replied. "Don't you think a reasonable person would come to that conclusion?"

"I have no statement to make on that at this time," Tobin said. He then added that Hospital Administrator Anthony DeFalco had met with him Thursday to propose a plan, involving layoffs, to deal with the hospital's deficit problem.

That proposal involved one-day, temporary layoffs, DeFalco said Friday.

Tobin's warning notwithstanding, the other six members of the school committee voted unanimously to send the $1.875 supplemental budget request to the mayor. Tobin, the nominal chairman of the committee, abstained from that vote.

The supplemental request includes $315,000 to fund raises negotiated with school secretaries, custodians and teacher aides, $600,000 to cover increased utility costs and $960,000 to fund the committee's "last, best offer" to the city's 1,000 teachers.

Committee member Francis Anselmo, calling the mayor "dictatorial", returned Tobin's challenge.

"I'm asking you to bite the bullet, Mr. Mayor," said Anselmo. "I'm asking you to have the courage to raise taxes so that schools can operate at a minimum of efficiency." The committee may be forced to launch a suit forcing Tobin to accept the budget request to protect the committee's "fiscal autonomy," Anselmo said.

Mrs. Collins asked Tobin to accept that $1.875 request and submit it to a vote by the City Council.

"There are 15 of us responsible for the tax rate," she said. "Why don't you let the city council decide?"

"Have you ever heard any other elected official blamed when the tax rate goes up?" Tobin asked. "The buck stops in my office and I'm making the decision."

$561,794 Bid Accepted

Signed Contract By Nov. 30 Will End Long Revaluation Fight

Quincy has been granted another stay of execution in its revaluation case and this time it appears that the 15-year controversy over full cash property value will be over by Nov. 30.

All that remains is for the city to produce a signed contract with the real firm, P. R. C. Jacobs of McLean, Va., by that date and the prospect of a state-directed reval will be removed.

Asst. City Solicitor Dennis E. Harrington presented everything else to Supreme Court Justice Herbert P. Wilkins Monday and the judge promptly extended the city's deadline for full compliance from Nov. 19 to Nov. 30.

"The justice was extremely happy with Quincy's progress," said Harrington.

"We still don't have a signed contract but he accepted the report on progress because the Department of Revenue concurred in everything we did."

"He forgave us the technical problem of not having the contract there today and he gave us until Nov. 30 to submit the actual contract."

A $561,794 contract to revalue the city at 100 per cent so that property classification can be implemented in fiscal 1982 was awarded to P. R. C. Jacobs of McLean, Va., last week.

The signed contract was expected to be received by mail at City Hall early this week.

Harrington said Judge Wilkins accepted a signed contract from the city of New Bedford Monday with the stipulation should it fail to follow its terms the state would take over its revaluation.

"I believe he will make a similar order for Quincy when we submit the signed contract," said Harrington.

"He will retain jurisdiction and if, for any reason, the city's effort should cease, he will step back in and take over. He's not letting anybody off the hook."

The Jacobs company was scheduled to have a representative in Quincy Monday to begin preliminary work.

The contract was awarded to Jacobs despite the fact that the firm's bid was not the lowest of the four received.

Chief Assessor John Comer said the low bidder, Robert J. Finnegan and Associates of Acton, was rejected because it had no "track record" and most of the work would be done by a subcontractor.

The second low bidder, Systems Technology of Concord, also did not have a track record, he said, in that it had never completed a revaluation job, although it was working on some. Finnegan bid $509,000. Systems Technology $547,300.

"Jacobs has done many, many jobs," said Comer, "and many of the projects it has completed were much larger than the city of Quincy. We have 24,000 parcels. Jacobs has done in excess of 400,000."

He said Jacobs is also able to provide bonding "without question."

"Bonding is paramount on this job because of the past history of revaluation. We cannot afford to place the city of Quincy in any jeopardy whatsoever," he said.

Harrington said that under normal conditions the assessors would have recommended the low bidder to the Mayor.

"But in this instance," he said, "the time frame is critical and the board had to evaluate the ability of the contractors to perform and the level of guarantee the contractor could provide that his performance would be adequate in time."

"Since Jacobs is the only company with a track record of doing large revaluations and the only company able to provide bonding without question, it was recommended that they be selected."

Jacobs performance on the contract will be monitored by Sal Ruocco of Capital Appraisal Services of Ballston Lake, N.Y., at a consultant's fee of $252 a day up to $45,200.

Capital Appraisal Services started in August and drew up the specifications under which the reval contract was bid.

Council, Police Ask Curb On Drinking

Drinking, particularly among teen-agers and war workers, captured the attention of official Quincy.

The Council for Alcohol Education called on the city to reduce the number of liquor licenses available and control the hours of sales.

"Some bars in Quincy are open 110 hours a week," Mayor Charles A. Ross was told, and the easy access to intoxicating beverages "impairs the efficiency of war workers."

Meanwhile, Capt. George W. Fallon, head of the Quincy Police Criminal Investigation Bureau, promised swift prosecution of bartenders and cafe owners who sell liquor to minors.

Teen-agers who falsify their ages to obtain alcoholic beverages also faced court action.

"There is all together too much drinking and drunkenness in Quincy among teen-aged boys," said Capt. Fallon.

DINNER AT HO JO'S

The Thanksgiving dinner at the Howard Johnson's Restaurant in the Granite Trust Building Quincy is featured:

Fresh fruit cup, cream of celery soup with croutons, roast stuffed young turkey, giblet gravy, cranberry sauce, baked potato, hearts of lettuce with French dressing, sweet mixed pickles, hot rolls and butter, mince pie, coffee, Tokay grapes, apple cider, mixed nuts and after dinner mints.

All that for $2.25.

QUINCY UPSETS NORTH

Quincy finished the season with a 3-4-2 record while North Quincy ended up 4-4-0.

City Pier Damaged In Blizzard One Step From Repair

"It was pretty discouraging," said City Councillor Leo J. Kelly, "but we stayed with it and it looks like we're going to win."

Kelly was speaking of the 21-month fight with the state and federal government for funds with which to replace the city pier in Hough's Neck that was destroyed in the Blizzard of February, 1978.

All that remains is approval by the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration on the award of a $13,180,700 contract to rebuild the pier.

The story of the city pier since February, 1978, is one of inter-governmental fougals.

A few days after the Blizzard the State Department of Environmental Quality Engineering and the city agreed that damage to the pier was $75,000.

Two weeks after that, however, the DEQE reduced the claim to $9,968 because of an error in mathematics made in calculating the number of board feet involved.

The Quincy Public Works Department prepared a bid for pier repair and got a low bid of $147,220 from J. M. Cashman, Inc., of North Weymouth.

The Federal Disaster Assistance Administration and the State Regional Coordinator reviewed the bid last April, reinspected the pier last May, and upped the claim to $34,219 by including additional damage.

The project was rebid last Oct. 18, and once again Cashman was low bidder, this time with a bid of $93,180.70, and the State Disaster Recovery Team recommended that the bid be allowed.

Now it's up to the federal government.

"The aggravating thing about it," said Kelly, "is that it could have been done for $75,000 in 1978 and it could have been repaired and in use last summer."

Drainage Canal Sought By State Street South

The Army Corps of Engineers is seeking public comment on a proposal by SSB Realty Inc. to construct a drainage canal on its property in North Quincy to improve flood control.

The 1,030-foot ditch, four feet wide and up to five and a half feet deep, would run along the southwest border of SSB's property from a point behind the houses on Harriet Ave. to the Neponset River.

The proposal also includes additional riprap chutes to convey surface water to the canal and plugging an existing drain to improve flood control on adjacent properties.

"This work will also reintroduce large quantities of salt water into the marsh thereby preserving its salt water characteristics," said the Army Corps of Engineers.

Comments on the plan should be addressed to the Army Corps of Engineers, 424 Trapelo Rd., Waltham 02154 in writing by Dec. 3.

MONEY TALKS

Gone are the days when creditors could quarter your carcass!

By Philip J. Lawrence, President

Colonial Federal Savings and Loan Association of Quincy, Holbrook & Wareham

8-6 Weekdays

8-7:30 Thursdays

The fate of debtors in ancient times was severe. The early Romans, though noted as law makers, gave legal creditors the privilege of dividing the carcass of their debtor or selling him and his family into slavery.

In medieval times, debtors were consigned with more serious criminals to stroke the oars of galleys plying the Mediterranean and other seas, their terms of enslaved service conveniently forgotten.

Similar attitudes toward debtors prevailed in colonial America. Benjamin Franklin's Poor Richard gave the measure in his Almanack: "The second Vice is Lying, the First is running in Debt."

Quite a far cry from the present day, when debt and personal bankruptcy are often taken casually. Financial experts estimate that 20 million Americans are in financial trouble, with current liabilities that exceed their assets. As one writer notes, "Using credit cards for shovels, they have dug themselves so deeply into debt that their family unity, jobs, and mental and physical health are threatened."

The number of debt-ridden families is growing. "We are poised to reach unprecedented highs of family debt distress," says Robert Gibson, president of the National Foundation for Consumer Credit.

The psychological differences between two distinct types -- savers and spenders -- have always fascinated financial counselors. Some people with moderate incomes manage to build their monetary reserves; these are the familiar customers of savings and loans and other thrift institutions. The typical saver at a savings and loan association had an account balance at year-end 1977 that topped $5,000, according to the United States League of Savings Associations. The average account balance of $5,021 was an all-time high.

Turning over that savings account to a spender type would be like handing a fifth of booze to an alcoholic. Instead of saving, these people see themselves as supplementing their income with credit. An average client uses every resource available -- life insurance loans, debt consolidation loans, credit card loans -- to spend about $400 a month more than he makes, says Gerard Lareau, president of Consumer Credit Counseling Service of Greater New York. This behavior can go on as long as two years before the roof caves in.

The unpayable debt load of people [exclusive of mortgage loans] who come to Walter Gilbert, a Philadelphia consultant, now averages $8,200. "People have gotten in so gosh-darn deep," he says.

Thank heaven for the saving types we are privileged to deal with!

Handicapped Adults Annual Christmas Bazaar Nov. 28

The annual Christmas Bazaar by the handicapped adults in the evening recreation program at the Lincoln-Hancock School will be held Wednesday, Nov. 28, from 6:15 to 8:30 p.m. at the school.

Various items made by class members will be on sale.

They will include ceramic pieces, paintings and leather craft items. A handmade quilt will also be raffled off.

The students have worked all year preparing for this annual event, and funds raised will go towards buying supplies for the program.

The program is cosponsored by, Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore Area, Inc. and the Quincy Recreation Department.

The Lincoln Hancock School is located at 300 Granite St.

North Quincy Drama Club To Present 'Glass Menagerie'

The North Quincy High School Drama Club will present Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie" Nov. 29-30, and Dec. 1 at 8 p.m. in the Atlantic Junior High School auditorium.

Tickets can be purchased at the door.

"Menagerie" is a play of recollection. The plot concentrates on the lives of three very different individuals who compose the Wingfield family, and the failure of those characters to fulfill their dreams.

Cast members include Michael Chapoorian, Janice Curran, Carolyn Schultz and Robert Murphy.

Linda Kelleher is directing the play, assisted by Amy Buckley.

T. Owen Trainor To Speak At Historical Society Meeting

T. Owen Trainor will speak on the Quincy City Hall Complex at a meeting of the Quincy Historical Society Thursday, Nov. 29, at Adams Academy Building.

The business meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m., and the address will be at 8 p.m.

Trainor is an architect and engineer who designed the new City Hall and Constitution Common.

He advised the Committee for the Bicentennial Celebration and Commemoration of the Massachusetts Constitution on design selection for the Constitution Monument.

The public is invited to attend.

SUPPORTING THE 'TOYS FOR TOTS' program are (front row) Marine Corporals Kelly Devault and Buck Renninger of Weymouth Naval Air Station with Joey Tachbourse and (back row) Richard Venna and George Fay of the Christmas Festival Committee, Mrs. Betty McNally, Mayor Arthur Tobin and QCBPA president Edward Coyle.

U.S. Marines At Parade To Collect 'Toys For Tots'

A detachment of U.S. Marines will be collecting toys for needy children at Sunday's Christmas Parade in Quincy.

It's part of the Marines annual "Toys for Tots" program across the country and the parade in Quincy offers a unique opportunity to collect them.

Parade-goers who have new or used toys around the house are urged to bring them to the parade and give them to the Marines so that they can be repaired and distributed at Christmas.

The marines will walk on each side of their float to collect the toys and deposit them in the float trailer.

Eagles Auxiliary To Hold Flea Market, Craft Show Saturday

The Quincy Fraternal Order of Eagles Auxiliary will hold a Flea Market and Craft Show Saturday, Nov. 24, from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at 47 Massachusetts Ave., Quincy Point.

Refreshments will be available.

'Gypsy' Auditions Set At Broad Meadows

Auditions for the Quincy Community Theatre's next production, "Gypsy," are scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 27, and Thursday, Nov. 29 at 7 p.m. at Broad Meadows Junior High School auditorium.

Adults and children ages seven and up are invited to try out for roles.

The musical comedy by Steve Sundheim and Jules Stein will be presented Feb. 8, 9, 15 and 16.

Las Vegas Night At Archbishop Williams Saturday

The Archbishop Williams

Men's Association and Ladies Guild are sponsoring a Las Vegas Night Saturday night, Nov. 24, in the school gym, 8 Independence Ave., Braintree.

A cocktail hour will start at 7 p.m. An introduction to the games for those unfamiliar will follow. The games will start at 7:30 p.m. Refreshments will be available.

Tickets may be purchased at the door or by contacting the Archbishop Williams Development office, 843-3578.

Dr. Creedon To Speak At National Education Association Convention

School Supt. Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon has been invited to make a presentation on "Developing Public Policy at the Local Level," at the National Community Education Association's 14th annual convention in Boston.

The presentation will be made during "Community Education Week," Nov. 26-30. Mary Jo Riley, coordinator of Quincy Community Schools, is serving as contact person for local attendants to the convention.

Dr. Creedon also has been asked to serve as a consultant to Project ERR's quarterly Superintendent Seminar to be held in Braintree Dec. 5. Subject of the seminar will be "Competency Based Education: The Quincy Plan."

The Quincy Plan represents one practical model for implementing the policy on basic skills improvement promulgated by the Massachusetts Department of Education, and is a detailed step by step management model for fulfilling all the requirements to achieve the state policy.

Talks Continue

Teachers Settlement May Be Near

Teachers and school committee negotiators were scheduled to resume talks at 10 a.m. Tuesday amid signs that a settlement might be near.

A meeting lasting over eight hours on Monday broke up after 6 p.m. According to Quincy Education Association President Robert Garner, a "gag order" requested by state fact-finder John Higgins prohibited participants from discussing what progress had been made in the session.

It was the first meeting between the two groups since an over-six hour session last Tuesday evening. However, some observers felt after Monday's meeting that a settlement might be imminent.

Service Academy Deadline Nov. 30

Cong. Brian J. Donnelly (D-Boston) has issued a reminder to students interested in one of the service academies that his deadline for accepting 1980 application information is Friday, Nov. 30.

Donnelly said that, as of that date, all files will be closed and the selection process will begin with nominees for the four academies chosen by Jan. 31, 1980.

Thanksgiving Day Warm-Up

Quincy Edges North In Sophs Battle

The Quincy and North Quincy sophomore football teams have played many close games in their long series but there have been few harder-hitting defensive battles than that staged last Saturday before another good crowd at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Mark Conroy's Quincy team, thanks to a pass interception and 40-yard return by Steve Spencer early in the game and Sean Martin's kick for the extra point, squeezed by North, 7-6, to avenge last season's 15-14 loss. Quincy finished 6-2-1.

The young Raiders, under veteran coach Ted Sadowski, went into the game with only a 2-6 record after having a 9-1 season last year, but the fired-up defense shut out the young Presidents.

Quincy's defense, too, shut out North until a pass interference call set up North's touchdown with 3:07 left in the game.

The game started amidst a dispute as to which team would be on the home side of the stadium. Quincy's varsity will be the home team Thanksgiving and, therefore, North should have been the home team last Saturday.

However, North was the home club a year ago and both coaches insisted on having the home side. It was finally decided that both teams would be on the home side.

"Both defenses were outstanding," Conroy said. "Ted's team defended us really well. Mike Connors did a superb job for us both ways. He had suffered a neck injury and wasn't expected to play, but he received the doctor's okay and did a tremendous job."

Conroy singled out Steve Goguen, who played hurt quarterback Martin. Spencer, Mark Picot, Mike Nevins, Dino Malchionno, and Glen Straung for their work in the backfield and had good words for Mike Guidice, Connors, Dave Donnelly, Mike Burnes, John Taglieri, Mike LeBlanc, Steve Aluisi and Mike Shaughnessy in the offensive line.

Defensive coach Bill Deal praised Burnes, Donnelly, Paul Quigley, Guidice, Taglieri, Nevins, Goguen, Spencer, Straung, Shaughnessy, Connors, Dennis LaCorte, Paul Reinhardt, little Jim Kupkowsky, Mike Chiochio and Bill Walsh. Walsh and Shaughnessy knocked down North's pass for the winning points in the end zone.

"It was a good, hard-hitting game and I thought both defenses were tremendous," said a disappointed Sadowski. "We had our chances but couldn't capitalize."

Ted lauded the efforts of Kevin McSweeney, Ray Mallory, Steve Kallenberg, Chris Butler, Rich Stevens, Steve Howley, Rich Hernon, Ed Leary, Jim Hutchinson, Eric Riley and Mike Hutchings on defense and singled out Mallory and Joe Dudek for their running.

Spencer's pass interception and 40-yard touchdown return came near the midway point in the opening period and Martin kicked the winning point.

A few plays later Martin threw a beautiful long pass to Shaughnessy, which brought the Presidents from their 43 all the way to North's seven. Butler bringing him down with a desperation tackle, but the Raiders held on their two.

In the second period Bill Gray went in, apparently to punt for North, but threw a perfect pass to Hutchinson, who caught it deep in Quincy territory but a jarring tackle by Straung knocked the ball loose.

North got another chance when Picot tumbled the pass from center on a punting situation and the Raiders had the ball on Quincy's 33, but the Presidents held. Later, the Raiders had another opportunity when Riley recovered a fumble on his 46.

Quarterback Ed Carroll hit Dudek with a pass covering 25 yards to Quincy's 20 late in the game and, after pass interference gave North the ball on the five, Carroll sneaked over on his second try. The pass for the winning points was knocked down.

North received still another chance when Howley recovered the onside kick but a pass interception by Picot ended that threat.

The crowd included the players and coaches of the two varsity teams, Principals Lloyd Hill of Quincy and Peter Chisom of North and Athletic Coordinator Carl Leone.

13,000 Expected At 10 A.M. Kickoff Presidents Eye Title, Best Record In Years

QUINCY

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Quincy football team not only will be trying for its second straight city championship under coach Tom Fitzgerald, but it will be seeking its best record since an unbeaten season 10 years ago when it faces North Quincy Thursday at 10 at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The Presidents will finish with a 7-2-1 record if they down the Raiders.

Quincy has played consistently well this fall, losing only to the undefeated Suburban League leaders, Brockton and Waltham [both 7-0].

"We have put together a good attack and an outstanding defense," Fitzgerald said. "We played well in both our losses and our only poor showing against New Bedford [8-8 tie] was the result of confusion in our backfield due to injuries to three key backs."

Fitzie, a former North Quincy all-scholastic in his second year as the Presidents' boss, plans nothing new for the holiday classic.

Quincy's attack is centered around Tommy Brennan, small but rugged halfback, who has 1111 yards rushing going into the game. He is believed to be the only Quincy player ever to go over 1000 yards.

Brennan, who sparked the Presidents to a 13-7 win last year with 97 yards gained and the winning touchdown, leads the team in scoring with 10 touchdowns, including both in the 14-6 win at Brookline in Quincy's last game.

However, Brennan has plenty of running support and the opposition can't key on him with Dan Goldrick [115 yards against Brookline], Scott Richardson, Ed Iodice and quarterback Dave Austin all fine runners. Austin is also a capable passer and has had some good passing days.

Quincy has a fine offensive line spearheaded by senior Geoff Caffisch and junior Fran Duggan, two of the finest offensive tackles in the state.

Defensively the Presidents have several standouts, headed by Lou Matthews, who has been outstanding in every game. Charlie McCall and Paul Martin are excellent in the secondary.

Quincy should be at full strength for the Raiders and Fitzgerald will start Paul Bandera and either McCall or Martin at end on offense. Duggan and Caffisch at tackle, Howie Chadbourne and Tom Rand, who ranks first in his class, at guard, Jeff Heath at center, Austin at quarterback, Goldrick and Brennan at halfback and Richardson at

Also due to see service on offense are halfbacks Iodice and Mike Abboud, quarterback Ron Pettinelli, the number one punter, center Grover Hensley, ends John Griffiths, Sean Burke, Scott Anson, Bill Hall and Ed Mackey, tackles Bob Burns and John Varrasso, guard Ed Quinlan and punter Jim Wilson.

Starters on defense will be Mackey or Chris Chevalier and Steve Picot or Quinlan at end, Bill Murray and Mike Petrillo at tackle, Jim McNeil noseguard, Matthews and Walter Kilgallon linebacks, Brennan or Bill Flynn and Iodice or John Kavanaugh cornerbacks and McCall and Martin safeties.

Backs Ken Gustin, Todd Veale and Jim Megnia and tackle Burns will also see action on defense.

Fitzgerald has his same crew of assistants as last year, Bill Mavor, Peter Chelle, Joe Goguen and Mark Conroy.

Raiders Have One Thing On Mind: UPSET

The North Quincy football team coming off its only bad game of the year, has been working extra hard in preparation for the holiday classic with Quincy.

The Raiders, who lost their first three games, bounced back to win four out of five before being bombed two weeks ago by Catholic Memorial, 35-0.

"Of course, you don't have to get any North Quincy or Quincy player up for this game, but the boys were very disappointed in their showing against Catholic Memorial and are determined to prove they are not as bad as that game showed," Coach Dave Burke said.

In that game both the North offense, which had really been coming along, and the defense, which had been superb all season, collapsed.

"We won't change our offense, we'll just hope we can revert back to the form we showed in the five games prior to the Memorial game," Burke said.

North is assured of finishing with a better record than a year ago (3-7), but the Raiders hope to upset the Presidents, who have won the last two games against them, and wind up 5-5.

Capt. Leo Graham will return to the lineup after missing the last three games and, although he is not scheduled to start on offense, he will join Rick Anderson, Bill Dailey, Pat Carroll and Bob McCormick to give North a fine running attack. Quarterback Jack Brown can also run well.

A key to the Raiders' hopes is junior end Jack Leone, who has kicked three field goals and 10 of 11 extra points. He barely missed kicking field goals of 47 and 40 yards. Jack is also an excellent pass receiver.

The defense was outstanding in every game until the Memorial game and Asst. Coach Ken McPhee promises there will be no repeat of the performance in that game.

Chris Petrillo has been a real standout throughout the season as was Graham before being injured. The secondary has been strong with Dave Howley and Tony Camillo especially outstanding.

North will open on offense with Joe Mullen and either Joe Feeney or Dave Penzo at end, John Buckley and John McNamara at tackle, Ed Miller and Lou DiPietro at guard, Jim Dodd at center, Brown at quarterback, Anderson and Dailey at halfback and Carroll at fullback.

Others playing offensively will be Leone at end, Kevin Durkin and Dave Cavanaugh at quarterback, Graham and McCormick at halfback, Kevin Doherty at tackle, Bob Pimental and Brian Downing at guard, Bob Bolster at end and Brian O'Leary doing the punting.

The starters on defense will be Joe Cremin and Glen Segalla at end, Glen Ross and John Gorczyca at tackle, Bill McCarthy

JACK LEONE of North Quincy, shown kicking without his shoe, could be a vital factor in the Thanksgiving game. Leone, with Jack Brown holding, has kicked 10 of 11 extra points and three field goals and barely missed on tries of 47 and 40 yards.

Donations For Darryl Williams

The School Committee has given permission for the Quincy Public Schools to participate in a fund raising effort for Darryl Williams.

Williams is the high school athlete who was seriously injured while participating in a high school football game in Boston. He will probably be handicapped for life.

Members of the Student Government, under the direction of the Student Union of the Quincy Public Schools, will collect donations outside Veterans' Memorial Stadium beginning at 9 a.m. Thanksgiving Day prior to the Quincy-North Quincy football game.

Over 400 At Pre-Game Dinner

More than 400 Quincy and North Quincy football players, cheerleaders, school and city officials and friends attended the 15th annual pre-Thanksgiving dinner for both teams last week at the North Quincy High School cafeteria.

Athletic Coordinator Carl Leone was toastmaster. Entertainment was by a choral group directed by Maurice Carbonneau of North Quincy High. A roast beef dinner was prepared by Quincy Vo-Tech students.

Many former players from both schools were present as were former coaches Jack Donahue, Leone, Lloyd Hill and Ralph Frazier of North and Jack Garrity and Hank Conroy of Quincy.

Members of the City Council and School Committee also attended. School Committee Vice Chairwoman Patricia Toland spoke for the school committee.

School Supt. Dr. Lawrence

Creedon, himself a former North player, and Principals Peter Chrisom of North and Hill of Quincy spoke of the great tradition of the Thanksgiving game and the fine sportsmanship shown throughout the 46-game series.

Coaches Tom Fitzgerald of Quincy and Dave Burke of North introduced their coaching staffs and players. Burke mentioned that many juniors will play prominent roles in Thursday's game. "I feel that the juniors will be just as good in this year's final game as they will be in the first game next year," Burke said.

Fitzgerald said he expects the usual hard-fought game, cleanly played and cited the friendship of the rival players after the game is over.

A brass group directed by Anthony Ferrante, coordinator of music for the Quincy public schools, played Quincy and North Quincy school songs and other selections to wind up the event.

13,000 Expected To See Game

With good weather a crowd approaching last year's 13,000 is expected at the holiday game.

Quincy has a chance to finish with a 7-2-1 mark, its best in several years, while North, which was only 3-7 a year ago, can finish with a 5-5 record with a win.

An interesting game is expected with North coming on fast after losing its first three games, winning four out of five before the 35-0 walloping at the hands of Catholic Memorial in its last game and Quincy playing consistently good ball all year.

Tickets On Sale

Tickets for the Quincy High-North Quincy High School Thanksgiving Day football game are on sale at each of the elementary, junior high, and senior high schools announces Athletics Coordinator Carl Leone.

Student tickets are $1.00 and adult tickets are $1.50. Reserve tickets will be sold at $3.00 at the two high schools only. At the game, there will be $2 tickets only.

This year Quincy High School is the host team and will occupy the cement stands. North Quincy High will occupy the wooden stands.

Track Club Members Qualify For National AAU Junior Olympics

The Quincy Track club qualified its highest number ever for the national AAU Junior Olympic cross country championships Dec. 8 in Hightstown, N.J., as four runners scored in the top 12 last weekend in the Region 1 meet in Grand Island, N.Y.

Robbie Glynn placed fourth in the boys 10-11 1.5 mile race. Sheila Barrett and Linda Kennedy placed 10th and 11th and Vicki Finlayson repeated as a qualifier by taking seventh in the 16-17 division.

Other Quincy runners included Matty Worth, 17th in boys 9 and under; Don Hamilton and Stu Coull; who ran well in that division; Harry Morash, 25th in 10-11; Tracy Coull, 13th, Denise Petta, 36th, Janice Libby 38th and Karen Dunn 44th, in girls 10-11; and Eileen Crehan, 30th, girls 12-13.

Georgia Traficante re-injured her foot and had to drop out after holding down seventh place for most of the race in girls 10-11.

Hockey

Squirt A's Wallop Canton, 7-1

Quincy's Squirt A team walloped Canton, 7-1, as Dave Kraunelis had a goal and an assist, Billy Connolly a goal and assist, Billy Roche a goal and assist, Jon Hays a goal and assist, Richie Connelly, Jay Rodriguez and Bob Furlan a goal apiece and Mike Benson, Matt Furtado and Dave Young an assist each.

The Squirt A's also topped Scituate, 5-2, with Furlan, Billy Connolly, Rodriguez, Richie Connelly and Mark Zimmerman scoring the goals and Hays having two assists and Bob Roicie and Billy Connolly one each.

Harold, McGinn Tie, 2-2

The Paul Harold Club and McGinn Shell played to a 2-2 tie in the Mite House League.

Mike Toland Scott Stirling had the Harold goals with Ronald Last having an assist. Joey Fasano played well in goal.

For McGinn Scott Cunningham and Kevin Marston had the goals and Mike Cronin had an assist. Chris Loud was in goal.

Bantam A's Edged, 3-2

The Bantam A team was edged by Scituate, 3-2, with Dennis Croke and Danny Shea scoring Quincy's goals and Kevin White, Croke and Scott Messina having assists.

Sean Cunningham and Timmy O'Connell were the goalies.

Mite A's Bow, 4-3

The Mite A team lost to Braintree, 4-3, with Mike Toland, Terry Hack and Timmy Mann scoring the Quincy goals and Brian Zimmerman, Mark Dwyer and Kevin Daley having assists.

Scott Cunningham and Joey Fasano played well in goal.

North Girl Swimmers Defeat Quincy 5th Year

The Quincy and North Quincy girls' swim teams finished their most successful seasons.

It was a particularly good year for the North girls, who defeated Quincy for the fifth year in a row, 100-72, before a packed house at the Lincoln Hancock School pool.

Since swimming was started at the two schools five years ago Quincy boys and girls' teams have never defeated their cross-town rivals.

The Raiderettes, under Coach Bill Walker, finished with a 6-6 record, while the First Ladies, under Judy Appleby, won four meets this year. Quincy had far less depth than North.

Jill Sweeney was a double winner for North, taking the 200-yard freestyle in 2:24.9, edging Quincy's Janet Sines, and also edged Sines by nine seconds in the 500-yard freestyle.

Marjorie Bartolotto of North won the 100-yard breaststroke. Kit Harrow won the 50-yard freestyle and Mary Tenney won the diving with 152.60 points. Harrow did the 50 in 28.1 seconds, the only girl to break 30 seconds.

Bartolotto, Jacqui Pike, Carolyn O'Toole and Diane Dawson gave the Raiderettes a win in the 200-yard medley relay.

For Quincy, Sines and Donna Marcin were outstanding. Sines won the 100-yard butterfly in 1:12.0, edging North's Pike by three seconds, and also won the 100-yard backstroke in 1:10.7.

Marcin won the 200-yard individual medley in 2:36.3, beating Pike by six seconds, and also won the 100-yard freestyle in 58.4.

Sines, Marcin, Patty Howe and Cindy Pitts gave the First Ladies a win in the 400-yard freestyle relay.

"It gets hectic when you figure the score," said Walker, dripping wet after being thrown into the pool by his team. "I keep a running account of the score and Judy swam it a little different at the start than I thought she would and we went ahead by more than I thought we would. But I knew they'd come back and they did, but the score was about what I figured it would be."

"Out of our 12 meets seven of them came down to the last relay and that makes for a very hectic season. This team far exceeded my expectations and at the start of the year I felt we might lose to Quincy."

"A lot of our kids swam their best times of the season and I attribute this to good school spirit and competition. They were psyched for this meet," said Mr. Appleby.

"North has a bigger team than we have and has much more depth than we have. They are always fresh, while we had a lot of kids swimming three events and this tired them out."

Earlier last week North had bowed to Newton North, 96-76, despite record setting performances from Tenney and Bartolotto.

Tenney scored 170 points for a record in diving and Bartolotto set a school record in the 100-yard breaststroke with a 1:21.7 timing.

Bartolotto, Pike, Dawson and O'Toole won the medley relay, while Pike, Sweeney and Harrow each had two second places.

ENC 10th In National X-Country Meet

Eastern Nazarene College's cross country team ran in its first national meet last weekend as it finished 10th among 22 schools in the National Christian College Athletic Association (NCCAA) national championships in Cedarville, Ohio.

The Crusaders, who won the NAIA District 5 championship and were runnersup in the NCCAA District One and the Seaboard Conference, ran into some tough luck as one of their top runners, Steve Nottle, twisted an ankle and was slowed down considerably. It is believed if he had been at top speed, he would have finished among the leaders and that ENC would have finished at least fifth.

First-year coach Bob Taft was pleased with the Crusaders' performance. "Everyone ran real well and Kevin Fitch ran a super race to finish ninth," he said. "With the young team we have (all sophomores and freshmen), we'll be even better next year."

ENC finished with 299 points as Fitch placed ninth, Allan Douglas 40th, Mike Douglas 50th, Scott Mapes 60th and Nottle 70th.

Braintree Hospital Road Race Nov. 25

Registrations for the third annual Braintree Hospital 10-kilometer road race to be held Sunday, Nov. 25, must be in by Friday, the 23rd, after which time competitors can still sign up but will not receive a T-shirt.

Sponsored by the hospital's Sports Medicine Division and sanctioned by the New England AAU, the race welcomes all runners registered with the AAU's 69 Canal Street, Boston office.

Participants under 18 must have written permission from a parent or guardian.

The start and finish of the 6.2-mile race will be Braintree High School, where large locker rooms and showers are available for the runners. Reporting time for both pre-registrants and post-entries, for whom the entry fees are $3 and $4 respectively, is scheduled between 8 and 9:30 a.m. The race will start at 10.

Awards and prizes will be distributed immediately following the race to top finishers in each of three divisions—Open, Masters (40 and over) and Female, including trophies to the first five Open Division finishers, to the top three female and top three Masters Division competitors.

Additionally, 76 gift certificates, worth $1,000 to be redeemed, will be awarded.

COCKROACH AND SALMONELLA

The cockroach has long been suspected of being a disease carrier, but now, after 12 years of extensive tests at the University of Minnesota, it has been conclusively proven that cockroaches are capable of acquiring, harboring and spreading Salmonella food poisoning. Its symptoms involve acute diarrhea, abdominal cramps, vomiting, prostration and sometimes death.

Many outbreaks attributed to rodents may actually have been caused by roaches. Even when a roach is dead, his evil may live. While walking over food and dishes, he may have contaminated these objects. It was found that Salmonella bacteria can remain viable on glass dishes for 34 days.

on corn flakes for 62 days and on soda crackers for 88 days.

Advice: Make sure all food in cupboards is tightly covered and at the first indication of cockroaches, call the exterminator.

● Cross Country

North In Strong Finish, Furey Shines For Quincy

The North Quincy boys and girls' cross country teams lost their first five meets this fall but both made great comebacks to finish with .500 records.

Lou Tozzi's boys finished a 6-6-1 last week as they defeated Quincy, 25-31, to remain unbeaten against the Presidents since the two schools entered the Suburban League five years ago.

John Furey of Quincy, one of the finest runners in the state, was the individual winner, covering the 2.3 miles in 12:02, but North's John Barrett, Mike Ricciuti and Gary Morin finished 2-3-4 in 12:16, 12:32 and 12:40 respectively. Furey has the second fastest time ever over the Quincy course and two weeks ago placed 12th in the Division state meet.

Rich Finnegan of Quincy placed fifth, Roy Higgins of Quincy sixth, Bill Timmons, North, seventh, Kevin McCormick, Quincy, eighth, Walter McConaghy, North, ninth, and Jim Alban, North, 10th.

The North girls, also coached this year by Tozzi, defeated Quincy 20-43, to finish 6-6, while the First Ladies had a 1-7 mark.

Quincy also had the individual winner in this race as Donna Reardon shattered her own course record with a time of 13:25, her previous mark over the 2.25-mile course was 13:46.

However, the Raiderettes took the next seven places for the easy win. North's Linda Kennedy was second, two seconds behind Reardon. Deirdre Donovan was third, Michelle Millane fourth, Nancy MacDonald fifth, Kara Crehan sixth, Deirdre Corrigan seventh and Tanya Saar eighth. Quincy's second finisher was Jean Duling in ninth place and Kathy MacDonald placed 10th.

In last week's Suburban League meet at Canton, Quincy's Furey placed third in the boys' race and Ricciuti was North's first finisher in 13th place.

JOHN FUREY of Quincy, (left), the individual winner, leads at the halfway mark of the cross country meet with North Quincy. North's John Barrett, right, finished second. North's Mike Ricciuti is hidden behind Barrett. North boys won to remain unbeaten against Quincy since the schools entered the Suburban League five years ago.

Cambridge's Mark Themea was the individual winner and his team won the team title.

In the girls' race North's Kennedy placed seventh and Reardon was Quincy's first finisher in 14th place. Weymouth South won the crown and South's Mary Ellen Rose was the individual winner.

North Cross-Country Equipment Stolen In Stadium Break

In a recent break at Veterans Memorial Stadium, all North Quincy boys and girls' cross country equipment was stolen.

Coach Lou Tozzi has appealed to all parents, students and citizens to contact him or North Quincy High if they have any information.

"All information will be confidential," Tozzi said. "This equipment is very costly and affects 75 boys and girls at North Quincy High School. It puts our winter track program in jeopardy and we will be grateful for any information."

Taken were red warmup suits with white and black trim, white mesh jerseys, red T-shirts and hooded sweatshirts and sweatpants.

All are identifiable with "North Quincy" or "NQ" on each piece.

Levenson B.U. Key Man

Bob Levenson, a former North Quincy High track and cross country standout, is currently one of the key men on the Boston University cross country team.

The North Quincy junior, who teamed up with his brother, Marty, to win a number of races and set North Quincy records while running for Coach Lou Tozzi, will also be one of the Terriers' top distance runners in winter track. He is one of several veterans on the cross country and track teams.

Bulldogs Face Hanna Club

The Quincy Bulldogs, in their first season of operation, will play the Hanna Club Sunday at 1 p.m. at West Roxbury High School in the finals of the Boston Senior Park Football League playoffs.

Quincy defeated Charlestown T.T. 12-7, Sunday on touchdown passes from Joe Scibilia to Pete Zelonis and Jack Marshall.

The Hanna Club, which finished first in regular season play, ousted the defending champion Chippewas, 15-7.

Still No Settlement

Teachers Talks Off For A Week

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

The School Committee and representatives of the city's teachers will take a one-week break from negotiations after failing again to reach an agreement on Monday.

After five sessions in eight days with state-appointed factfinder John Higgins, the city's 1,000 teachers are still without a contract for the 1979-80 school year.

The contract problems, which for several weeks featured charges and counter-charges, demonstrations and newspaper advertisements sponsored by both sides, now seem to be continuing on a much lower key.

Noting the "gag order" imposed by Higgins, School Supt.

Dr. Lawrence Creedon and Patricia Toland, vice-chairwoman of the School Committee said Tuesday the committee had no comment on the progress of the talks. The next meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, Dec. 4, they said.

Robert Garner, president of the Quincy Education Association (QEA) which represents the teachers and Mary Curtin, head of the QEA negotiating committee, were not available for comment Tuesday.

Higgins, a Melrose attorney, would only say Tuesday that negotiations would resume next week.

Differences in the negotiations have centered around a pay raise for teachers, the method of conducting "reduction in force" layoffs and a School Committee proposal to increase teachers' work days by 45 minutes.

The talks have also been complicated by Mayor Arthur Tobin's refusal to accept a supplementary budget request from the School Committee to fund pay raises for the teachers and other school unions. The committee has asked Tobin to accept that request for an extra $960,000 to fund its "last, best offer" of a pay increase for the 1,000 teachers.

A suit launched by the QEA, seeking an injunction against the setting of the tax rate until Tobin accepts that request and submits it to the City Council, was rejected Monday by Judge Andrew G. Meyer of Norfolk Superior Court in Dedham.

City May Sue State Over Tax Rate Impasse

By TOM HENSHAW

Mayor Arthur Tobin indicated Tuesday that Quincy may go to court for a settlement of what has become a "strained" impasse with the state over certification of the city's tax rate for 1980.

"We are conferring about legal remedies right now," said the Mayor after he returned from a second full day of fruitless negotiations with the State Department of Revenue.

Tobin described the city and state positions as "poles apart."

He said a prediction in The Sun last week that Quincy's tax rate would go up about $10 is "not good any more." He refused to make a new prediction. The current rate is $196.60.

There were reports that the 1980 tax rate might go up as much as $19.

Tobin acknowledged that the amount of estimated receipts used by the city to hold down the tax levy "is one area under discussion" with the Department of Revenue.

Asked if deadlocked labor negotiations with teachers and other city employees were playing a role in his talks with the state, Tobin replied, "From the discussions, I'd say 'yes.'"

"I can't say any more because I don't want to strain any further what is going on at the present time," said the Mayor.

"The press, radio and TV have been paying so much attention to Quincy lately that it has everyone in there nervous."

"They ask me about the General Dynamics law suit and the possibility of layoffs at the yard and they ask me, 'What plans have you made for these?'"

General Dynamics has a $2,107,413 suit pending before the tax appellate board, claiming its property was overassessed by the city.

It has also been forecast that there will be massive layoffs at the shipyard next summer when the last of the liquefied natural gas (LNG) tankers is finished. Recent repair contracts are not expected to relieve the situation at the yard.

Women Welders Win Pregnancy Disability Case

Three women welders at the General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard have won nearly $7,000 in full disability pay for the time they were unable to work during pregnancies.

The women were identified as Joan Bragar of Quincy, Jeanette Loria and a third who did not wish her name to be made public.

The three were hired four years ago under an affirmative action program and were let go from their jobs when they married and became pregnant.

They based their case against General Dynamics on the fact that both state and federal law for several years have declared that pregnancy-related disability must be treated like any other disability.

General Dynamics offered them 16 weeks pay in settlement but they held out for full disability pay, 26 weeks in one case and 24 weeks in the other two.

City Opens New Bid For Elusive Tourist Dollar

The Constitution Bicentennial Celebration was so successful last summer that Quincy is pulling out at least a few modest steps to go after more tourist dollars.

Carol Pisano of the Planning Department, who served as coordinator for the Constitution Bicentennial Celebration, has been named by Mayor Tobin to promote tourism for Quincy.

The Quincy Committee on

Tourism, made up of city and county officials, local merchants and historians, will be organized Tuesday, Dec. 4, at a 12 noon meeting in the Adams Academy building.

The committee will discuss ways of improving and promoting activities and special events in the city.

"We discovered during the Bicentennial that people don't come to Quincy just to see the historical sites but they will go to them if they come here for something else," said Miss Pisano.

"One feeds on the other. The people who came here for the Bicentennial fireworks stayed around to visit the historic places."

"The three biggest attractions in Boston are the New England Aquarium, the Museum of Science and the Museum of

Fine Weekend Weather Brings Out Park Vandals

Excellent weekend weather was ideal for spectators at the Christmas Festival Parade and the Christmas light ceremonies — and it also brought out the vandals and the litterers.

Park, playground and beach areas in the city were extensively littered by gangs of young people congregating and drinking and disposing of bottles, cans and debris.

Work crews of Park Department personnel have been assigned to clean up the recreation sites, said Executive Director Richard J. Koch of the Park and Recreation Board.

Koch said forestry section officials reported that vandals had tipped over a number of statues in the manner located at the Hancock Cemetery and pulled the miniature hay rack from the rear of the stable.

Over 100 bulbs have been stolen and replaced on the large blue spruce Christmas tree since it was erected and the lights installed Nov. 14. Fifty were removed by vandals over the past weekend while the remaining 50 were removed during the previous 12 days.

Sections of wooden braces and supports at the Pageant Field pavilion have been dismantled by vandals and used for firewood by gangs loitering in Merrymount Park during the evening hours.

Residents are requested to assist Park Department Officials by notifying police when observing activities that are detrimental to the recreational areas.

QCA Concerned

Traffic Commission Warned Of Current, Future Problems

The Quincy Citizens Association has written to the Traffic Commission expressing concern over speeding problems on School St., Quincy Center, and along Newport Ave. in Wollaston.

The QCA is also worried about the future traffic problems on the proposed Burgin Parkway Extension and at the parking garage that has been proposed in the Della Chiesa Parking Area.

The letter said, in part: "Automobiles on School St., speeding to beat the changing signals, are jeopardizing the senior citizens trying to cross School St. Many near misses have occurred and we trust that the Traffic Commission will slow down traffic in the vicinity of 45 School St. before a serious accident happens.

"Newport Ave. is becoming a speedway and shoppers coming and going from the new Stop and Shop are taking their lives in their hands trying to get into the parking area and getting back on Newport Ave.

"Also the lights on this street are not synchronized and traffic in the evening is often lined up from Pneumatic Scale Co. to Beale St.; cars parking on Newport Ave. narrow the lanes; and the island on the hill to Beale St. is too wide and does not permit traffic to pass."

The letter said the Burgin Parkway Extension "will turn Newport Ave. into an expressway, worsening an already over-crowded roadway."

"We are concerned that the Quincy Center merchants will not benefit from the Burgin Parkway Extension because its expressway character will compel motorists using that road to speed through Quincy Center without stopping to shop.

"The new garage planned for the Della Chiesa parking area will generate so much traffic in the morning and evening that Quincy Center will be jammed with cars, bringing through traffic to a standstill."

the month of October.

Among the major projects for the month was a new six-unit apartment building at 169 South St., Quincy Point.

The department collected $1,523.50 in fees, gave out 41 certificates of approval, made 184 inspections and noted 13 defects.

There were eight reinspections and four fire calls.

3 New Fire Lieutenants Sworn In

Three new fire lieutenants were scheduled to be sworn in Wednesday morning by Mayor Arthur Tobin.

The three are: Mario C. Stracco, Jr. of 17 Mary Rose Rd., Weymouth; Joseph L. Graham of 50 Mayflower Rd., Squantum and David C. Usher of 9 Ellis St., West Quincy.

The new lieutenants, the top three on the existing civil service list, will fill existing vacancies in the department, according to Deputy Fire Chief John Menz.

Framingham Site To Be Checked License Board To Vote On Strand Arcade Dec. 11

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

The Quincy License Board will vote Dec. 11, on the proposed Backstage Arcade at the Strand Theater, Quincy Sq.

The matter was continued at Tuesday's meeting so that Police Chief Francis X. Finn and Building Inspector Allan MacDonald could view a similar game room on Rte. 9, Framingham.

Strand owner Joseph O'Connor told the board that he got the idea for the arcade after seeing the Framingham operation.

Edward Coyle, president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA), said he will call a meeting of the organization and ask for a vote on the Strand proposal.

The QCBPA had sent a non-committal letter to the board when asked for their opinion of the arcade.

Coyle also expressed an interest in seeing the Framingham arcade. Finn said he has spoken to merchants in the Quincy Sq. area and that at least two are vehemently opposed to the game room. He said one merchant even suggested the arcade might put him out of business. Building Inspector MacDonald said he has also talked to some merchants opposed to the entertainment center.

Coyle and Finn both voiced confidence in O'Connor as a manager. O'Connor is also QCBPA secretary.

Finn said if the board does agree to the arcade, it will be for a probationary period.

In another matter, the board denied a request from Vasilios Giansmidis, owner of Friendly Pizza, 1622 Hancock St., for a coin operated video game license.

Chief Finn said he didn't want any more vending machines in the area, and that he had no intention of letting the area go down.

• In other action, the License Board:

- Granted a request from the Squantum Yacht Club, 646 Quincy Shore Dr., for a change of license from club-wine and malt to club-all alcoholic. The request had been withdrawn without prejudice Nov. 13, because the three abutters and the MDC hadn't been notified of the proposed change.

- Continued to Dec. 11, a request from Demetrios Katsoulis for transfer of a common victualer license for the 1100 Restaurant, 382 Quincy Ave., from Theodore Kasaris, pending a routine police check and financial statement.

Parents can pay for their children's pictures at a table in the Media Center at that time.

CONTEST WINNERS in the Quincy Christmas Festival Committee's poster contest are, from left, Craig Rutter, 134 Farrington St. Wollaston, first prize, grades 4-6; Michelle Hamlett, 168 Wesson Ave., West Quincy; second prize, grades 4-6; Elizabeth Roberts, 37 Estabrook Rd., Wollaston, first prize, grades 1-3 and Michael Dupill, 945 Quincy Shore Drive, North Quincy, second prize, grades 1-3. Citizens Committee To Guard Against MBTA Independence Ave. Access

Rep. Robert A. Cerasoli [D-Quincy] plans to set up within the next two weeks a Citizens Advisory Committee to oversee construction of the Quincy Adams MBTA Station.

Cerasoli said he has received six or seven calls from persons interested in serving on such a committee to make sure that there is no access to the station from Independence Ave.

"This committee is being formed to make sure that the MBTA lives up to its commitment that the station will open without a pedestrian or vehicular access to Independence Ave.," said Cerasoli.

He and City Councillor Daniel Raymondi met recently with MBTA officials at the construction site in South Quincy and were reassured that there will be no pedestrian or vehicular access ramp.

"The only access from Independence Ave. will be for fire engines in case of an emergency," said Cerasoli. "The access will be closed off by a locked 10-foot chain link fence and only the fire and police chiefs will have keys."

"Councillor Raymondi has assured the community that curbing will be placed back along Independence Ave. in front of the fence so that it will only allow access by an emergency vehicle."

Kathryn Chamberlain Wins 'Outstanding' Writing Honor

Kathryn Chamberlain of Wollaston, a senior at Thayer Academy, has been cited for outstanding performance in writing by the National Council of Teachers of English.

Over 7,000 students were nominated by their English teachers for this award. Each nominee submitted a writing sample and wrote an impromptu essay which was evaluated by state judging teams of college and high school English teachers. Some 850 finalists were selected.

The National Council of Teachers of English, whose goal is to increase the effectiveness of teaching English language and literature on all levels, recommends award finalists for college scholarships should they need assistance. It sends their names to admissions offices and English departments of two- and four-year colleges in the U.S.

Kathryn, daughter of Mrs. Mary Chamberlain, of 240 South Central Ave., Wollaston, has won prizes in mathematics and chemistry at Thayer, been active in drama and music, and edits the student newspaper The Tiger's Eye. She is also a Litchfield Scholar, the first winner of this award for ninth graders when it was instituted in 1976.

A little bit of practical Victoriana for your home-

With winter just ahead, what is more practical than a working oil lamp?

Despite all the hard work of public utility companies to keep electric service flowing without interruption, nature at times conspires by the use of wind and sleet to knock out lights.

The most practical item for emergency lighting under such circumstances is an old fashioned oil lamp. Oil lamps can be a thing of beauty for your home—just as they were during the Victorian period.

The Quincy Cooperative Bank is now offering oil lamps of unique and unusual beauty for your home. Whether in use or not, these lamps will enhance the decor of your home. The bases are custom created for us by New England Potters Guild, Inc., the same folks who brought you the unusually beautiful flower pots when our bank offered these promotional items some months ago.

Come in and see our lamps with their pretty pottery bases. Pick the color and form you like best for your home. The deal is very simple:
*deposit $200 or more into a New or Existing savings account and you can buy a lamp for $5.00. (Only one lamp per account)

THIS OFFER IS GOOD WHILE SUPPLIES LAST.

Over 250,000 Enjoy Summer-Like Christmas Parade

Although the weather might have seemed like Memorial Day, the holiday season was officially ushered in Sunday by the annual Christmas Festival Parade.

An estimated 250,000 persons or more viewed the parade while basking in sunny, mid-70's weather which may have tempted some of them to visit Wollaston Beach instead of celebrate the Yule season.

Sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association the parade featured 22 high school bands, color guards, and majorette units, three military units, 22 floats and assorted other attractions, including Santa Claus.

Besides the spectators, the biggest winners were the members of the Abington High School band, who won the overall marching band competition and, with it, an invitation to represent New England in the 1981 Cotton Bowl Parade in Dallas.

Other prize winners selected by the judges are:

- Non-commercial floats - North Quincy Knights of Columbus, "Bringing Home the Tree," the Father Tierney trophy, first prize and $1,000.

- St. John's C.Y.O., "Land of Misfit Toys," second prize and $500.

- Curtain Call Theatre, "Dickens' Christmas Carol," third prize and $300.

- Broad Meadows Jr. High Parents Advisory Board, "The World," fourth prize and $200.

The Mayor's Trophy was awarded to St. Mary's Parish for their float "Christmas Greetings from the Children of the World."

The commercial category was won by the Patriot Ledger for the float "Frosty the Snowman."

- Marching band competition: Class A- Abington High, first; Holbrook, second and Ludlow third.

- Class B- Gloucester, first; Holbrook, second, Ludlow third.
- Class C- Hull, first; Somerville, second; East Bridgewater, third.

Majorettes: Norton High, first; Fairhaven, second; Chicopee Comprehensive, third.

Color Guard: Hull, first; Gloucester, second; Somerville, third.

Trophies for these awards will be presented at an awards ceremony at Sons of Italy Hall in January.

This year the parade was "turned around", starting in Quincy Center and proceeding 2.8 miles to North Quincy.

Mrs. Viola Randall, 83, Violinist, Music Teacher

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. today (Thursday) at Deware Brothers Funeral Home, 576 Hancock St., Wollaston, for Mrs. Viola Randall, 83, a concert violinist and music teacher in Quincy for 50 years.

Mrs. Randall died Monday at Quincy City Hospital.

A native of Belding, Mich., she attended the New England Conservatory of Music prior to World War I and played with string ensembles and solo performances.

She was the wife of the late Leon Randall.

She leaves five sons, Richard

D. Randall, Robert N. Randall and Bruce D. Randall, all of Quincy; Atty. Douglas A. Randall of Wintchester and Charles A. Randall of Pleasantville, N.Y.

Also two sisters, Mrs. Margaret Cogswell of Bethlehem, N.H., and Mrs. Jean Robinson of Abington; a brother, Lloyd DeCoster of Holbrook; 25 grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

Burial will be in Pine Hill Cemetery.

Donations may be made to the special music fund of Wollaston Baptist Church.

Mrs. Alene Tompkins, Retired School Teacher

A funeral service was held Monday for Mrs. Alene (Herron) Tompkins of Quincy, a retired school teacher and rooming house owner.

Mrs. Tompkins died Thursday after a brief illness.

Born in Westfield, N. H. she had lived the last 40 years in Quincy.

A teacher in the Milton, Quincy and Weymouth school systems, she also operated Herron's Haven, a Quincy rooming house. She was a member of the Quincy Historical Society and the Quincy Women's Club.

Wife of the late George J. Tompkins, she is survived by a brother, Harold Herron of Westfield, N. H.

The funeral service, at Wickens and Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St., Quincy Center, was officiated by Rev. John Banks of Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy Center. Burial was in Westfield, N. H.

Howard Nelson, 65, WEEI Announcer

A memorial service will be held tomorrow (Friday) at Christ Church, Cambridge, for Howard M. Nelson, 65, semi-retired announcer for Radio WEEI in Boston.

Mr. Nelson died Saturday at a hospital after being stricken with a heart attack at his home in Littleton, N. H. He was buried Tuesday.

A native of North Dakota, he worked at radio stations in the midwest before joining the staff of WEEI 27 years ago. He retired last December but continued to work on a free lance basis.

He served as anchor man for WEEI's coverage of the Boston visit of Pope John Paul II in October.

He leaves his wife, Lorraine; a son, H. Frederick Nelson of Littleton; and a daughter, Mrs. Mary N. Megias of Squantum; a sister, Mrs. Dorothy Munson of Moorhead, Minn., and two grandchildren.

Protestant SSB Has Free Emergency Food For Residents In Need

The Quincy-based Protestant Social Service Bureau has free emergency food available to residents of the South Shore announces Executive Director Robert F. Taylor.

Started over three years ago, the program, known as "The Pantry Shelf" aids hundreds of families each month. This past month 60 individuals and families came to the Protestant Social Service Bureau's offices at 776 Hancock St. for help with food supplies.

"We realize that the dramatic rise in fuel costs will be a hardship for many families," states

Taylor. "Many people are going to need assistance with food and we are prepared to help."

According to Taylor, the agency has no red-tape in applying for food. "If there is a need, we will help," he said.

The Protestant Social Service Bureau receives its supplies of food from members of area churches. Many of the churches have regular collection boxes where parishioners bring canned goods and other foodstuffs.

"We hope many people will assist us by contributing extra food this year," said Taylor. He also hopes that grocery stores will respond, too.

"Even last year our 'Pantry Shelf' was bare at times. And we know this Winter is going to be even more difficult."

Those in need of food or anyone wanting to make a contribution of food may contact the Protestant Social Service Bureau at 773-6203.

Established in 1947, the agency provides counseling and adoption services.

"As a family agency, we want to assist people in anyway possible," said Taylor.

First Church Of Squantum Concludes Thanksgiving Season

The congregation of the First Church of Squantum concluded their "season of Thanksgiving" Sunday morning by singing "America".

The service was the fourth in a series this month on themes from the story of the Pilgrims.

The Call to Worship was given by Dave Mildram, the Opening Prayer led by Tom Williamson and the Scripture read by Joan Hansen.

Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, pastor, read the Mayflower Compact from William Bradford's "Of Plimoth Plantation", and preached on "What We Have Received."

Besides the traditional Thanksgiving hymns, the congregation sang psalms from the Ainsworth Psalter, used by the Pilgrims.

The Senior Choir sang a selection of three of those psalms. The Cinnamon Toast Crowd and the Senior Choir joined to sing "Faith of Our Fathers", a cappella.

During the service, congregation members brought canned goods forward to give to the Protestant Social Service Bureau for distribution to the needy.

Greeters for the service were Lester and Claudia Young. The Fellowship Hour after the service was hosted by Barbara Walter, David Stohberg, Peggy Bryan, Claudia Young and Marsha Anderson.

Next Sunday morning a series of services celebrating Christmas will begin.

'Christ's Health Revolution' Lecture At Christian Science Church

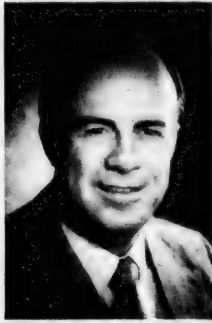

"To have Christ come to you is the most natural happening in all the universe," says Clem W. Collins, a Christian Science lecturer from Boston.

Speaking here Friday, Nov. 30 at 8 p.m., Collins will note that the need to look to God for health is being recognized by more and more people today. The lecture is sponsored by First Church of Christ, Scientist, Quincy, and will be given at 20 Greenleaf St.

Collins says the challenge to find adequate health care today is immense. In the United States alone, there are millions of individuals who are said to have some kind of chronic disease for which there is no known cure in medical systems.

"We need a health revolution," says Mr. Collins. "One based on God's system of health care—Christ-healing."

Collins will discuss the nature of Christian Science healing, telling of the cure of blood poisoning and an athletic injury through scientific prayer.

CLEM COLLINS

Collins says: "It's understandable that people in general believe material remedies are the only remedies available and therefore not out of keeping with moral and Christian conduct, but Christian Science shows there is another way, one that fulfills our instinctive desire for spiritual healing as a way to worship God."

Collins has served his church in many capacities over the years, including that of president and later first reader of the denomination's mother church in Boston. More recently he was elected to the Christian Science board of lectureship.

All interested persons are welcome to attend the lecture, "Come Join Christ's Health Revolution." There is no charge. Mrs. Kathryn B. Selden, first reader, will introduce Collins.

JAMES TRAYNOR of Dublin, Ireland, receives citation as honorary citizen of Quincy from Mayor Tobin as his sister, Mrs. Josephine Mahan, and his father, James Traynor (right), both of 25 Vine Ave., Quincy Point, look on.

Human Rights Coalition To Meet Dec. 5

The South Shore Coalition for Human Rights will meet Wednesday, Dec. 5 at 7:30 p.m., at the Quincy Centre United Methodist Church, Fort and Granite Sts.

Main item on the agenda will be a full discussion on exactly what the phrase "Affirmative Action" means. Members of the public are welcome to express their viewpoint on this issue.

There will also be reports on the musical presentation by the Little Flags Theatre, housing work and effort against the Ku Klux Klan.

Boston Food Pantry Appeals For Donations

The Boston Food Pantry is appealing for donations to provide emergency food for residents of greater Boston's cities and neighborhoods.

Donations of canned food or money (checks made payable to Cooperative Metropolitan Ministries Food Program) can be made at St. Francis de Sales, 169 Ruggles St., Roxbury.

Hours are noon to 3 p.m., Mondays, Thursdays and Saturdays. The telephone number is 427-5831.

For food pick-ups at Quincy churches, clubs, centers or organizations, call Kay Doherty at 472-1174.

Point Blood Center Opens New Hours

The Red Cross Blood Donor Center at the Quincy Point Congregational Church is operating under a new time schedule to give more donors an opportunity to give their blood.

The new hours, which began Monday, are from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m.

"Our main problem was that the old hours of 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. precluded donors who work until 5 p.m.," said Gregory Galvin of Squantum, blood services chairman for the Quincy Red Cross chapter.

"When we took our problem to Rev. Winston E. Clark, the pastor, he showed us some other rooms at the church, one of which met our needs both for space and longer hours."

Galvin said the donor center has collected 428 units of blood to meet daily patient needs since last July, and the current goal is 50 pints per week.

Volunteer donors may make an appointment to give blood at the center by calling 472-2700.

James Lynch Installed As QVC Commander

James P. Lynch was installed as the commander of the Quincy Veterans Council at recent ceremonies at the George F. Bryan VFW Post Hall.

Other officers installed include:

John Gillis, senior vice commander; Roger Whicomb, junior vice commander; Lawrence J. Perette, public relations director; Thomas Mills, finance officer; Edwin Bolan, assistant finance officer.

Joseph Lombardo Completes Specialist Course

Coast Guard Photo-Journalist 3rd Class Joseph P. Lombardo, son of George J. Lombardo of 96 Curtis Ave., Quincy Point has completed the Information Specialist Course.

The 10 week course at the Defense Information School, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indianapolis, trains students for duty as military journalist and assistants to public affairs officers. Students received instruction on public affairs principles, newswriting, editing, proofreading, newspaper design and layout, interviewing and news photography.

A 1971 graduate of Quincy Vocational Technical High School, he joined the Coast Guard in January, 1974.

Buying a special gift for a special occasion? Have jewelry in mind? Do not be intimidated by the variety of gems and jewelry arrangements seen in most jewelry stores. Through clever and artistic design and placement of gems and stones on various settings, a piece of jewelry may be more or less expensive as preferred. Good stores also generally have wide selections of many gift items in all price ranges. Your jeweler will help select a gift compatible to your needs and pocketbook. By knowing value, cuts, arrangements, fashion, style and taste, a jeweler is able to provide good advice.

Advice, on those special gifts, for special occasions, is available from our friendly, knowledgeable people at GRONO & CHRISTIE, INC., 536 Adams St., East Milton, 696-1490. We handle estate jewelry, and have many fine pieces for your selection as Christmas gifts. Open: 9 a. - 5 p.m. Mon. thru Sat.

HELPFUL HINT:
Jewelry stores often will accept trade-ins of old jewelry and gold. You may be surprised at the amount of money you may get.

Mayor Hosts Seniors At Thanksgiving Dinner

THANKSGIVING DINNER is served to Quincy senior citizens John Wallen, George and Taimi Korpela by Councillor Joanne Condon, Mayor Arthur Tobin, Rev. William McCarthy Pastor St. John's Church and Marion Andrews, director of the Council on Aging.

MAYOR ARTHUR TOBIN serves Quincy senior citizens Marie Striano, Josephine Russo and Mary Holderied during Mayor's Thanksgiving Day Dinner at Montello's. About 150 senior citizens were treated by the city to turkey and all the trimmings.

Morrissey Bill Provides Fuel Funds For Elderly

Rep. Michael W. Morrissey (D-Quincy) has co-sponsored a bill that would provide an estimated $5 million in fuel crisis intervention funding for the elderly poor this winter.

The funds would come by a transfer from an existing account, a move that requires the approval of the Secretary of Administration and the House Chairman of Ways and Means.

"These extra monies would allow our elderly a little more leeway this winter with their heating bills," said Morrissey, "especially since the concern for the lack of federal funding is running high."

The amount allocated under the bill would not exceed $500 for a person or persons living in one household for one fiscal year. It would be administered through community action programs.

William Spencer To Head Retired Teachers Assn.

William J. Spencer was elected president of the Quincy Retired Teachers Association at its recent annual meeting in the Neighborhood Club.

Helene D. Johnson was chosen vice president, Helen O'Rourke secretary and Martin Casey treasurer.

Guest speakers were School

Sup't. Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon and Mrs. Eleanor McDonough, chairman of the Legislative Committee of the Massachusetts Retired Teachers Association.

It was announced that the Scholarship Fund, which was started just over a year ago, has already exceeded $3,000.

Race On For Council Gavel

Behind-the-scene campaigning is under way for the city's second highest political prize: the City Council presidency.

Who will get to wield the gavel in 1980 as the city moves into a new decade? Your guess is as good as anyone's at the moment. The honor is up for grabs.

Current Council President John Quinn and Leo Kelly appear to be active candidates.

Stephen McGrath reportedly is "thinking about it." So is James Sheets. Daniel Raymondi is a "maybe" contender.

Frank McCauley is leaning toward voting for McGrath if the latter does seek the presidency. If McGrath doesn't, McCauley may have a go at it himself.

Joseph LaRaia, returning to the City Council after losing the mayor's office to Arthur Tobin two years ago, is not looking for the job. Neither, according to City Hall sources, is Joanne Condon.

There's nothing to indicate—yet at least—that John Lydon is interested. But maybe he'll give it a try yet.

At this writing it would appear to be anyone's ball game. No one seems to have more than two votes lined up. And most of the contenders—or potential contenders—appear to have only one certain vote: their own. Five are needed.

McGrath has two—McCauley's and his own—if he goes after the presidency. McCauley has two—his own and probably LaRaia's—if he's a candidate. And he might get McGrath's.

But it's really too early to speculate on who the front runners might be. There's still more than a month to go and there will be a lot of jockeying going on between now and January.

The council presidency is the second most prestigious political post in the city—second only to the mayor.

In addition to presiding over the City Council meetings, the president also appoints the council committees, their chairmen and vice chairmen.

He has enough political clout that the council presidency has long been looked upon as the springboard to the mayor's office.

And two years from now, there may be a lot of people trying to spring in that direction.

CARDINAL MEDEIROS was most gracious at the dinner marking the eighth anniversary of the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center. During the dinner, a long line formed in front of the head table asking him to autograph his four-color photo in the dinner program. He personalized each autograph. Then, at the end of the dinner, as he was leaving, many others descended upon him at exit. He patiently signed every program for them and chatted with them even though the hour was late. Consensus of everyone there: A very humble, gracious man. A man of the people.

MEDEIROS

THE CITY ELECTION Department is considering combining Precincts 1 and 2 in Ward 2 and then split the result into three new precincts, according to City Clerk John Gillis.

Precinct 1, which contains 1000 Southern Artery had 1,486 registered voters as of the recent city election. Precinct 2, which includes the Martinson St. seniors citizen housing complex, had 2,680—largest in the city. Smallest precinct is 3 in Ward 6 (Norfolk Downs) with only 588 registered voters. Average for the 39 precincts is 1,227. Gillis says if the Ward 2 move is made, it probably won't be until the next city election in 1981.

A NAME OUT of Quincy's political past showed up on the list of contributors to the campaign of Richard J. Koch, Jr. who finished a strong runner-up in the City Council at-large race. Remember Ruth Scanlan, school committee woman from 1968-1971? Some thought she should have been the first woman mayor of Quincy. Instead, she chucked the political life to become a lady farmer in Enfield, N.H.

SCANLAN

HE DOESN'T LOOK like George Burns, but Mike McNally of Quincy sounds a lot like him. Enough so to win a recent George Burns Sound-Alike contest sponsored by Columbia Pictures in connection with the recent premiere of "Just You and Me Kid."

McNally was brought to Atlantic City—all expenses paid—to meet Burns and receive the award. And the pair got to chatting—both in George Burns' voice. For Burns, it was like talking to himself.

McNally does a lot of impressions for commercials on radio and television in the New England area. His late father, Frank McNally, was active in civic affairs in Quincy.

Points To Conspiracy Evidence-- And Mysterious, Happy

QJC Teacher Convinced 3

By JONATHAN BURAK

When Lee Harvey Oswald was killed, Edgar Tatrow, a teenager at the time, jumped up and down for joy.

He was thoroughly convinced that what he was being told on the television was the truth.

"My country, right or wrong, I had no reason to doubt anything about this country and its institutions whatever," he recalls.

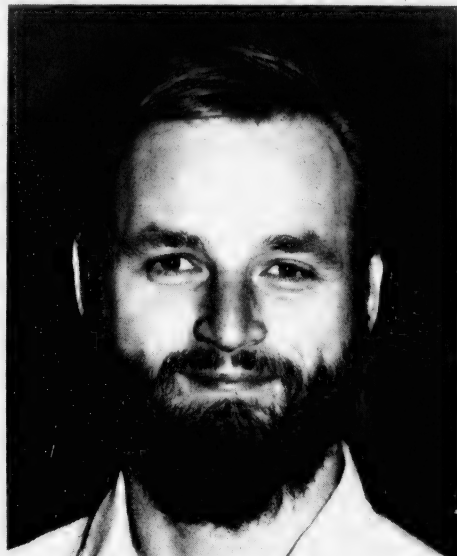

But later, when his father came home, and in a happy voice he told him Oswald had been shot, his father replied, "Did you ever think that the man who shot him, shot him to shut him up, that there is more to this than just one man killing one man, and then another man killing another man?"

That started him on his way.

Edgar Tatrow teaches "The Kennedy Assassination," a non-credit course offered by Quincy Junior College's Division of Continuing Education. He has been conducting his own intensive research into the assassination since 1966. He has become a most knowledgeable source on the subject. His research has been published internationally, and his findings have been footnoted in several of the major texts on the topic. He has been asked to lecture at Harvard, B. U., Boston State College, and Suffolk University. He presently teaches English at Quincy High School. He has a masters degree in education, and is currently doing advanced graduate work at Boston State College.

Tatrow has shaped his course not only as a study of the facts surrounding the assassination, but as a study about the intelligence agencies and what their function is, police techniques, medicine, forensic pathology, ballistics, and other diversified fields. Above all, it is a study of logic and critical thinking.

"People usually jump the gun, they make hasty generalizations; they fall into all kinds of fallacious arguments," he says. "And by looking at this material, it makes people not only think twice, it makes them think four or five times; to not accept something because someone famous said so; to not accept something because a source of 'unquestionable honesty' said so; or because it looks like that is the way it happened. Most things in life are not black and white - they're gray, and you've got to look at all the angles."

Tatrow, when asked, has tried to briefly synopsize some of the massive amount of material involved in looking at the case for its conspiratorial aspects:

"The House Committee on Assassinations has concluded that there was a conspiracy, and the major reason was the acoustics tests. There was a tape inadvertently made of the shots in Dealey Plaza, when a motorcycle patrolman left the microphone on his radio locked on, and from the tape, experts in the field of acoustics have proven that there were four shots fired, as opposed to the three shots the Warren Commission said there were. And they proved that the third shot came from the front, the opposite direction of Oswald, who was allegedly situated to the rear of

George F. Bryan

And Cyril P. Morrisette Remembered

Editor, Quincy Sun:

Two items in the Thanksgiving week issue of the Sun were of particular interest to us; the photo of the North Quincy High Football Team and the article about George F. Bryan being the first boy killed in World War I from Quincy.

My family has always believed that Cyril P. Morrisette, my mother's uncle, was the first boy from Quincy to lose his life in that war. She remembers when his body was returned from France and buried from St. Mary's Church, in that cemetery, with great ceremony.

Coincidentally, two of the young men pictured in the North Quincy football squad are descendants of the Morrisette family, and the fifth generation to live in Quincy.

It matters little whether George Bryan or Cyril Morrisette was the first to pay the ultimate sacrifice. We honor their memory and give thanks, especially during this season, that our country and city, despite adversity, remain strong.

EDITOR'S NOTE - Records show that Bryan died in the sinking of the destroyer Jacob Jones on Dec. 6, 1917, while Morrisette was killed in action in France on Feb. 23, 1918. Whichever gave his life first, memories of both are kept alive in the George F. Bryan IEB Post and the Cyril P. Morrisette Legion Post.

Urges Support For Professor Vorenberg

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Governor King is at it again. He is trying to replace Professor James Vorenberg as chairman of the State Ethics Commission with one of his own appointees. Professor Vorenberg of Harvard was first assistant to Archibald Cox in the Watergate investigation, counsel for the Senate Ethics Committee in the removal of Senator Joseph DiCarlo, and has an impressive record in fighting white collar crime. He is well qualified to be chairman of the State Ethics Commission.

Governor King has already tried to thwart this commission by an unsuccessful attempt to cut its funding.

I urge all citizens interested in fighting crime in the government to write to the governor in support of Professor Vorenberg.

Gunmen In JFK Assassination

the President's car. This proves that there was a second gunman.

"In addition, my main contention is that there were two gunmen to the rear of President Kennedy, as well as a gunman from the front. The acoustics tests proved that the difference in time between the first two shots, both from the rear, is only 1.6 seconds. The FBI had concluded in 1964 that Oswald's rifle would take at least 2.3 seconds to fire two consecutive shots. The new congressional committee's attempt to fire two shots in the allotted 1.6 seconds time failed miserably. Only by firing the rifle without aiming it, were they able to duplicate the required time. Since Oswald's alleged perch was situated at an awkward angle, with a tree partially blocking his view and the car moving away at the time, I am convinced that this is strong evidence of two gunmen firing two separate shots from the rear.

"The areas of concern are endless, but in a nutshell, here are some of the major points:

- "Jack Ruby's extensive links to organized crime.
- "Lee Harvey Oswald's many agencies to the intelligence agencies of this country.
- "The dozens of mysterious deaths of key witnesses throughout the years.
- "The lack of thorough investigations into the backgrounds of other arrested suspects of that day.
- "The disappearance of crucial documents and photo's from the National Archives, including the President's brain, brain tissue slides and chest x-rays.
- "The sloppiness of the autopsy which was never properly completed.
- "The refusal of the new assassinations committee to conduct ballistics tests to substantiate that the single bullet theory is possible.
- "The failure of the assassinations committee to closely

'... I think most of the problems we have today result from the day Kennedy was shot. I think we've gone down the tubes since that day ...'

scrutinize all of the physical evidence used to incriminate Oswald, several pieces of which are highly questionable.

• "And the failure to delve into the very real possibility that Oswald was not Oswald, but an imposter, as suggested by the discrepancies of Oswald's body scars, fingerprint cards, and even governmental documents."

Given his pro-conspiracy personal viewpoint, Tatro notes he has to concentrate on teaching the course in an objective manner.

"Nobody is totally objective. Maybe Mr. Spock from Star Trek; he's probably the only one. But in the classroom I try as much as is humanly possible to present the facts as they are. If something is an absolute scientific fact, then I state it as such. If something is my opinion, I will state it as my opinion and try to explain why I feel that way."

Tatro has mixed feelings about the House Committee on Assassinations' conclusions this past year.

"In certain areas I think they did a very thorough job. But the problem comes down to - Can the Government investigate the Government? Can we trust these men? The assassination committee continues to accept the single bullet theory, that one bullet went through both President Kennedy and Governor Connally, and I still have questions and reservations. ... The House Committee spent six million dollars proving there was a conspiracy, instead of taking the six million dollars, accepting the fact that there was a conspiracy, and going after the people who killed him."

Even now, Tatro believes that there is remotely possible that there could be arrests and convictions for the murder of President Kennedy, if the Justice Department were to pursue the case with all its resources.

Tatro would like to see his course become accredited by Quincy Junior College, because it would bring in a more diversified group of students. The Kennedy Assassination is already being taught as an accredited course in several colleges throughout the country.

"Quincy is a very conservative community, and it's a very controversial subject," he says. "Quincy Junior College is a city school. There may be some concern that such a subject can not be dealt with totally objectively. They don't want someone to use the public forum to give their own private views, and I think that's a very valuable point. Private universities, like B. U., don't have to worry about public opinion, whereas a public school does. I think I could do it objectively."

"No one individual can change the world. You can only put a dent into it. I figure people like me keep certain people in government a little more honest, and a scintilla of honesty is better than nothing, because I think most of the problems we have today result from the day Kennedy was killed. I think we've gone down the tubes since that day, and most of our problems, either directly or indirectly, relate to that day."

Tatro will continue in his research, and in teaching the subject which holds much meaning to him. Says he:

"Freedom causes abuse of freedom, and that's why you have to keep questioning, because if you don't, you will lose it all."

Assessment Boost Asked To Pay City Wages Hikes

City Councillor Joseph E. Brett suggested that the assessed valuation of all property in Quincy be increased 5 to 10 per cent to pay for salary increases for municipal employees.

Brett said a 10 per cent increase on business property and a 5 per cent boost on residences would raise the city's total valuation by $11 million.

Calculated at the tax rate of $70 per $1,000 valuation, he said, the city would gain $770,000, enough to offset the impact of the employees wage hike.

"It is doubtful," said Brett, "if any property owners could justifiably complain about his increased valuation if he knew that everyone else was receiving treatment equal to his."

BROAD MEADOWS SALE

The Planning Board recommended that the sale of city property in Broad Meadows to the Quincy Electric Co. for a generating plant "is in the best interests of the city."

Planning Director Regis J. Harrington said in a letter to Mayor Della Chiesa that the city also had an offer from Frank E. Foy, who wanted to build homes and a marina on the site.

The city had no further use for the land, Harrington said.

SCOUTS TO RESCUE

Members of Quincy Explorer Scout Troop 45 assisted in the rescue of William J. Miskoe, an Australian who slipped and fell 150 feet while climbing 5,273-foot Mt. Katahdin in Maine.

Participating in the rescue were Scouts Peter Briggs, Robert Bell, Jay Olans, Ken Gibson, Reed Holton, George Bettencourt, Carl Scheffer, Wayne Burch, Charles Briggs and William Medley.

BUS SEIZURE URGED

Theodore Johnson, recording secretary of the Quincy-South Shore Central Labor Union urged that the state seize and operate the Eastern Mass Street Railway buses while drivers and mechanics were on strike.

The strike was entering its third week as union members sought a 25 cent an hour wage hike plus better fringe benefits.

MOSWETUSET MARINA

Mayor Della Chiesa filed a bill proposing development of the Moswetuset Hummock area as an $850,000 marina complex with the state footing the bill on grounds it would be a "harbor of refuge."

Wollaston Facility 'Has Character'

The United States Golf Association has found the Wollaston Recreational Facility in North Quincy to be "a very pleasant golf course" with "a great deal of character."

An advisory service group from the USGA visited the course recently to check the golf operation and make suggestions for improving the physical plant, including greens, traps and fairways.

"We found Wollaston to be a very pleasant golf course and although it is relatively short it has a great deal of character requiring many different types of golf shots," said Stanley J. Zontek, the USGA's northeast director.

Supt. James R. Fitzroy said the USGA group "provided invaluable advice on how to improve the condition of the course by recommending nutrients, special fertilizers and herbicides. They also advised us on equipment replacement and maintenance."

"We plan to follow through on all of their positive improvement proposals."

'He Touched The Lives Of Everyone'

800 Attend Appreciation Night For Fr. Stephen Rock

Well over 800 Squantum residents of all ages gathered Saturday evening for a "Night of Appreciation" for Father Stephen Rock at his former parish, Star of the Sea Church.

Father Rock, who was ordained five years ago, served at the local church for four years before recently being transferred to St. Mary's Church, Hull.

Squantum residents were so impressed by him while in their community, that they planned this special night for him.

Said Mary Gougian, one of the reception organizers, "Our aim was to have everyone help because Father Rock touched the lives of everyone here"

Community organizations ranging from senior citizens groups to the Brownies contributed to the evening.

A color television set was presented to Father Rock from the Squantum organizations.

Rev. Alfred Finn, chaplain of Long Island Hospital, and Rev. Gene Langevin, of the First Church of Squantum, each paid tribute to Father Rock.

He received citations from the city of Quincy, City Council, and state as well as a plaque and gift from the Boy Scouts.

Special guests at the reception were Father Rock's mother, Mrs. Alice Rock, brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Rock, and Paul Rock, all of North Andover.

Each said it was a night they'll always remember as did many others attending the party.

Also at the party were Vincent J. Smyth, representing Mayor Arthur Tobin; City Councillor Joanne Condon, State Sen. Paul D. Harold, Representative Michael Morrissey, and Rev. Cornelius Heery, of Sacred Heart Church.

Adults and teenagers gave Father Rock a cheering ovation at the end of the evening.

North Quincy Hockey Boosters Plan Activities

The North Quincy Hockey Boosters Club has a busy schedule lined up during the next week.

The club will hold its first social of the year Friday night at the North Quincy K. of C. Hall with music by "A Touch of Class". Dancing will start at 8:30.

Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. an indoor yard sale will be held at the North Quincy High School cafeteria. Anyone wishing to donate items can call any of the club officers.

Next Wednesday, Dec. 5, the club will hold its second annual face-off dinner in the new North High cafeteria. The purpose is to get all North hockey players, parents and coaches together before they begin the long season.

The club officers are President Dick Reinhardt, Vice President Leo Grahm, Secretary Jean McGinnis, Secretary Mary Reardon and Treasurer Carol Oflia.

OLD COLONY BANK PRESENTS THE $10,000 SAVINGS CERTIFICATE FOR PEOPLE WHO DON'T HAVE $10,000.

Now you can buy a $10,000 six-month savings certificate with as little as $5,000. That means your savings can earn a lot more interest. It's one way banking on a first name basis at Old Colony makes your money work harder.

Here's how. Let's say you have $5,000. We'll lend you the $5,000 you need to buy a $10,000 six-month certificate. You receive the interest on the $10,000 certificate. You repay the $5,000 loan plus the minimum interest we're required by law to charge. The difference between the interest you earn and the interest you pay is equal to a 10.186% annual rate* on your $5,000 investment. The chart shows how the accounts work for other amounts.

Don't lose one more day of high interest - start earning it today. Stop in and let us show you how banking on a first name basis means new ways to make more with your money.

Your Dental Health

by Daniel P. Sweeney D.D.S.

The primary reason for orthodontic treatment is the general health of the mouth and teeth which work together as a unit. Teeth that are out of place can leave gaps that are easily filled by food debris leading to plaque buildup and cavities. They also cause the displacement of other teeth which grow in to fill gaps in the mouth. This in turn can affect the bite [the way the mouth closes], or, bite may be the original problem. A bad bite has an affect on the way food is chewed and on the way teeth sit against each other. It may also cause unnecessary wear down of the teeth and may affect the entire jaw structure.

General dental care for the entire family is provided at the office of Dr. Daniel P. Sweeney, D.D.S., 539 Adams St., East Milton Square. Dr. Sweeney is fully qualified to provide all routine dental care and gives expert referrals when specialized treatment is required. He works with persons of all ages - from the very young to Senior Citizens. Call our office at 698-3636 for an appointment. Most dental insurance plans are honored.

DENTAL TIP:
Consider orthodontic treatment once second teeth have come in and are set.

Hancock Group Increases Quarterly Dividends

Hancock Group Inc., Quincy-based parent company of Hancock Bank, will increase its regular quarterly dividend to 35 cents from 30 cents per share of common stock plus pay a year-end extra of 15 cents per share.

The dividend payment plus the extra will be issued Dec. 31 to holders of record Dec. 10, according to William E. Kelley, president.

With the 50 cents per share payout, the total dividend for the year 1979 will be $1.40 per share.

Kelley said the decision to increase the quarterly dividend and pay 15 cents extra at year-end, reflects one of Hancock Bank's best years for profitability and growth. As of Oct. 31, the book value of the bank's common stock had risen to $27.60 per share.

Hancock Bank, Norfolk County's largest independent bank, maintains 16 banking offices throughout the county.

QJC Seeks 3rd Straight At North Shore

The Quincy Junior College basketball team is off to a fast start under new coach Brian Buckley, winning its first two games. Saturday the Jaguars will play at North Shore Community College at 6 p.m. They will be home to Hellenic Monday at 7:30 and to Emerson Wednesday at 7, both games at Quincy Vo-Tech.

Last week QJC edged Wentworth, 86-84, on Paul Donoghue's basket at the buzzer.

The Jaguars played without two players, Mike Noonan (broken collarbone) and Ed

Hanratty (broken finger), who suffered their injuries in the opening game and will be lost indefinitely.

The game was close all the way with QJC trailing, 41-40, at the half.

Ken Petty, 6-5 center from Braintree, scored six points in the last four minutes as QJC battled from behind—Jim Holleran of North Quincy, despite a shoulder injury which kept him out of the opening game, played outstanding defense.

Donoghue led the scorers with 22 points. Richard had 20, Holleran 15 including five for five from the foul line, Petty 12 and Paul Waters 11.

The Jaguars had opened with a convincing 82-69 victory over Essex Aggies at Danvers as Buckley had a chance to substitute freely and use all his available players.

Quincy led from the start and at one time held a 22-point lead despite the loss of three players on fouls.

Bob Evans led the scoring with 19 points. Waters had 14 and Donoghue 13.

No Events Wins For Quincy, North Girls Swimmers

The Quincy and North Quincy girls failed to win any events in the recent South Sectional swimming and diving championships at the Lincoln Hancock school pool, but several of the girls turned in good performances.

The Quincy girls finished 21st out of the 38 schools entered with eight points; the North girls placed 27th with six points.

In the trials North Quincy's 200-yard medley relay team of Carolyn O'Toole, Marjorie Bortolotto, Jacqui Pike and Kit Harrow placed sixth and took 11th place in the finals.

Quincy's Donna Marcini placed fifth in the 200-yard freestyle trials and finished ninth in the finals.

Kit Harrow of North won the 50-yard freestyle trials but finished only 11th in the finals. Marcini placed second in the 100-yard freestyle trials and took ninth in the finals.

Janet Sines of Quincy placed fifth in the 100-yard backstroke trials and took 10th in the finals.

Quincy's 400-yard relay team of Cindy Pitts, Marcini, Sines and Patti Howe placed second in the trials and finished 12th in the finals.

● Youth Soccer

Quincy Edges Squantum, 2-1

Quincy defeated Squantum, 2-1, in a playoff game to win the championship of the North Quincy Kickers Youth Soccer League. The teams had finished in a tie for first place with Squantum forcing the playoff with a 3-1 win over Quincy.

Squantum took the lead in the playoff game when Mike DeLuca scored with Dave Dantona having the assist. Quincy tied it in the third period on a penalty kick by Dave Fasano, the league's top scorer with 13 goals. Mike Benson scored his first goal of the year and it was the winner. Leo Rooney had an assist.

Each of the winners will receive trophies. An 18-player all-star team is being selected and will represent North Quincy in the South Shore League next spring.

Squantum won its final three games to force the playoff with Quincy. It edged Montclair, 2-1, on a goal by Pat Harrington with two minutes left in the game.

Earlier Dantona had put Squantum in front with Charlie Coughlin having an assist. Brian Morris scored the Montclair goal.

Then came the 3-1 win over Quincy as Dantona scored all three goals. Bob Flannery, Chris McDonough and Dave Gerry had assists. Rob Bradley scored for Quincy.

Squantum topped Parker, 3-1, with Bobby Salton having a goal and an assist. Kenny Kemp assisted on Salton's goal. Harrington scored on a penalty kick and Kemp scored with Salton assisting. John Mooney beat goalie Teddy Shionis for the only Parker score.

Quincy earlier had knocked Mass. Fields out of contention with a convincing 5-1 win as Vin Capone scored twice. Fasano, Chris Rossi and Erick Roukey had the other goals. Chris Connolly had two assists and Joe Maragiolio had one. Tony Orlando had Mass Fields' goal.

Parker and Beechwood Knoll played to a 1-1 tie with Jimmy Marchiolis scoring for Parker unassisted and David Jones scoring on a penalty kick for Beechwood.

Mass. Fields finished its season with a 4-0 decision over Beechwood with Orlando scoring twice on passes from Pat O'Sullivan. Michael White and Paul Moody had the other goals with assists for Walter Downing and Kevin McCloskey. Ricky Golden and Scott Kearns played well for Beechwood.

Wollaston won its last game, defeating Parker, 2-0. Neil Hatfield scored with John Corrigan assisting, and Steve O'Connell finished off the scoring. Mike Verrico and Jeff Ward played well for Wollaston and Dave Levine and Mike McGowan did a good job for Parker.

Indoor Ski Lessons At Wollaston School

Dec. 1, 8 and 15, at 2 p.m.

The program offers fundamental skills for safe, outdoor skiing. Participants will receive individual instruction and will practice on the departments specially designed indoor slopes.

Lesson one is introduction to equipment; lessons two and three, flat turns, climbing and turns on a slope.

Anyone who doesn't own skis is encouraged to attend lesson one before making any purchases as the do's and don'ts of ski equipment on the market will be covered.

Those with skis can bring them to the first session for a courtesy safety check.

If the program is not full, non-residents may enroll for a small fee.

For more information, call the recreation department.

The Quincy Recreation Department is offering free indoor ski lessons for Quincy residents age six to adult beginning this week at the Wollaston School, Beale St.

The schedule for the three lesson program will be:

Seventh, eighth and ninth grades, Nov. 28, Dec. 5 and 13, at 7:30 p.m.

Senior high school and adults, Nov. 29, Dec. 6 and 13, at 7:30 p.m.

Bulldogs Win Title On Forfeit

The Quincy Bulldogs, in their first year of operation, were declared the unofficial Boston Senior Park Football League champions last Sunday when the Hanna Club failed to appear at Hyde Park's Kelly Field for the scheduled championship game.

Quincy was awarded a forfeit win, finishing its season with a 7-3 record.

The Bulldogs had finished third during the regular Park League season behind the Hanna Club and runner-up Shelburne Cobras. Charlestown T. T. was fourth and the defending champion Chippewas fifth.

When the playoffs came, league officials banned the Cobras because of an alleged altercation with an official. The Cobras went to court and the court ruled the playoffs could not go on without the Shelburne club.

It was then decided the Hanna Club, Bulldogs, Charlestown and Chippewas would go on with the playoffs, but the Park League could not sanction them.

In the first round of the unofficial playoffs, Quincy defeated Charlestown, 12-7, and the Hanna Club topped the Chippewas, 15-7.

"This was a good season for us and we are looking forward to entering the Eastern League next year," said Coach Bob DeVoe. "But we need a Quincy field. This year we were unable to get the stadium and had to use East Boston Stadium for our home games. I hope we can get the use of Veterans Stadium for our games next season."

Presidents Take 3rd Straight Crown

By TOM SULLIVAN

Brockton and Woburn will be meeting in the Division One Super Bowl but last Thursday Quincy looked like a Super Bowl team as it breezed past North Quincy, 34-3, in the 47th meeting of the cross-city rivals before a disappointing crowd of 11,000 at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The Presidents finished with a 7-2-1 record, their best in 10 years, while the Raiders dropped to 4-6. It was a disappointing end for North, which had won four out of five after losing its first three, then was bombed in the last two games.

Quincy, in winning its third straight city crown, won its 25th game in the series. North has won 19 and three games ended in ties.

The weather was perfect, probably the best in the long history of the series, and it was expected that as many as 15,000 would attend. However, it was estimated that the crowd was about 2,000 below last year's 13,000.

Tom Brennan, the star of last year's Quincy win, carried 10 times for 57 yards and finished up the season with an impressive 1,168 yards rushing, more than any other player in Quincy history.

However, the offensive standouts for the Presidents were Dan Goldrick, who carried 10 times for 116 yards, all but nine of them in the first half, and a touchdown, and quarterback Dave Austin, who had his best day passing with seven completions for 116 yards and two touchdowns.

"This was just a super two-way job," said a happy Tom Fitzgerald, a former North all-scholastic and assistant coach, who is now 2-0 against his alma mater. "I've said right along that our offensive line is one of the best in the state and it certainly was today. And our defense also is one of the best around. I've never seen a better defense than we displayed."

"Austin was just great today. We worked hard on our passing game, feeling we could pass against them and he did a tremendous job. Goldrick and Brennan ran well again and Scott Richardson's blocking was outstanding and he also ran well. "I've insisted all year long that we are a good ball team and I'm proud of our season. We lost only to undefeated Brockton and Waltham, the 1-2 teams in the Suburban League. They threw a few new defenses against us today but we weren't fooled."

"Quincy certainly looked like a Super Bowl team out there today," said a disappointed North coach Dave Burke. "They were outstanding both ways, but we hurt ourselves with a couple of bad punts early, putting us in a hole, and we coughed up the ball five times on fumbles. You can't make mistakes like that against a team like Quincy. They were just super. Austin had a really outstanding day..."

North had to operate throughout the second half without starting quarterback Jack Brown, who suffered a slight concussion. Kevin Durkin filled in creditably in the last two periods.

"We missed Brown, but Durkin did a good job," Burke said. "Leo Graham came back after missing three games and ran well at times in addition to playing his usual strong defensive game. Rick Anderson ran well, and Joe Feeney and Pat Carroll did some good blocking."

"This has to be one of the best anywhere," he said. "Fran Duggan and Geoff Cashish are the best offensive tackles I've seen. Paul Bandera was outstanding today, both as a pass receiver and a blocker, and Howie Chadbourne, Tom Rand and Jeff Heath were super."

"Rand is just as smart on the football field as he is in the classroom [number one in the senior class] and he made it possible for us to move through the strong side. Heath figures out the other team's defense perfectly, then operates accordingly."

Chella also had good words for John Christello, John Varrasso, Scott Anson, Bill Hall, Bob Taglieri, Paul D'Angelo and Gary Aluisi, as all the seniors got a chance to play.

"Lou Matthews is the finest defensive player I've ever coached and he was just superb today," said Asst. Coach Bill Mayer. "He called all the defensive signals and was in on just about every tackle. He sacked the quarterback twice."

Charlie McCall had another good day in the secondary as he came up with his seventh pass interception to earn himself a steak dinner and he recovered one of the five North fumbles.

Mayer and the other defensive coach, Joe Goguen, also singled out Walter Kilgallon, Ed Quinlan, Bill Flynn, Ed Iodice, Steve Plect, John Kavanaugh, who clocked a punt to set up a touchdown, Mike Petrillo, Chris Chevalier, Bill Murray, Jim McNeil, Paul Martin, Brennan, Jim Megnia, Tod Veale, Bob Burns, Grover Hensley, John Griffiths, Jeff Eloison and Ken Gustin.

"We are a young team and we'll have our day next year," said North offensive coach George Liset. "Ed Miller, Kevin Durkin, Dave Penzo and Joe Feeney played well."

Defensive coaches Ken McPhee and Jack Raymer hailed the play of Graham, who had been the team's number one defensive player before being injured, and had good words for Chris Petrillo, Tony Camillo, John Gorczyca, Glenn Ross and Bill McCarthy.

It appeared the first period would be scoreless until the second straight poor put by Brian O'Leary, who kicked well after that, gave Quincy the ball on its 49. After a pass to Sean Burke, Goldrick, apparently stopped at the line of scrimmage, broke loose and raced 47 yards for a touchdown with only 34 seconds left. Ron Pettinelli kicked the first of his four extra points.

Early in the second period Quincy drove from its 42 in seven plays with Austin hitting Bandera with a beautifully-thrown pass covering 33 yards for a score. Pettinelli again kicked the point.

Quincy drove to the North 14 but tumbled it away. Brown passed to Penzo for 22 yards. Penzo making a fine catch but Quincy held.

Quincy's McCall recovered a fumble on North's 12 to set up the third touchdown in the third period and Austin passed to Brennan for nine yards and the score. It was Brennan's 11th touchdown. This time Kavanaugh blocked O'Leary's punt and Quincy had the ball on North's four. Two plays later Austin scored from the one and Pettinelli added the 27th point.

Early in the final period, after North recovered a fumble on Quincy's 34, Durkin passed to Carroll for 10 yards and O'Leary, apparently in to punt, threw a nice pass to Dailey for a 26-yard gain.

Quincy held and Jack Leone saved North from a shutout when he kicked a 15-yard field goal, his fourth of the year. He had left the game with a bruised hip, but insisted upon returning.

Late in the game, with the reserves in action, Mark Abboud carried seven times for 37 yards and scored the final touchdown from the three.

The statistics show how Quincy dominated the game. The Presidents gained 262 yards on the ground to North's 99, added 116 yards passing to 75 and had 14 first downs to eight.

It was the most one-sided game since Quincy's undefeated 1969 team rolled, 53-0. Two years ago the Presidents won, 34-8.

Quincy-North games, either as coach or a fan, said Thursday he couldn't remember such perfect weather in the long series.

A present for the future.

Did you ever hear of returning a Savings Bond because someone had too many? No, that's something you'll never hear.

There's never a problem on Christmas morning if someone has two of the same thing. Even the third, fourth, or fifth Savings Bond is as welcome as the first.

So don't give someone you love their third chafing dish. This Christmas, give a present for the future. Give United States Savings Bonds.

Leone, Rickson Pour

Athletic Coordinator Carl Leone and Physical Education Coordinator Ken Rickson continued their practice of recent years by serving coffee and doughnuts to city and school officials and other guests at halftime of the Thanksgiving game.

Mele High On Perez

Quincy's Sam Mele, special assignment scout for the Red Sox, was again on hand for the Thanksgiving game.

"I think Tony Perez will help the Sox just as much as Bob Watson," Sam said. "He won't hit for Watson's average, but will win a lot of games with extra base hits."

SAUNA PRECAUTIONS

The new popularity of saunas and steam baths and the sense of physical well-being which they create, conceal some health risks which should not be overlooked.

In addition to elevating body temperature, the hot baths also increase the rate at which the heart beats - changes which may put a dangerous strain on an older person, a diabetic, or anyone with heart or circulatory problems. The Federal Trade Commission warns. Check with your doctor before indulging.

Even for the healthy, for various reasons it is better not to use saunas and steam baths just after eating, while under the influence of alcohol or while taking drugs which create drowsiness, after mood or have some sort of an effect on the body's circulatory system.

Any type of home device ought to have a thermostat and an automatic timer with a turn-off switch as safety features.

Central Turnout Biggest But:

Broad Meadows Girls Soccer Champs

The Quincy Junior High schools recently completed their second soccer season as a part of the broadening of the girls' athletic program at this level.

The Broad Meadows girls, coached by Mary Pratt, won the title with a 4-1-3 record. This followed their last year's record when they could not win a game until their last scheduled game.

This program is also serving as a feeder system for the high schools and its effectiveness should be measurable in a couple of more years as these underclassmen move on.

Central continues to attract the greatest numbers, as 75 candidates reported this fall to Barbara Donelin. About 25 girls reported at Point, Sterling and Atlantic. Broad Meadows hit the low point with only 6 candidates.

Miss Donelin had 55 girls remain throughout the fall season while the other coaches tended to lose about eight or nine candidates. Sterling Coach Dave Meehan lost many of his players through injuries.

"We were fortunate at Broad Meadows from this angle, as we ended up with 13 hardy souls who played out the entire eight-game schedule, in addition to a scrimmage with the high school girls," Miss Pratt said.

BM will have all its squad returning next year except for Janet McCarthy, the ninth grade captain. Janet will join her sister, Ann, who is a member of the high school squad, and will leave eighth grade Patricia to carry on the family tradition at BM.

Beth Anderson, an eighth grader, will be a key player next year, possessing all the skills needed to become an ideal player. She led the team in scoring and doubled in goal when needed. One of her goals was scored from 50 feet out, passing through just under the cross bar, quite an accomplishment.

She was complemented on the attack by Kathy Skarbinski, who scored two goals and added three assists. Debbie Noe and Maria Escano are outstanding eighth graders who may be lost to Abp. Williams. Maria has played two strong years at halfback and will be difficult to replace.

"She is a coach's dream," said Miss Pratt. "She is consistent, faithful and skilled. The Philippine Islands lost a wonderful person when they lost Maria."

The BM coach, however, has great expectations for seventh graders Julie Stanley, Gina Coletti, Chris Keddy and Kathy Thornton. Donna Clifford, who joined the squad during the last half of the season, got stronger on defense as she gained the needed experience. She, along with Susan Zeiba and Lena Christina, should help next year.

Gerry Mulvey's squad at Point ended with a 2-1-5 record. He will lose some outstanding players as his ninth graders move on. They include defensive players Tricia Travers, Julie Papile, Robin Lewis, Margie Kerins and Dara Morris. On offense it will be hard to replace Heather Silicis, Rebecca Markcus and Susan Dacey. Mulvey singled out Susan as the heart of his offense.

Returning players include eighth graders Amy Barron, Bonnie MacMurdo and seventh graders Danielle Morris, Lynn Gurney and Debbie Herron.

Dick DeChristofaro, second-year coach at Atlantic, led his team to a 1-2-5 record. With the ninth graders continuing to be housed at Atlantic, many from this level were on the squad.

They included Pam McIntire, Ellen Burke, Christine Collins, Janet Zdanowski and Lisa McCormick. Lisa doubled on the attack and in goal.

Returning will be eighth graders Michelle Fish, Michelle Burke and Lisa Ventola on defense and Lisa Pacino, the leading scorer, Beth Cooper and Joanne Hernon on offense. Beth also played center half and should be an asset to the squad next fall. DeChristofaro also expects big things from seventh graders Diane Conley, Pia Bartolo and Joanne Zdanowski.

Barbara Donelin, who continues to remain active in coaching a variety of girls' sports, saw her Central team wind up with a 1-2-4 record. Barbara has coached basketball, soccer, softball and gymnastics since the inception of the girls' athletic programs.

"All my ninth grade players were super," she said. "They attended any and all practice sessions throughout the year."

Included in this ninth grade group are offensive players Lisa Reynolds and Cathy Caldwell, Cathy led the scoring with two goals and two assists. Outstanding defensive players in this group were Nancy Roberts and Melinda Josephs.

Liz Toland led the eighth grade girls on offense with two goals and was complemented by Lynne Maloney. Donna Berry was cited for her steady defensive game.

Seventh graders who showed great potential were Tina Bagen, Tracy Daly and Karen Mannell on offense and Karen Bryan, Kathy DeFranc and Catherine Keenan on defense.

The Sterling girls, under first-year coach Meehan, finished with a 1-3-4 record. They were led on offense by Capt. Marie Henry, Christine Narciso and their leading scorer, Lauren Bina.

The heart of their defense consisted of two sisters Lisa and Lois Signorini, Judy Leonard and Beth Hill. Lisa played an exceptionally strong game in the goal during the entire schedule.

Christine Gregoli, an eighth grader, played a steady game on the attack.

Seventh graders include Liz Padula, Terri Sacchetti, Theresa Kelly, Colleen Phillips and attackers Tonia Andrianos, Tina Sikula and Cheryl Ruscio.

"A characteristic of the entire league was the predominance of scoreless ties," Miss Pratt said. "It seemed to be the overall inability of the girls to penetrate on the offense as opposed to their ability to play good defense."

"Our girls were not scored upon until the next to last game when we suffered our only loss to Point, 2-1. As the season progressed, there was an overall improvement in each school's offensive strategy, positioning and endurance, which should be helpful to the high school coaches."

The United Way

Arthur DePietro: He Helps People In Need

At times of personal emergencies many people are at a loss when it comes to finding an agency for help.

They know that such agencies exist, but the problem is in making contact.

Recognizing existence of the problem the agency now known as the United Way of Massachusetts Bay set up regional offices to assist people unable to find the right button to push.

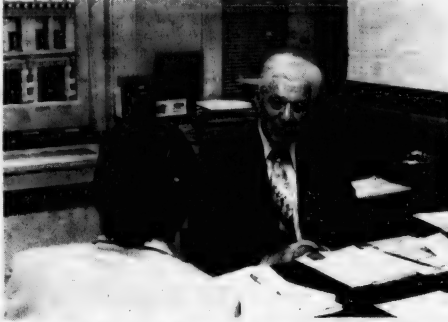

Arthur DePietro of Furnace Brook Pkwy, Quincy, is the community service representative of the AFL-CIO for the United Way's south region, which comprises Quincy and 17 other South Shore communities.

DePietro has been on the job for 29 years and now works out of the United Way's office at 1381 Hancock St., Quincy Sq.

Labor has always been active in the United Way. DePietro says and "labor people often hear of those in need and refer them to the United Way.

"In many cases," he explained, "I get calls from neighbors, relatives or a friend of people in need. However, I don't just work with labor people. Anyone who needs help calls on me and I get help as quickly as possible."

DePietro started in the labor movement back in 1937 when he became an organizer for the United Auto Workers at the Ford Motor Company in Somerville. He continued with the UAW as an organizer and later became international representative for the union in the northeast.

He left the UAW in the late 1950's and became a community representative for the social service agency.

DePietro often drives people to and from Boston Hospital himself when they are unable to obtain transportation to go for treatment.

"Because many of the problems are of a highly personal nature," he says, "I often have to visit them at their homes. I am on the road an awful lot."

DePietro works closely with the many agencies which make up the United Way, particularly during disasters when he is often called on to assist in providing housing, furniture and clothing.

In addition to his person-to-person work DePietro conducts a six-weeks counseling course every spring. The course is sponsored in Quincy by the Norfolk County Labor Council in conjunction with the United Way. The course is designed for people in labor, business and industry who want to become better acquainted with the services of the agencies on the South Shore.

Speakers from the office of Social Security, South Shore Retirement, Unemployment Compensation and Veterans Services also join in the course.

DePietro said that on several occasions, because of his rapport with other state community service representatives he has been able to assist families of Quincy people living in other communities and in Canada.

DePietro, husband of the late Ann DePietro, has two sons, Rev. Arthur J. DePietro, chaplain of Marian Manor, South Boston, and also chaplain of the Boston Juvenile Court, and James DePietro, a Boston Edison employee. He also has seven grandchildren.

City Club Christmas Breakfast Dec. 9

The Quincy City Club will hold its fifth annual Christmas breakfast for members on Sunday, Dec. 9, at 10 a.m. in the function room of Sherry's Restaurant.

Announcements will be made of the 1979 Christmas projects on behalf of the elderly, mentally ill, retarded and others.

President Richard J. Koch said the City Club will again provide requested equipment for the enjoyment of patients at the Long Island Hospital, personal gifts for patients at Medfield State and Boston State Hospitals, bedding and pajamas for the Faxon House Detoxification Center and individual Christmas gifts for children at the annual Christmas party for the retarded.

The City Club is a charitable service oriented organization founded to provide assistance in areas where a need exists.

In 1979, the club donated $1,000 in equipment to the Intensive Care Unit of the Quincy City Hospital for heart patients. The equipment was donated in memory of the late Richard J. Conboy on behalf of his family.

Koch also announced that a controlled basketball unit has been delivered to the Massachusetts Hospital School Gymnasium in Canton. The apparatus allows wheel chair patients to shoot baskets with the ball returned into them by a netting device.

Donald E. Conboy and Paul Lee are co-chairmen of the City Club Ways and Means Committee appointed to raise funds from its own membership to accomplish charitable endeavors. Dr. Allan Yacubian is director of the Presentation Committee.

The City Club, chartered on Sept. 12, 1974, has expended more than $7,500 in the past five years for equipment and gifts that service hundreds of patients in hospitals and institutions.

Thayer's Newspaper Wins Top New England Press Award

Thayer Academy's student newspaper, The Tiger's Eye, has won the first place award in the New England Scholastic Press Association's annual contest.

The newspaper is printed by The Quincy Sun.

The award is given to the best paper in three classes based on the size of the school. Thayer's award is Class III having 500 students or less. Judgment was based on the quality of the last three issues of the 1978-79 paper.

Laurie Hall of Brockton was the editor of these issues; Robert Insoft, Randolph, assistant editor, Andie Werner, also of Randolph, editorial pages editor, Pamela Rosenblatt, Quincy, sports editor; Robert Moore, Milton, copy editor; and Kathryn Chamberlain, Quincy, production manager.

Miss Chamberlain, this year's editor, had the honor of being elected to Quill and Scroll, International Honorary Society for High School Journalists, in her junior year.

Daniel Levinson of the English Department is faculty adviser.

CITY OF QUINCY
IN COUNCILORDER NO. 92
ORDI RI D.

February 5, 1979

Be it ordained by the City Council of the City of Quincy as follows:

That the Revised Ordinances of the City of Quincy, 1976, as amended, be further amended as follows:

In Chapter 24, Zoning, ARTICLE I ADMINISTRATION.

Section 12 Enforcement

Sub-section 1. After the words "the Inspector of Buildings", delete the words "as designated under Section 206 of the Quincy Building Code."

Sub-section 6. Delete the words "twenty [20] days" and substitute therefor the words "fourteen [14] days."

Add the following as Sub-section 8: "Violation of any ordinance contained in this chapter shall be subject to a penalty of not more than One Hundred Dollars [$100.00] for each such offense. Each day such violation continues shall constitute a separate offense."

Section 14 Board of Appeals

Sub-section 1. Delete the words "Section 14" and substitute therefor the words "Section 12."

Sub-section 3. Delete the words "Section 20" and substitute therefor the words "Section 16."

Section 15 Special Permits

Delete Sub-section 1 and substitute therefor the following:

"By the terms of this Ordinance and in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 40A, as amended, of the General Laws of the Commonwealth, the Board of Appeals is hereby designated as the "special permit granting authority" and is authorized to approve or disapprove certain uses [specified in ARTICLE IV, Section 42 Table of Use Regulations], for which a special permit is required, except that the City Council is designated as the "special permit granting authority" for applications filed under ARTICLE III, Section 31, Sub-section 2 Planned Unit Development. In acting on these matters, the Board shall take into consideration the general purpose and intent of this Ordinance and may impose such conditions and safeguards deemed necessary to preserve community values. The Board may grant a permit without finding of hardship, or, for stated reasons, may deny the permit. In granting a permit the Board may impose further restrictions on the property as are appropriate, but shall not waive or relax any applicable provision of this Ordinance."

Sub-section 2 [c]. After the word "application", add the words "within thirty-five [35] days."

Add the following as Sub-section 3:

"3. Special permits shall only be issued following public hearings held within sixty-five [65] days after filing of an application with the special permit granting authority, a copy of which shall forthwith be filed with the city clerk by the applicant. The special permit granting authority shall act within ninety [90] days following the date of public hearing."

Add the following as Sub-section 4:

"4. A special permit granted under the provisions of this Ordinance shall lapse two [2] years from date of issue if substantial use or construction has not commenced within said period except for good cause. The time required to pursue or await the determination of a judicial appeal from the grant of said permit shall be included in said two-year period."

Section 16 Variances

Delete the entire section and substitute therefor the following: "The Board of Appeals is hereby designated as the "permit granting authority" and shall have authority to grant variances for use in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 40A, as amended, of the General Laws.

Section 17 Amendments to the Ordinance

Sub-section 3. Delete the words "Section 8" and substitute therefor the words "Section 5."

ARTICLE III ZONING DISTRICTS

Section 32 District Boundaries

Delete Sub-section 2 [f] and 2 [g] and insert present Section 2 [g] as new Section 2 [f].

ARTICLE VI SUPPLEMENTARY PROVISIONS

Section 62 Nonconformance

In Sub-section 2, delete the second paragraph and substitute therefor the following:

"No such extension or alteration shall be permitted unless there is a finding by the Board of Appeals, as the permit granting authority, that such change, extension, or alteration shall not be substantially more detrimental than the existing nonconforming use to the neighborhood."

ARTICLE VIIIA ZONING DISTRICTS

In the caption for Article VIIIA, delete words "Zoning Districts" and substitute therefor the words "Flood Plain District."

Section 86 Flood Plain Districts

In the caption for Section 86, delete the words "Flood Plain Districts" and substitute therefor the words "Zoning Districts."

In subsection IV Board of Appeals, delete the words "thirty [30] days" and substitute therefor the words "thirty-five [35] days."

Downtown Office Building Hearings Set For Monday

The City Council will hold public hearings Monday, Dec. 3, in the City Hall chamber on several aspects of the proposed Campanelli-Stop and Shop office building at the corner of Hancock and Granite Sts.

The Urban Development Plan under Chapter 121B will be discussed at 6:15 p.m. and the land taking by eminent domain of buildings at the corner will be taken up at 6:30 p.m.

City May Sue State Over Tax Rate Impasse

Tobin said he has City Solicitor Robert Fleming "checking the law now" to see if there are legal ways of "breaking down what he called the state's 'unreasonable' stand."

"We may try to file new legislation," he said.

One of the problems, he said, is a little publicized provision of the new state law that places a 4 percent cap on increases in most municipal expenditures.

"In previous years, if a city disagreed with the state over the tax rate," he said, "the municipality could set its own rate without state certification. Mayor White did it several times in Boston."

"Under the tax cap law, you can't do that."

He called that provision of the law "the state's trump card."

"There are some guys in there going over our figures and dotting every i and crossing every t," he said. "They want me to absorb several years of financial problems in the city."

"I want to do it by absorbing a little bit each year but they can't help cities that find themselves in a bind. They want us to bite the bullet and absorb it all this year."

"And they have the nerve to tell me that the election is over and I've got a new two-year term so I don't have to fight it anymore. It's a matter of principle."

At the heart of the problem may be the fact that, in past years, administrations have badly overestimated anticipated receipts in an effort to hold the tax rate down.

Last month, in a letter to Tobin, Fritz Streifer, a retired North Quincy resident who has kept a free lance eye on city finances, said the 1979 tax rate should have been $210.73 instead of $196.60 in order to account for revenue deficits since 1976.

In a reply to Streifer, the Mayor commended him on his analysis, saying "you have zeroed in and pin-pointed the real issue that the city has a revenue deficit."

Recapitulation sheets for the past four years indicate that receipts were overestimated by $4.3 million in 1976, by $5.7 million in 1977, by $4.6 million in 1978, and by $2.7 million in 1979.

City Seeks Tourist Dollar

Fine Arts, and while they are there people will walk the Freedom Trail."

Miss Pisano, who has been an assistant planner for about a year, said one of her first tasks will be to compile a list of events in Quincy for the Massachusetts Division of Tourism.

Pretty soon, letters will be going out to organizations in the city asking them to list concerts, plays, road races, flea markets, anything visitors from outside Quincy would be interested in.

"We have found that word of these special events has not been getting out of the Quincy area," said Miss Pisano. "Did you know that in the state's book of events Quincy is not mentioned once?"

Baharian Speaks At Seminar

Thirty-four community leaders from Norfolk County and the South Shore attended the first session of an "Industrial Development Seminar" recently at the South Shore Bank directors' room.

The seminar is sponsored jointly by the Norfolk County Development and Tourist Council and the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

The initial session featured the Rev. Bedros Baharian, chairman of the Quincy Planning Board and citywide development director, who spoke on Quincy's success in attracting new business.

Say "I Love You" with a Love Chest by Lane®

The love chest is the most personal, cherished piece of furniture she'll ever own. A gift steeped in centuries of romance and legend. We have an impressive assortment of beautiful styles, each finished in fine cabinetwoods and lined with fragrant red cedar. Can you think of a more imaginative way to say "I love you?"

SPEND THIS WINTER IN CALIFORNIA

You'll love the climate in California. It's cool and quiet during the day, with a refreshing breeze of a menu that includes soups, salads, burgers and quiche, served from 11:30 to 3:00. Things start to warm up around 4:00, when complimentary hot hors d'oeuvres are served at your table 'til 7:00. Then it really gets hot in California with music and dancing. But if things get too hot for you on the dance floor, you can step into the lounge and recharge your energy. Watch the waterfall, or do a little California dreamin' with the driftwood. Then get back out and get down with the best music around.

Throw a party in California. We'll help you in every aspect of planning a party for your business or friends. Our expert staff, kitchen and cocktail facilities, dynamic sound system, dance floor and California decor will contribute to a memorable affair.

CALIFORNIA. IT'S A GREAT STATE TO BE IN.

A little bit of practical Victoriana for your home-

With winter just ahead, what is more practical than a working oil lamp?

Despite all the hard work of public utility companies to keep electric service flowing without interruption, nature at times conspires by the use of wind and sleet to knock out lights.

The most practical item for emergency lighting under such circumstances is an old fashioned oil lamp. Oil lamps can be a thing of beauty for your home--just as they were during the Victorian period.

The Quincy Cooperative Bank is now offering oil lamps of unique and unusual beauty for your home. Whether in use or not, these lamps will enhance the decor of your home. The bases are custom created for us by New England Potters Guild, Inc., the same folks who brought you the unusually beautiful flower pots when our bank offered these promotional items some months ago.

Come in and see our lamps with their pretty pottery bases. Pick the color and form you like best for your home. The deal is very simple: *deposit $200 or more into a New or Existing savings account and you can buy a lamp for $5.00. (Only one lamp per account)

THIS OFFER IS GOOD WHILE SUPPLIES LAST.

*NOW accounts are not included in this promotion.

Santa's Favorite...

A Holiday Tradition—delicious cakes and pastries from Montilio's.

Holiday times are upon us again and you'll be entertaining more than ever. Spoil your family and friends with the very best in pastries
from Montilio's.

Such delights as Panatone— an old fashioned

Italian Bread made of a rich sweet dough, fresh eggs, butter, raisins and fruits.

Rum Cake (Cassata)— with a rich taste of rum, chocolate and vanilla. The Zuppa Inglese— like a rum cake with rich layers of cherries and almonds, and Santa's Favorite... Montilio's very special GINGER BREAD HOUSES.

We are, as always, dedicated to your Holiday enjoyment. Come in today and see why Montilio's is a Holiday Tradition.

Adams Station To Open In 1981 With No Southbound Ramp Exit

The Furnace Brook Parkway exit from the Southeast Expressway is going to be a pretty busy one when the Quincy Adams MBTA station in South Quincy opens in 1981.

Bill Pisano of the State Department of Public Works, said this week that there will be no access out of the station connecting with the southbound lanes of the Expressway.

"Outgoing traffic heading south on Route 3 will have to go north to the Furnace Brook Parkway exit and turn around," he said.

But that's a problem that won't present itself until September, 1981, when the temporary access ramps between the station and the Expressway and Route 128 are due to be finished.

Permanent ramps are expected to be completed in June, 1982 for traffic coming from the north and in June, 1983, for traffic entering from the south.

The station itself is to be finished in the first quarter of 1981, said Milla Dixon, spokesman for the MBTA, "and as far as I know it's on time."

There have been reports that the station would not be ready for another three years.

Auditors Still Checking Books

Tobin May Take Tax Dispute Back To Governor

By TOM HENSHAW

Three auditors from the State Bureau of Accounts prowled through Quincy's books this week in the latest scene from the long-running play called "Setting the Tax Rate."

Mayor Tobin said the auditors, who arrived at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday and dug in for at least a day's stay, were "verifying, substantiating and documenting what we have been saying all along."

"Whatever they do, if I'm not happy, then I'll go back and see the Governor," said Tobin. "I don't think Quincy has to be treated like this."

The Mayor said the visit from the auditors grew out of a particularly heated meeting with officials of the Department of Revenue, who kept bringing up Quincy's past track record with tax rates.

"They kept reminding me of underfunded budgets and ballooned receipts," said Tobin. "I kept saying, 'But I've been Mayor for only one term. Why are you penalizing me?'"

"We kept going back and forth and at one time, when they had me up to $30.55 (tax increase) I told them that I was going to take my case to the governor. I think that upset them."

"The Governor squeezed us into his schedule and I told him, 'Governor, you ran on a platform to help communities with tax problems and we need your help."

"I told him I thought a $30 tax rate was unconscionable and he asked the Department of Revenue to sit down and see if they could work out their problems with us and go over the figures."

"Now the auditors are here to verify them. I suspect that once they are finished I will get a phone call to come into the State House and talk."

Tobin said he felt that the law suit over pay raises which was filed, lost and appealed by the

Nurses To Take Stand On Proposed Hospital Layoffs

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Quincy City Hospital nurses were scheduled to meet last night [Wednesday] to take a stand on proposed layoffs to ease the hospital's financial problems.

According to Hospital Administrator Anthony DeFalco, those layoffs may range anywhere from a four- or five-week layoff of 25 percent of the hospital's staff to one- or two-day payless "furloughs" for all employees - "including myself."

The layoffs are necessary because of a deficit of around $250,000 caused by last month's nurses "sickout", DeFalco said. During that eight-day sickout, an average of about 50 nurses per day called in sick and occupancy at the hospital was reduced from about 300 to 190. Patients at the hospital pay an average of about $300 per person per day.

Occupancy has "recovered very nicely" from the sickout, DeFalco said, making the hospital's financial squeeze less serious than previously expected. Monday's patient census was 302, above average for the pre-holiday season, he said.

"We are constantly reassessing the hospital's financial situation in order to design a layoff plan with the least impact on employees," DeFalco said. "We are exploring all sorts of alternatives."

But Pauline Kennedy of Weymouth, chief negotiator for the nurses' union, said that a meeting last week with DeFalco and Joseph McFarland, chief labor negotiator for the city, gave her the impression that the two options discussed by DeFalco - the four- or five-week layoffs or the one- or two-day furloughs - were the city's only proposals.

The nurses would probably take a vote on those proposals Wednesday night, Mrs. Kennedy said, adding that she thought most nurses would find them unacceptable. According to the nurses' contract, any reduction in force must be negotiated with the union, subject to arbitration, she said.

"You have to understand what people here have gone through," she said. "A year and a half without negotiation, finally settling for minimal increases and now this. It's almost as if we're being asked to go without pay increases for this year."

Strand Theater Up For Sale While Arcade Decision Pending

A "Backstage Arcade" for the Strand Theater, Quincy Square, is still a possibility despite a Boston Sunday Globe ad placed by the owners offering the theater for sale.

According to Joseph O'Connor, co-owner of the theater, the ads are not a new development.

"We've been trying to sell the theater for years, with no success. It's a big place to keep going. If there were an alternative to selling it, I'd do it," he said, referring to the game room possibility.

Strand owners O'Connor and Anthony DePideo have discussed the arcade with the Quincy License Board on several occasions.

They told the board that they are having serious financial difficulties and would like a temporary arcade license to see if they could turn the setbacks around.

The board will vote on the matter Dec. 11, after viewing a similar arcade on Rte 9, Framingham.

The Quincy Center Business and Professional Association will inform the board of their opinion of the arcade after a general membership meeting today (Thursday) at South Shore Bank.

Manet Health Center Elections

The second annual meeting of the Manet Community Health Center, will be held Thursday, Dec. 13 at 7:30 p.m. in the community room of the center, 1193 Sea St.

Elections will be held for secretary, treasurer and board of directors. Members of the corporation are eligible to vote.

There are seven positions to fill on the board of directors.

Nominated are:

Judy Ahearn, Germantown; Marilyn Hamel, Houghs Neck; Teresa Harcourt, Adams Shore; Peter Ryan, Houghs Neck; and Charles Sullivan, Germantown.

Running for re-election are

Rosemary Wahlberg, Arnold Bereson, Peter Little and John Whitney.

Gertrude Peter is nominated for secretary; Barbara Lynch, treasurer.

Nominations will also be accepted from the floor.

Immediately following the meeting, there will be a brief meeting of the elected board of directors, who will elect a president and vice president.

The individual elected president must have been a board member for at least one year prior to election. The term of office is one year, and a maximum of two consecutive terms can be served.

License Board Vote

Pledging Of 'California' Disco Stock, Liquor License Approved

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

The Quincy License Board has granted John J. Hunter, owner of "California", a disco at 79 Parkway, permission to pledge the establishment's liquor license and stock.

Hunter, who is sole stock holder, said that the license and stock will be used as collateral for a loan from a Boston bank.

He said the disco is doing well and that the loan will replace temporary financing.

The request was unanimously approved by City Clerk John Gillis, Police Chief Francis X.

Finn, Health Inspector Dr. Robert J. McKeough, and Building Inspector Allan MacDonald. Fire Chief Edward Barry did not attend the meeting.

The board also granted the Quincy High School Band Parents Organization a tag day permit for Dec. 15. Rain date is Dec. 22. The tag day is not to be conducted at intersections.

In another matter, not formally before the board, Building Inspector Allan MacDonald told board members that owners of McDonald's, 473

Southern Artery, discussed plans with him for a drive-in window.

The window will be constructed on the south side of the building, with a three foot ramp on each side of the window.

Building Inspector MacDonald said that drive-in windows increase a business's profits by 15%. McDonald's doesn't need the permission of the License Board for the addition.

Following next week's meeting, the board will recess for the holidays until Jan. 8, unless an emergency meeting is called.

New Owners Promise No Changes At Remick's

"The new owners don't foresee any changes in personnel or management and our merchandising format will remain the same," said Joseph Angelo, manager of Remick's of Quincy.

"We're just going to be more aggressive and try to get out there and reach more people."

Angelo had just concluded nearly a week of consultations with the new owners of Remick's, Louis Hayman and Daniel Shechtman of New York.

The purchase of the 83-year-old Quincy institution by Hayman and Shechtman was disclosed last week in what may have been the city's best kept business secret of all time.

Frank E. Remick, who took over the store in 1930 on the death of his father, Alfred H. Remick, said he sold the business because of his age. Remick just turned 70 years of age.

Remick said the store will retain the Remick name and remain in Quincy Square, where it has been a retail bulwark as other stores moved out in the suburbs.

There were reports that the new owners planned to expand the floor space of the store within the building but Angelo declined to comment on such speculation.

Hayman and Shechtman also own five other stores in the United States -- including Rogers Peet in New York City, three Bond's stores in California and Whitehouse and Hardy in Chicago, all quality men's stores.

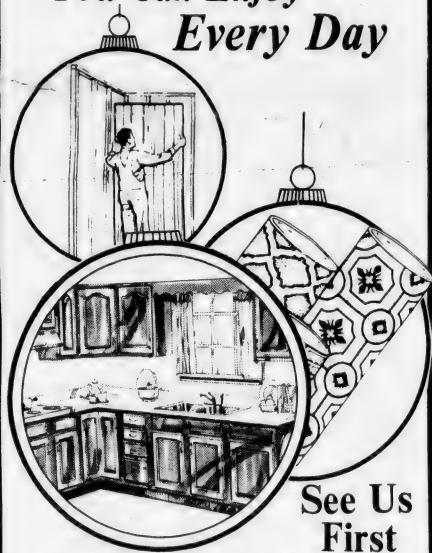

They also own two men's stores called "Harry Gold" in Montreal.

Mayor Arthur H. Tobin cited Remick and his store as an institution in Quincy.

"Down through the years," he said, "we saw 10 or a dozen department stores leave downtown Quincy but Remick's was always the stalwart that held the business community together."

"I am sad that Mr. Remick reached this conclusion but it speaks well of the new owners that they wanted to come into Quincy at this time."

Dispute With Campanelli

Downtown Building Strikes Snag With Trades Union

The $14 million Campanelli-Stop and Shop office building proposed for the Della Chiesa Parking Area struck a snag at a City Council hearing Monday night.

Members of the Building and Construction Trades Council of Quincy showed up en masse to register their opposition to the project in a dispute with Campanelli Enterprises.

Council President Carmine D'Olimpio said Campanelli refused to guarantee community standards in wages, hours and working conditions plus employment of qualified local tradesmen.

The dispute emerged during a public hearing on a proposal to take land by eminent domain at the corner of Hancock and Granite Sts. to make way for the project.

It also produced a heated exchange between D'Olimpio and City Councillor John J. Lydon Jr. over D'Olimpio's views on the open [or non-union] shop.

D'Olimpio told the hearing that during the course of two meetings with Robert DeMarco, vice president of Campanelli Enterprises, the Building Trades Council made three major concessions.

He said that in three weeks since the last meeting he had not heard from Campanelli on his request for a guarantee of community standards.

"We cannot in good conscience," he said, "support this land-taking without some guarantee that area standards for hours, wages and working conditions will be upheld or that qualified local building tradesmen will have an opportunity for employment."

And 88 building tradesmen indicated their agreement by signing up in opposition to the project.

D'Olimpio said that he has scheduled another meeting with Campanelli representatives tomorrow [Friday] in an attempt to reach an agreement.

He said the unions have already made concessions by agreeing to a no strike clause and a one-job contract which, he said, "deviated from our norm of three-year agreements with employer groups."

"The mere fact that we sat down with them to talk is a third major concession," he said. "It is not in our favor. It weakens our position in the future."

D'Olimpio also questioned whether the city is "getting the best proposal and financial commitment possible" for the project, which includes tax breaks and federal money for a parking garage.

"Were all the inducements that were made available to Campanelli also made to other developers?" he asked.

He distributed to councillors a clipping of an ad in the Boston Herald-American in which the city of Fall River proposed a similar development in that city.

"It opens a piece of city-owned land down in Fall River for open, fair, equitable competition," he said. "This is the type of thing that can be done."

Lydon's questioning of D'Olimpio appeared to be directed at whether Campanelli was seeking an open shop agreement with the Building Trades Council and how D'Olimpio felt about it.

"Carmine," said Lydon, "are you opposed to an open shop arrangement?"

Councillor Daniel G. Raymond interrupted with a point of order, contending that the question was not germane to a land-taking hearing.

"It is the issue here," said Lydon, "so let's get it

QJC Women's Center To Sponsor Consumer Education Workshops

The Quincy Junior College Women's Center will sponsor a 10 week series of workshops on community consumer education issues beginning Monday, Jan. 7, 9 to 11 a.m. at Lincoln Hancock Community School.

The Women's Center received funding for the workshops from the Division of Occupational Education, Massachusetts Department of Education.

Target populations for the workshops, which are free, will be single parents and women, age 35 and older, who plan to enter the workforce on a limited or part-time basis.

Alicia Coletti, Women's Center director, commented, "These workshops are designed to assist those people who have been out of the job market for an extended period to aid them in making a smoother transition from home to work."

Workshops will be on community resources, personal growth and development, parenting and family dynamics.

Free child care will be provided.

Groups which will receive priority in the selection of workshop participants are the handicapped, disadvantaged, single parents, those over 35 and minorities.

However, anyone who does not fit in any of these categories but is preparing to enter the job market in the near future, is encouraged to apply.

For more information, call Alicia Coletti at the Women's Center, 786-8791; or Linda Wilson, Quincy Junior College Coordinator of Student Services, 786-8777, Ext. 452.

Women's Commission Holds School Return Workshop

The Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women was scheduled to hold a workshop yesterday (Wednesday) from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. at City Hall for women who have decided to return to school.

Toby Felton and Donna Rothenberg, outreach counselor at Quincy Junior College, were to conduct the workshop addressing some of the aspects of decision-making.

Quincy Speakers At Regis Conference

Dianne Wixted Hayes and Ann Crowley-Sandonato were speakers at a recent conference on women and the law at Regis College, Weston.

Miss Hayes, a partner of Hayes and Hayes, Newcomb St., Quincy spoke on ways to protect and Care Groups Plan Meeting On Winter Energy Crisis

The Quincy Community Action Organization plans a meeting of various care-giving groups and municipal officials from Quincy and South Shore towns Tuesday, Dec. 11, at 1 p.m. at the Lincoln-Hancock School.

Rep. Robert A. Cerasoli (D-Quincy), whose staff is also working on the meeting, said its purpose is to "develop a network of groups to share information concerning resources and formulate strategy to meet this winter's energy crisis."

"Many of our elderly citizens and low income families may be faced with the prospect of severe malnutrition and frost bite caused by lack of money for food and fuel," said Cerasoli.

"As the federal energy funds will not be sufficient to meet the needs of all income eligible residents, it is incumbent upon all of us to plan a system which will avert any possible tragedies."

Fire Wood Permits

Available For Seniors, Needy

Mayor Arthur Tobin announces that permits to obtain fire wood for the Senior Citizens and the needy, are now available at the Department of Public Works Office.

Individuals who apply for wood must show their Senior Citizen I.D. Card, or in the case of the needy, written proof of their financial status.

Nothing succeeds like access. (Especially this time of year.)

Chances are, you're pretty busy these days.

We understand.

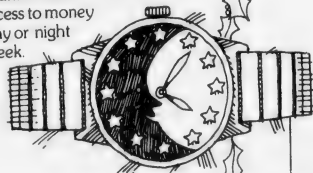

That's why Quincy Savings is doing everything possible to make banking here even more convenient. For you. So you have greater access to the money services you need, when and where you need them.

Whether it's making a deposit into your savings account, taking care of your bills (including loan payments), or cashing a check when you're away from home, Quincy Savings customers enjoy these important advantages:

We're very open with customers

Our six offices are open at convenient hours throughout the week. Saturday hours provide still more flexibility, as do walk up and drive-in facilities at most locations.

But in a sense, we're open all the time. Because our Plus/24 automatic teller machines make it possible for you to bank around the clock. You have access to money every day or night in the week.

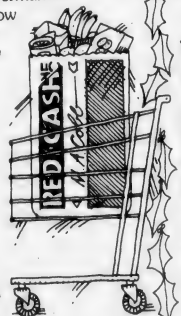

371 Hancock Street, 1200 Hancock Street,
1374 Hancock Street, 138 Franklin Street,
461 Washington Street
Hanover, Rte. 53 and Broadway.

The key to access

We call it a REDI-CASH card. More than 10,000 Quincy Savings Bank customers already use the card for our Plus/24 machines, to make deposits, withdrawals, or loan payments, or to transfer money from one account to another.

One of the further advantages of our REDI-CASH/VEC card is being able to cash personal, payroll or government checks both at our offices and 23 other banks, as well as at more than 100 supermarket locations. Think how convenient that is, when you're away from home!

Checking: with or without checks

Quincy Savings has a way to help you reduce the number of hours you spend paying bills each month. We call it The Bill System. It's simply a REDI-NOW Account, which pays 5% interest, with a Pay-by-Phone feature. The combination gives you the choice of writing and mailing out checks to various places, or having Pay-by-Phone take care of paying some of those bills for you, at 13¢ per transaction, which saves you time and postage. You can take advantage of Pay-by-Phone even when you're away on vacation.

Within easy reach

You'll find the other services you need, within easy reach, at Quincy Savings Bank. Day in and day out, you have a choice of savings accounts and term certificates, all paying the highest possible rates, plus direct deposit service. You'll find retirement plans to suit your needs, as well as Savings Bank Life Insurance, and lending services. In fact, we have about as accessible and wide a selection of bank services as there is anywhere. Maybe that's why we're the largest savings bank on the South Shore today. And why nothing succeeds like access.

To apply for any of these helpful services, visit our nearest office or call a customer service representative at 471-3500, soon.

MBTA passes

One out of every four adult MBTA riders uses a pre-paid monthly pass, and the number of passholders should grow rapidly now that the T has increased the number of sales outlets.

The reason for the popularity of the passes is that they save money for regular T commuters. The passes are priced at the equivalent of 18 round-trips per month, so a commuter can get two or more days of free riding with each pass.

The passes can be used any time of day, seven days a week. So riders who buy passes for their work trips get a free bonus when they use them for other purposes—to go shopping or to a sports event, for instance.

The passes, originally available only to employees of big companies, have been sold to the general public for the past year. Direct sales to commuters now account for one out of every four passes sold.

The T has started offering passes for sale through banks in many communities. That program is working out so well that the T has closed its own pass sales office in the Washington Street station concourse.

On the South Shore, the passes are sold through the Quincy Cooperative Bank offices at 1259 Hancock St. in front of the Quincy Center station, and at 280 Grove St., Braintree. December passes are on sale at those locations this week, and will be sold on the last five business days of a month for the coming month.

There are six monthly passes, ranging in price from $9 to $34.20. A pass for the Ashmont and Forest Hills line costs $9. A pass good for the South Shore transit line costs $18, and for that line plus the first 25 cents in bus fare, $27.

Both South Shore passes are valid for all other MBTA rapid transit and trolley service. And while the $18 pass cannot be used on bus routes serving Quincy stations, it is valid for most other bus lines.

Persons who buy passes 11 or 12 months a year are entitled to a 10 percent reduction on the property damage portion of their auto insurance bills. Passholders also receive discounts at some museums.

This year, for the first time, the MBTA is selling holiday gift certificates for monthly passes. "For the unusual, practical gift idea for your family member or friend, why not give a monthly pass gift certificate?" the T asks.

While you're thinking that one over, consider buying a pass for yourself. Even for the relatively expensive South Shore passes, the price is in line with the cost of a tank of gasoline, and the mileage is unlimited.

November 27, 1979

We are happy to be the local agency for the sale of MBTA passes. Our bank believes this service reflects not only our ongoing interest in helping the communities we serve but more important, it is part of our program to do all we can to help constructively with the critical need to conserve energy.

The following members were appointed to the group's board of directors:

Ethyl Lawless, program chairman; Melba Sprague, trip coordinator; Marjorie Holmberg, refreshments; Mary Ellis, hospitality; Mae Lauwers, white elephant; Gladys Chandler, remembrance; Doris Longmire, publicity.

'Christmas Nite Out' For Quincy Emblem Club

The Quincy Emblem Club was scheduled to hold its "Christmas Nite Out," Wednesday Dec. 5, at 7 p.m. at the Avon Town House.

Charlotte Wilson was in charge of reservations.

The next regular meeting is scheduled for Wednesday Dec. 12 at 8 p.m. at the Quincy Elks.

A country fair will follow the meeting, and members are asked to bring a fair item. Santa Claus will exchange gifts.

Members of the refreshment committee are asked to call Charlotte Wilson, 587-3583, and let her know what refreshments will be brought to the meeting.

The club recently held a turkey raffle and proceeds were donated to the Elks Christmas Basket Fund ($100), Kidney Dialysis ($25), and to the Garden City Fund for a turkey ($20). Irene Whelan was in charge of the raffle.

Club members have been invited by the Elks to join them at their Open House Christmas Party Sunday, Dec. 23, 1-6 p.m.

St. Ann's Teachers, Students Participate In Cemetery Clean-Up

Teachers and students from St. Ann's School ninth grade CCD classes recently raked and cleared the grounds at historic Hancock Cemetery.

The activity, coordinated by Mrs. Jackie Cossboom and her son Donny, was selected to help students achieve a sense of belonging to the past responsibility for the present and future.

Teachers involved in the project were Hugh Powers, John Dargin, William Drobia and Vin Lanoue.

Students participating in the clean-up were Mark McGowan, Sean Kelly, Pat McLaughlin, Patti Reid, Maureen McCormack, Lisa Reynolds, Kathy Donnelly, Kathy Caldwell, Lisa Straczuzi, Nancy Kelly and Yvonne Boness.

Historic Commission To Discuss New Center Office Building

The Historic District Commission will meet Wednesday, Dec. 12, at 7:30 p.m. in the Planning Department at City Hall to discuss the proposed Campanelli-Stop and Shop Building, 1381-1397 Hancock St.

Members of the commission will also take up proposals for new signs at the Second Time Around Thrift Shoppe, 25 Temple St.; and Four Seasons Ticket Agency, 1220 Hancock St.

OLD COLONY BANK PRESENTS THE $10,000 SAVINGS CERTIFICATE FOR PEOPLE WHO DON'T HAVE $10,000.

Now you can buy a $10,000 six-month savings certificate with as little as $5,000. That means your savings can earn a lot more interest. It's one way banking on a first name basis at Old Colony makes your money work harder.

Here's how. Let's say you have $5,000. We'll lend you the $5,000 you need to buy a $10,000 six-month certificate.

You receive the interest on the $10,000 certificate. You repay the $5,000 loan plus the minimum interest we're required by law to charge. The difference between the interest you earn and the interest you pay is equal to a 10.942% annual rate* on your $5,000 investment. The chart shows how the accounts work for other amounts.

Don't lose one more day of high interest—start earning it today. Stop in and let us show you how banking on a first name basis means new ways to make more with your money.

First Church Of Squantum In 'Hanging Of The Greens'

One hundred children and adults participated recently in the First Church of Squantum's annual "Hanging of the Greens".

The evening began with a Christmas service in the sanctuary led by Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, pastor.

The congregation then divided into task forces and decorated the church or made Christmas crafts.

Chairwoman of the event was Barbara Colwell. The large group of decorators was supervised by Marie Reister and assistants Joan Hansen, Janet Sumner, Ida and Robert Von Riegers and Stewart and Mary Scott.

Ellen Ogilvie was in charge of the children's crafts with tables supervised by Barbara Anderson, Kathy Hansen, Carl Anderson, Gretchen Bumpus and Sandy Sumner.

Hazel Mayne directed the crafts for adults, assisted by Dorothy Abbe, Grace Holmes, Fred MacMillan, Leon MacIntyre, Gloria Cutler and Mae Lewis.

In a new addition to the festivities, adults made "Chrismsons", Christian symbols in white and gold, to go on the church's "Chrismson" tree in the sanctuary.

The evening concluded with refreshments served by Mary Lou and Steven Kemp, and Ethyl Lawless.

Earlier in the day, the church held its first worship service of Advent. Worshipers arriving at the church were greeted by the Cinnamon Toast Crowd singing Christmas carols.

Gretchen Bumpus gave the Call to Worship, Grace Holmes, the Opening Prayer, Stewart Scott led the Offertory Prayer.

The Youth Choir, directed by Mary Ruth Scott, sang "Hallelujah, Glory Hallelujah" by Natalie Sileth. The Senior Choir sang "Sing Your Psalms to the Holy Child", arranged by Practorius.

Holly Bumpus led the lighting of the first Advent candle, assisted by Jamie Gerry and Eilian Shionis.

James Sumner and Kristen Reister told the congregation of their trip to the Children's Museum, Boston, with the Sunday School.

They were among 30 children who made the trip as a reward from the Department of Christian Education for their attendance record. Twelve adults accompanied the children.

The pastor preached on "Seeking the Christ Through Prayer", the first in a series of four Advent sermons.

Greeters for the service were Peggy and Walter Bryan. Hosting the fellowship hour after the service were Hazel Mayne, Gladys Chandler, Edna MacIntyre and Mary Shionis.

Topic for next Sunday's sermon, which begins at 10:15 a.m., will be "Seeking the Christ Through Reading the Bible".

Koch Club Schedules Santa Visits To Shut-Ins

The Koch Club will conduct its 23rd annual Santa Claus visit to shut-in children on Saturday, Dec. 22 or Sunday, Dec. 23 between 2 p.m. and 5 p.m.

The program is held for boys and girls who are confined to their homes year round.

Originally, the service was offered only to Quincy people, but a number of calls from parents in neighboring communities requesting Santa's visit to their children expanded the program beyond the city limits.

Only parents of the shut-in children may make the request and Santa's visit will be arranged at the convenience of the parents and children.

Reservations may be made with Richard J. Koch, 241 Newbury Ave., North Quincy. Information as to ages should also be provided.

Other dates or times will be available according to the discretion of the parents.

Richard M. Morrissey and Richard J. Koch, Jr. are cochairmen of the activity.

Catholic School Principals Attend Convention

The principals of four Catholic elementary schools in Quincy recently attended the fourth annual convention of the Elementary School Principals Association in Holyoke.

They are Sisters Mary Romula, Sacred Heart School, North Quincy; Mary Owen, St. Mary School, West Quincy; Mary Falisa, St. Joseph School, Quincy

Point; and Georgianna, St. Ann School, Wollaston.

The convention is held each fall to give the principals an opportunity to keep abreast of current topics in education and give them time to reflect and discuss their roles as educational leaders.

Woman Impressed By United Way

Roberta J. Wordell of Quincy is impressed by the close scrutiny that is given to the allocation of United Way contributions to the 162 human care agencies that receive the money.

"This, to me, is a big selling feature," said Ms. Wordell, assistant manager at the State Street Bank, Boston, who is on loan to assist the United Way of Massachusetts Bay in raising funds.

"More people should have the opportunity to share in the work of the United Way," she said. "More people could be helped if more companies became involved, particularly by loaned executives to the campaign."

'Greening Of The Church' Festivities At United First Parish

FOLK-GOSPEL DUET Bob and Sue Moulton, from Eastern Nazarene College, will be appearing in concert Sunday at 7 p.m. at Central Baptist Church, Quincy. Both play guitar and sing, blending religious and contemporary songs, as well as original gospel music.

Folk-Gospel Concert At Central Baptist Church Sunday

Bob and Sue Moulton, a contemporary folk-gospel duet from Eastern Nazarene College, will appear in concert Sunday Dec. 9, at 7 p.m. at Central Baptist Church, 65 Washington St., Quincy.

A husband and wife team, they have performed together for the past four years at churches, coffee houses and retreats from Maine to New Jersey. They have also been on Boston radio and T.V.

Both play guitar and sing blending familiar religious and contemporary songs as well as original gospel music.

They are sponsored by the college office of communications.

Quincy Police Plan 'Morning Of Recollection'

At St. John's Dec. 15

Members of the Quincy Police Department will attend a morning of recollection at St. John's Church, Quincy, Saturday, Dec. 15.

The morning will begin with the celebration of an 8 A.M. Mass in the upstairs church, followed by a ham and egg breakfast in the Parish Social Hall.

A brief talk and a showing of an award winning film will follow.

There will be opportunity for sharing, reflection and prayer. The morning will conclude with a luncheon of ham or roast beef sandwiches at 11:45 A.M.

Kiwanis Club Aiding In

Salvation Army Christmas Appeal

The Kiwanis Club of Quincy will assist the Salvation Army with their annual Christmas appeal Saturday, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. by encouraging shoppers to make a contribution in the kettle in front of Remick's, Quincy Square.

This is the first year that the club has participated in the drive, and Kiwanis members hope that other service organizations will also join in the effort.

The congregation of United First Parish [Unitarian], Quincy, began the Christmas season with their traditional "Greening of the Church" festivities Sunday. Children decorated the altar and pews with laurel ropes, pine wreaths and sprays while Rev. Keith Munson led the congregation in singing carols.

Dale Wickberg held his four year old son, Neddie, overhead to place a silver star on the tree, then everyone came forward to hang an ornament from home on the branches.

In the weeks before Christmas, hand-made mittens, hats, and scarves will be added to the decorations on the tree.

Festivities will conclude Dec. 23, when everyone in the congregation will choose an ornament from the tree to bring home.

Children from the Church School will wrap the knit items,

OH CHRISTMAS TREE -- Placing an ornament on a Christmas tree at United First Parish Church, Quincy, is Mrs. Lillian Gunderson. Members of the congregation each contributed one of their own ornaments as part of the parish's "Greening of the Church" festivities.

tucking in some Christmas lollipops and candy canes, for delivery to The New England Home for Little Wanderers.

Tuesday Night Advent Services At Houghs Neck Congregational

The first in a series of Advent Services was held Tuesday night at Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

There was a large turn out to hear Rev. M. Alicia Corea lead the worship service.

Following the service, the congregation met in Fellowship Hall where the Social Action Committee led participants in making gifts for Long Island Hospital patients.

There will be two more Advent Services on Tuesday evenings at 7:30 p.m. at the Church, with refreshments served after the services.

A Candlelighting Service will be held Christmas Eve at 11 p.m., at which time new members join the church. If you cannot attend on Christmas Eve, contact one of the ministers at 479-2855.

Area residents are invited to worship with Houghs Neck Congregational Church during the holiday season.

Tsongas Aide To Hear Local Problems Dec. 12

Quincy residents will have a chance to give their advice and consent to their U.S. Senator on Wednesday, Dec. 12.

Sen. Paul Tsongas (D-Mass) won't be here but his staff representative, Shirley Simons, will be at City Hall from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. that day to listen to problems and questions from constituents.

No appointment is necessary. Ms. Simons has been on the road for the past eight months, visiting cities and towns and hearing comments on energy, the economy, Social Security, health care, education and the state of business.

Tsongas said the information he has received through Ms. Simons has provided him with insight needed to obtain a well-rounded picture of the concerns of constituents.

One of the issues most frequently raised, he said, is the energy situation.

During the week of Dec. 10, Tsongas will be chairing hearings on legislation he filed two weeks ago to protect borrowers from hidden interest penalties.

He is asking residents who suspect they have been charged excessive interest penalties upon prepayment or refinancing of a long-term personal loan to submit written testimony.

Tobin May Take Tax Dispute Back To Governor

Teachers Union hurt Quincy's case before the Department of Revenue.

"At first," he said, "we presented a plan to see if we could defer some of the problems and split the tax increase over two years to soften the blow to taxpayers."

"At one time they were giving it a favorable looksee. Then the teachers instituted the law suit and the press and TV focused on Quincy and our discussions took a drastic change."

"The first thing they said to us was 'What the hell is going on in Quincy?'"

Tobin spent a good part of last week exchanging charges with city Councillor Francis X. McCauley over the tax rate, or lack thereof.

McCauley touched off the giv and take when he announced his support of the "get tough" line the Department of Revenue was taking with the Tobin administration.

"It is high time the state challenged the figures being used to set up the city's tax rate," he said in a statement.

"Over the years the Department of Revenue literally rubberstamped the figures being submitted by the city for tax rate setting purposes with the result the city now finds itself in a financial crisis of substantial proportions."

McCauley said the city's financial problems started during the administration of Mayor Walter J. Hannon but "the one person most responsible for Quincy's financial problems today is the present Mayor."

"Tobin," he said, "as president of the City Council in 1976 had the option of supporting the efforts of then-Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia and Elmer F. Gerlund, chairman of the Board of Assessors, to straighten out Quincy's problems by setting a realistic tax rate."

"However, Tobin made a political football out of the tax rate issue for fiscal 1977 which resulted in a lost opportunity to restore the city's finances."

McCauley charged that the Mayor bonded the city's financial ills for $7.2 million in fiscal 1979, then set an election year tax rate with a decrease of 60 cents per thousand.

"The innocent victims of this chicanery are the city's property tax payers who face a large tax increase in a year in which they have suffered double digit inflation and the city employees, many of whom have not received a pay increase in almost two years," he said.

Tobin said he found it "absolutely appalling that he (McCauley) would defend the Department of Revenue for taking a strong stand against Quincy. He is supposed to defend the taxpayers of Quincy."

"McCauley's remarks go right to his credibility. He was an elected official while LaRaia was mayor but I didn't hear him criticize the corruption in the LaRaia administration or the $35 tax rate. He never opened his mouth."

"Now the spendthrift twins are attacking me," he added, referring to McCauley and LaRaia, who also leveled a blast at the Mayor in the pages of the Patriot Ledger.

"I expected the hatchet men to start on me after inauguration. But they've started already. Their true colors are showing now."

Tobin will be sworn in to a second term in the Mayor's office Wednesday, Jan. 2, and LaRaia, in the first step of a political comeback, will join the City Council as an at large member.

Nurses To Take Stand On Proposed Hospital Layoffs

"We're trying to be realistic," said Mrs. Kennedy. "But all I know is nurses are out looking for employment elsewhere. People are just disgusted. Morale at the hospital - and I'm not just talking about the nurses - is deplorable."

Gerry Shea, spokesman for Local 880, which represents about 150 hospital technicians, said his union unanimously rejected those two layoff proposals as "absolutely unacceptable". The results of that vote were reported to McParland and Hospital Personnel Director Harold Coose last Thursday, Shea said.

"We haven't heard a peep from the city since then," he said Tuesday. "That's a fine situation as far as I'm concerned."

"I think that the union members would be willing to look at a plan in which everybody worked, say, 39 hours a week instead of 40. In 16 or so weeks, I think the city would save a lot of money," Shea said.

According to DeFalco, the hospital's most recent weekly payroll was $279,000. Based on those figures, the four- or five-week layoff proposal would save the city $279,000 to $348,750, the one or two day furlough's either $55,800 or $111,600 and Shea's one-hour per week cutback proposal would save $111,600 over 16 weeks.

Dress-A-Doll Program

Richard J. Koch, executive director of the Koch Club, has announced that the Dress-A-Doll for Christmas program will be conducted again this year for the sixth year.

In the used toys donated to the Koch Club each year, a number of dolls arrive in need of cleaning, dressing and grooming. Volunteers have refurbished them for Christmas delivery to a girl whose parents cannot afford to provide the special gift.

Mrs. Simone Koch of 241 Newbury Ave., North Quincy, is coordinating the Program in the Quincy area while Mrs. Ginny Derringer of South Weymouth is coordinating the effort in the adjacent communities.

Those wishing to donate new or used dolls or others willing to spend time in refurbishing a used doll may contact Mrs. Koch or Mrs. Derringer for further information.

A number of women take the dolls during the off season and repair, clean and dress the gifts for presentation at Christmas.

Jewelry can be worn anywhere and be made out of anything. We are familiar with the very exotic, ruby worn in the belly button and a more mundane watch on the wrist. There are leather combs and pins for your hair and chains, leather and leathers sewn together for the waist. There are daffy pieces and those that are duller looking as well. There are expensive pieces such as multi-carat diamonds, to less expensive things such as simple bracelets. You can wear chains on your ankles or lace in your hair. It is all jewelry.

You'll find a wide selection of jewelry, in all price ranges, when you come to us at GRONO & CHRISTIE, INC., 536 Adams St., East Milton, 696-1490. Jewelry makes a fine gift for the holidays. 'Proposition 50-50'

2,500 Signatures For Teachers' Tax Petition

The Quincy Education Association reports over 2,500 signatures were collected in Quincy supporting "Proposition 50-50", which it says would increase state aid to education while limiting taxes.

The signatures supporting the petition, sponsored by the Massachusetts Teachers Association (MTA) were filed for certification with the city election office.

MTA affiliates, including the QEA, collected over 100,000 signatures statewide, according to the MTA.

If the MTA petition becomes law, the state's share of local education costs would jump from the current 30 percent to 50 percent by 1984.

"The MTA proposal limits taxes to an affordable level by limiting local and state taxes to whatever increase there might be in personal income, thus providing a braking mechanism," said Richard Russell, chairman of the local signature drive.

"Unlike Proposition 2½ and similar proposals, the MTA petition is a sensible alternative to escalating local and state taxes. Proposition 2½ is an extremist measure, which will decimate local education and other vital services, including police and fire protection," he said.

MTA will file all the signatures collected statewide on December 5 at the Secretary of State's office in Boston. After the signatures are approved, the matter goes to the state legislature for consideration.

Koch Club Christmas Charities In Full Swing

The Koch Club's 24th annual Christmas charity programs are now underway and members of the organization wishing to participate may donate canned goods or non-perishable foods to the 1979 project.

Items donated may be given to the officers of the respective Koch Club recreational units or the directors of each of the four city districts or the executive director.

Members wishing to donate money toward the purchase of turkeys or perishable food items provided in each Christmas basket may contact Co-Chairmen Thomas F. Nestor or Richard J. Koch at 241 Newbury Ave., North Quincy.

George G. Burke, former player-manager of the Koch Club basketball team and long time member of the organization, has provided $500 to be used in the Christmas programs.

John F. Hemphill of the Broad Meadows Junior High School, Advisor to the Spirit Committee, announced that over 1,400 items of canned goods were collected from the students for distribution to needy families.

Koch said employees of the Otis Elevator Co. in Quincy will again provide 60 Christmas gifts for distribution to boys and girls from needy families. Mrs. Alice Buchan has been coordinating the effort ever since the employees adopted the practice in lieu of an annual Christmas party.

Students at Woodward School will again provide Christmas paper and wrap 200 gifts for children as its holiday contribution to the Christmas program.

Koch will attend the Granite City Grange meeting when Mrs. Sadie Wesley and the members of the group will present dolls, gifts and food items to be used in the 1979 program.

Students at the Parker, Massachusetts Fields and Sacred Heart Schools are collecting new and used toys in good condition for delivery to churches and social service organizations in time for distribution at Christmas parties.

Brown Here Dec. 10 Chamber Barometer?

Jerry Brown, the California governor who for the second time has decided he'd rather be President, will be in the area Dec. 10 to tell you way.

Edmund G. Brown—if you prefer keeping it formal—will be the guest speaker at a South Shore Chamber of Commerce membership breakfast meeting at 7:44 a.m. at the Lantana, Randolph.

He's the fifth Presidential hopeful—first Democrat—landed by the Chamber as a speaker in its Election, 1980 series.

The others: Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, Tennessee Senator Howard Baker and Illinois Congressmen John Anderson and Philip Crane.

The Chamber, before the campaign is over, also hopes to bring in President Jimmy Carter (or Vice President Walter Mondale), Senator Edward Kennedy and former Texas Gov. John Connally.

Brown was elected California governor in 1974 and in 1976 launched a late bid for the Presidency. He defeated Carter in the Maryland, Rhode Island and California primaries but couldn't get up enough steam to catch early-bird Carter.

There are many Presidential polls being taken. The chamber's Presidential series, in a way, might be a sort of barometer, too.

Regan is the front-runner so far, if crowd-pulling means anything. He drew nearly 1,000 to a breakfast a few months ago—largest turnout ever for a Chamber function.

Baker is second with about 500 attracted to a recent luncheon. Anderson and Crane brought in about 200 each at a breakfast and luncheon, respectively. Crane, however, may have matched Reagan in the ovation department.

It'll be interesting to see what kind of a crowd Brown pulls.

SENATOR KENNEDY, incidentally, would seem to be at least four years ahead of schedule in his bid for the Presidency.

In a visit to The Quincy Sun in January, 1975 he was asked the inevitable question for the umpteenth time: Are you going to run for President in 1976?

"I believe," he replied, "that whoever is elected in 1976—and I believe it will be a Democrat—will be re-elected in 1980. It doesn't make sense to plan that far into the future. And, I'm interested in staying in the Senate."

He was right that a Democrat would be elected in 1976. Now, will he be right or wrong about that Democrat being re-elected in 1980?

AT THE RECENT Quincy Sons of Italy anniversary dinner, Humberto Cardinal Medeiros was presented a $2,000 check for his charity fund and a pair of gold cufflinks as a personal gift. The other night, two of the lodge members, Past Venerable Mario Salvatore and Sebastian Papagno attended a fund-raising reception at the Museum of Transportation for the Catholic Charities of Cambridge and Somerville.

Salvatore and Papagno went over to say hello to the Cardinal. And found him not only wearing the cufflinks but proudly showing them off. He indicated the cufflinks are his most expensive personal gift.

SPEAKING OF CARDINAL Medeiros, Mayor Arthur Tobin made him an honorary citizen of Quincy at that Sons of Italy dinner. Tobin received a letter from the Cardinal the other day, thanking him "most sincerely for your great kindness in proclaiming me an honorary citizen of the City of Quincy."

GEORGE RILEY, former city purchasing agent and executive secretary to Mayor Arthur Tobin, returned to private business a few weeks ago and is enjoying it. But he also has a new municipal job: a recent appointment to the Board of Registrars.

JOHN BLAKE, owner of Colony, Inc and active in South Shore Chamber affairs, is the new (96th) president of Clover Club of Boston, the Irish business and civic leaders group. Blake is a talented parody author and got off some good ones at the Sheraton Boston Hotel function.

Among the targets were Sen. Edward Kennedy, Gov. Edward King and President Jimmy Carter. The one for Carter, to the tune of "Hey, Look Me Over", went like this: "Hey, look me over, I'm not so bad. Don't write me off yet, I'm no passing fad. So don't hold your funds back. Fill up my cup Whenever you're down in the polls this far, The only way is up."

OBSERVATION via the New England Press Association: "In a democracy, you are free to choose your own form of government—blonde, brunette or redhead."

Being In Hot Water And Liking It

O'Connell Brothers Ahead

By TOM HENSHAW

"The O'Connells," confessed Joseph Fitzpatrick, the newly named state energy secretary, "are a little bit ahead of the state in solar energy."

"This," said Denis Hayes, director of the federal Solar Energy Research Institute, indicating the array of solar panels on the roof of 125 Granite St., "is the kind of project that will get us marching on the way to self-reliance in energy."

The occasion was the formal dedication of Granite Place, a 270-unit housing complex for the elderly and the handicapped that draws some 80 per cent of its domestic hot water needs from the sun.

It was built and is operated by the O'Connell brothers, William and Peter, who are best known in their home town of Quincy as builders but elsewhere as pioneers in solar energy, the practical kind, not the theoretical.

"Oh, we're well beyond the experimental stage in solar energy," said Peter O'Connell. "All the solar projects that we're involved in have to be cost effective. We're working now on one of the unique solar projects in the world."

That would be Hancock Court on School St. across from St. John's Church which will have an 850,000-gallon reservoir of water under the building to collect heat in the summer and store it for use in the winter.

"It's a project that should draw considerable attention from the solar industry," said Peter O'Connell, whose 10-year old company has been drawing attention from the solar industry since the great energy shortage of 1973-74.

Actually, the O'Connell brothers — or OCB, Inc., to give the company its new corporate name — dates back to about 1958 when 15-year-old Peter invested his savings as a paper boy in a parcel of land on Parker St.

"I was working at the newsstand outside City Hall," he recalls, "when the late

PETER O'CONNELL shows visiting experts the solar energy panels mounted on the roof of Granite Place. Left to right, Joseph S. Fitzpatrick, director of the State Office of Energy Resources, Northeast Solar Energy Center; O'Connell; and Denis Hayes, director of the Solar Energy Research Institute, Golden, Colo.

William C. Edwards of the Adams Temple and School Fund came out. He brought a paper and he said to me, 'Hey, they're selling some land up near your parents' house. You ought to buy it.'"

If Edwards was kidding the kid he didn't know his Peter O'Connell. The youngster went into City Hall, looked over the site plan, got Edwards to show him the lot and set a price at $450. Then he went home, got his folks approval and bought the land.

Eleven years later, when Peter was working as an engineer at General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard and Bill was in engineering management with Gillette in Boston, the $450 parcel of land at 30 Parker St. became the foundation of their company.

"We wanted to build a single family home," said Peter "but there was too much blasting involved so we were forced to develop the property into a six-family apartment house."

Financing was a problem. Peter was 26; Bill was 30 and neither had a track record. They went to 11 banks before the Dorchester Minut

She Wants Equal Treatment For Cheerleaders

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I have been a faithful reader of the Quincy Sun for the past several years and would like to applaud you on your fair and equal coverage of sporting events held at the two Quincy schools: North Quincy High School and Quincy High School.

There is, however, one sports-related subject that I feel is not treated equally. That subject is the sports cheerleaders. Every year the only photos of cheerleaders published in the Quincy Sun are those of the football cheerleaders. Perhaps you are unaware that there is a separate cheerleading squad for each sport, i.e. soccer cheerleaders, hockey cheerleaders, and basketball cheerleaders.

The girls on these squads go through the same tryouts, practices, and efforts as the football cheerleaders.

I feel that these girls deserve a bit of recognition for their dedication to cheering on the players of these other sports. So, why not run a photo of these cheerleaders too? Let's let these girls know that we support and appreciate them!

Susan M. Zimmerman
7 Newware Rd
Hyde Park, MA 02136

[Editor's Note: We will be using photos of some of these other cheerleaders in the near future, and thank Miss Zimmerman for calling this oversight to our attention.]

Points To Ponder

- Do you have the feeling that if you ran a business the way the owners of the Red Sox run theirs that you'd be soon broke?
- The expenses in the upcoming presidential primary in New Hampshire for all candidates could total over 3 million dollars — about the same amount I'd have to spend to get everything my kids want for Christmas.
- Speaking of Christmas — Don't know what to get the Governor for the holidays — how about a little lobster bisque or some crabmeat salad?
- Maybe someone should remind the Cambodian government that this is the international year of the child.
- One of the reasons the Shah was allowed in this country for medical treatment was that he's one of the few people in the world who can afford a hospital room.

was hardly fast track. The O'Connells kept their jobs at the Shipyard and Gillette. They hired subcontractors for the major work. Peter and Bill did odd jobs. They laid carpet at night, learning as they went along. They did the landscaping and the painting on weekends.

"The best worker was our unpaid father," says Peter. "He lived next door and he worked nights so he was able to keep an eye on things during the day and get in touch with us if there were any serious problems."

Still holding down fulltime jobs, they built four more buildings each a little more sophisticated and costly than the last.

"The secret of building up a new business is not having to live off the income, not being a drain on the business," says Peter O'Connell. "You just keep plowing the money back into the business. That's a policy we've carried through even now."

By the time they had finished their fifth project, the eight-story Hancock House at 45 School st. in 1973, it became obvious that the O'Connell Brothers Construction Co. was no longer a part-time job.

"We were into multi-million dollar financing," says Peter O'Connell. "We had outgrown the lending limits of many of our participating banks. Sagamore Towers in North Quincy (438 units, $10 million cost) was our first fulltime venture."

With Hancock Court, the Monarch office building in the State Street South complex and a luxury apartment development on the site of the old Quincy Adams Yacht Yard in Germantown, the O'Connells will be doing $20 million worth of construction in Quincy next year.

It was in 1973-74, when the gas lines were forming in the wake of the Arab oil embargo.

Burgin Tops McGrath By Biggest Margin

Mayor Thomas S. Burgin carried all 27 precincts in the city en route to a re-election victory over Thomas J. McGrath by a 3-1 margin, the largest majority ever in Quincy.

The vote was Burgin 15,605, McGrath 4,809.

Richard J. Barry, a political newcomer, scored a spectacular upset victory for one of three at-large seats on the City Council, turning back a comeback bid by former Councillor Leo E. Mullin.

The Council vote was Edward J. Sandberg 10,494, Barry 9,237, Avery W. Gilkerson 9,119, Mullin 8,766, Dr. Charles J. Herbert 6,486, and John M. MacLeod 6,465.

Beatrice S. Nichols, who was seeking re-election, and Hespel E. Sutherland won the School Committee race over L. Paul Marini and Mrs. Julia Frost Murphy.

Marini and Mrs. Murphy both had campaigned on the charge that the current School Committee merely acted as a rubber stamp for School Supt. James N. Muir.

EDISON TO VISIT YARD

Charles Edison, son of the late inventor and assistant secretary of the Navy, was planning a January visit to the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s Fore River shipyard to view new construction.

Meanwhile, the cruiser U. S. S. Vincennes returned to Fore River after a successful trial run and maneuvers in Massachusetts Bay under Capt. Joseph I. Kemp, veteran Fore River pilot.

'Y' TRIUMPHS IN OPENER

Eddie Dunn and Jimmy Collins led the way with nine points apiece as the Quincy YMCA basketball team opened its season with a 31-27 victory over the Lowell YMCA on the Quincy floor.

The Quincy lineup included: Eddie Dunn, Joe Winslip, forwards; Harold "Knobby" Kapsis, center; Jim McCollom, Jimmy Collins, Bob Meyer, guards.

HIGHWAY PROPOSED

The proposed Milton-Fore River Highway was stirring a debate whether it should follow Copeland St. or a corridor of undeveloped land between Copeland and Granite Sts. in South Quincy.

HANCOCK BURIAL

George Dawes Sawyer, grandson of Ibrahim Bartlett, first treasurer of the Granite Trust Co., was the first person in many years to be buried in the Hancock Cemetery. He died at age 74.

Housing Rehabilitation Grant Applications At Atlantic Center

Applications will be taken Dec. 10-12 from 9 a.m. to noon, at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center for the 1979 Housing Rehabilitation Grant Program.

Kathy Theriault, representing the City of Quincy, will be available to answer questions and take applications. The city is accepting the applications in cooperation with the Department of Housing and Community Development.

The grant is given to correct violations of the State Sanitary Code such as a leaky roof, broken windows, plumbing problems or insufficient electrical service.

Eligibility is restricted to owner-occupied homes, and specific income guidelines must be met.

For information on the programs and services offered at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, 245 Atlantic St., call their new number, 773-1380, ext. 328. Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Evenings or weekends call 773-1390.

Troubled Employees Workshop

The South Shore Employee Assistance Program is sponsoring an education workshop on troubled employees today (Thursday) at 9 a.m. at the Kemper Insurance Building, North Quincy.

According to the South Shore program, troubled employees can cost their employers 25% of annual wages due to personal problems.

The organization also stated that over $18 billion was lost last year due to increased hospitalization and medical expenses, on the job accidents and absenteeism due to alcohol abuse alone.

South Shore business and industries, town officials, public employees and personnel managers will be participating in the workshop.

For registration information, contact Paul Deignan, 472-2487.

Wollaston Man Displays Lore Of King Philip

Eugene Richards of Wollaston recalled the Indian warrior King Philip as the Massachusetts Society, Children of the American Revolution held their American Indian meeting in Bristol, R. I.

Richards, a member of the Old Colony Chapter, sons of the American Revolution, showed the chair from which King Philip presided at council meetings and the swamp where the Indian leader was killed.

Historical Society Plans Williamsburg Trip

The Quincy Historical Society is planning a pre-holiday fundraising trip to Colonial Williamsburg, Va., Friday to Sunday, Dec. 14-16.

Homes, shops and many public buildings in the Williamsburg historical area will be hung with wreaths, garlands and other adornments.

The illumination of the historic area will take place with a lighted candle in each window, and the Christmas exhibit at the Abby Aldrich Folk Art Center will be opened.

Carter's Grove Plantation, described as the most beautiful home in America, will be decorated and specially opened for the holidays.

Concerts and special programs will be held at the Governor's Palace and a candlelight organ recital will be given at Broton Parish.

Dinner and entertainment in the 18th century style will be served at the "Groaning Board".

The registration fee includes plane and bus fare, two nights lodging, Colonial Williamsburg admission fees, evening meals, taxes, tips and a tax deductible contribution to the Quincy Historical Society.

Montclair Men's Club Begins Holiday Activities

The Montclair Men's Club enters the holiday meeting and party season tonight (Thursday) with the regular monthly business meeting at 8:30 p.m. in the Clubhouse, 93 Holbrook Rd.

The Christmas dinner and dance will be held Saturday, Dec. 15, with cocktails at 6:30 p.m., a roast beef dinner at 7 p.m. and dancing from 8 p.m. to 12 midnight.

The Children's Christmas party will be held Sunday, Dec. 16, from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Call Chairman Dave Mercier at 328-1810 with gift information on the number of children, ages and boys or girls.

The 32nd annual New Year's Eve Party will be Monday, Dec. 31, with cocktails at 7:30 p.m., a buffet at 8 p.m. and dancing from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Reservations must be made by Saturday, Dec. 22.

Live Entertainment Returns

Wollaston Theatre Begins Amateur Talent Contest Sunday

An "Amateur Talent Contest", featuring the only live entertainment on a South Shore theatre stage, begins Sunday, Dec. 9, at 7:30 p.m. at the Wollaston Theatre, 14 Beale St.

The box office opens at 7 p.m. and the contest will feature a wide variety of entertainment produced and directed by Quincy showman, Edward J. Bennett.

All of the acts have been auditioned and the best talent has been selected, Bennett said. The opening show will feature the Pegge Parker Crystallettes dancing line.

Master of ceremonies will be a "mystery man". Music will be by "The Troubadour Trio".

The audience will be able to cast votes for their favorite act after the performance.

The next contest qualification trials will be held at the theatre Dec. 16. The contest will begin again Jan 6, and every Sunday thereafter until the finals when the winners will be chosen.

O'Connell Brothers Pioneer Solar Energy

that the O'Connells began moving into the energy field, particularly solar energy.

"We saw that there was an energy crisis coming," says Peter O'Connell. "After the first oil embargo we investigated possible solutions. We became convinced that we had to build buildings that were better insulated and better able to cope with increasing energy costs."

"During the shakeout in 1973-74 many developers went out of business. One of the main reasons was escalating operating costs. We investigated ways of cutting those costs. Solar energy seemed to be the most easily done. It has definitely had a favorable impact on our operating costs."

The just-finished Hancock House was retrofitted with solar panels on the roof end, says Peter, "it's saving us between $12,000 and $15,000 a year on the hot water system there."

"Almost everything we're doing now," he says, "including the office building, will have some solar contribution to the energy requirements."

In fact, the O'Connells commitment to renewable energy forms, solar and otherwise, is becoming so strong that they may be moving out of the building field and more and more into energy. Right now, they are exploring a water power project in western Massachusetts to provide electricity for a paper mill.

"Back in the late 50s and early 60s electricity became so economical that many of the low head hydrosites (that's small dams, in English) took out their generating capabilities," says O'Connell. "Now that electricity is so expensive, there is potential for going back to them and installing new equipment."

"When you're talking energy, you really have to go outside of Quincy. We don't have the land here. We've done some preliminary studies on the amount of land necessary to generate 500 megawatts of electricity, which is close to Pilgrim I (the nuclear plant in Plymouth) and it's quite a few square miles."

"But it's coming and we'd like to be involved in that. I think in the future we'll be doing less housing and more energy type of projects."

Dec. 11 At Granite Place

King, Stratton, Burke To Attend Fund Raiser For Camp Massasoit

Many past campers at Camp Massasoit, Plymouth, are planning to attend the "Good Scout Party," benefiting the camp to be held on Tuesday, Dec. 11.

Among former Scout campers in attendance will be Navy Captain Richard Stratton, former Vietnam POW, now serving as Deputy Superintendent of Operations at the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis.

A long time friend of Scouting, former Congressman James Burke will be recognized for his many years of service to Scouting as well as the 11th Congressional District. Governor Edward King will be on hand to bring greetings from the Commonwealth.

The party sponsored by the Massasoit Development Committee will be held in the Granite Place Recreation Hall, 125 Granite St., from 7 to 9 p.m. James R. McIntyre is special events chairman for the committee.

There will be continuing displays of Camp Massasoit activities during the evening and cocktails and hors d'oeuvres will be served. Proceeds from the event will finance improvements and renovations at the camp which has served Quincy Boy Scouts for over 50 years.

Tickets may be obtained from McIntyre, 23 Sturtevant Rd. ("73-5449), Henry Bertolon, 96 Connell St., (472-5996), Harold Crowley, 3 Flagg St., (471-6881) or any other member of the committee.

Other committee members are: General Chairman Richard J. Koch, William Barrett, Henry Bosworth, Edward J. Coyle, Buell and John Fuller, Joe Gelsomini, Nissie Grossman, Paul Harold, John Herbert, Joe Hurney, William A. O'Connell, Carmine D'Olympio, Robert Packer and Paul Ricca. Mayor Arthur Tobin is honorary chairman.

straightened out one way or another, union or non-union, open shop or not open shop."

Lydon asked D'Olympio if he was opposed to an open shop.

"By the very nature, as a union official, of course," said D'Olympio. "but I'm here tonight speaking for these people who are residents of Quincy and if we keep talking this way I'm going to have to decline to answer."

"The labor relations law being what it is, as far as legalities are concerned, I'll be glad to talk to you in private. But to stand here as a union official, I can't answer that question."

"But it's a fact of life."

Lydon persisted, "that the open shop is in the country, is it not?"

"It sure is," said D'Olympio. "Has Campanelli talked to you regarding an open shop," asked Lydon.

"They have," replied D'Olympio.

"Will you continue an understanding with Campanelli and do you feel an open shop arrangement may be the ultimate..."

Councillor James A. Sheets interrupted with a point of order that the hearing was now getting into the substance of negotiations which were to resume Friday.

"My basic concern is that we may get to the point here publicly where we will prejudice what is going to be done Friday," said Sheets.

Lydon, who is chairman of the Council's Finance Committee, said he hopes to have a vote on final approval of the project, including urban development bonds, by Dec. 17.

Mayor Tobin has called the Campanelli-Stop and Shop project "the leading catalyst for the development of downtown Quincy."

Proponents of the plan who appeared at the hearing included Robert Kenney, the city's consultant, and Edward Coyle, president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

Deputy Sheriff's Association Christmas Party Dec. 7

The Norfolk County Honorary Deputy Sheriffs' Association will hold its annual Christmas party dinner-dance Friday Dec. 7, 6 p.m.

to midnight at Kings Hill Hall, Braintree.

Cocktails will be served at 6 p.m. Dinner will be at 7 p.m. There will be continuous music for dancing.

SPEND THIS WINTER IN CALIFORNIA

You'll love the climate in California. It's cool and quiet during the day, with a refreshing breeze of a menu that includes soups, salads, burgers and quiche, served from 11:30 to 3:00. Things start to warm up around 4:00, when complimentary hot hors d'oeuvres are served at your table 'til 7:00. Then it really gets hot in California, with music and dancing. But if things get too hot for you on the dance floor, you can step into the lounge and recharge your energy. Watch the waterfall, or do a little California dreamin' with the driftwood. Then get back out and get down with the best music around.

Throw a party in California. We'll help you in every aspect of planning a party for your business or friends. Our expert staff, kitchen and cocktail facilities, dynamic sound system, dance floor and California decor will contribute to a memorable affair.

Amorosino Optimistic As Quincy Set For Opener

By TOM SULLIVAN

Quincy's basketball teams under Coach Joe Amorosino, have made the Eastern Mass. tournaments three of the last four years and the Presidents' coach feels this year's club has the potential to qualify once again.

The opening game is next Tuesday at home at 8 p.m. when B.C. High visits the Vo-Tech gym.

Last season Quincy finished in a tie for second place in the Suburban League with a 14-6 record but lost to Duffee of Fall River in the first round of the tournament.

"We have a fine nucleus of veterans this season and I feel we should be up with the leaders," Amorosino said.

Leading the returnees are 6-4 senior Brian Donovan, Rich Finnegan, 6-1 senior; Steve Priscella, 6-3 junior; Stan Benson, 6-3 senior; Scott MacDonald, 5-9 senior, and Andy Carrera, 5-8 senior.

"Donovan, who attended one of the country's top basketball schools last summer, and Carrera will be starting for the third year, while Finnegan, Benson and MacDonald have started off and on for two years," Amorosino said.

Donovan was the number two scorer and rebounder in the Suburban League last season and Priscella, though only a sophomore, was Quincy's number two scorer behind Donovan.

Kurt MacDonald, 6-4 junior; Dan Flannery, 5-7 senior, and P. J. Fay, 5-9 junior, are up from the junior varsity and look good.

Others fighting it out for varsity positions are Steve Marsters, 6-1 senior; Shawn Burns, 6-1 junior; Gary DiNardo, 5-9 junior; Dan Whyte, 6-0 junior, and Alvin Memmolo, 6-1 junior.

Amorosino will keep 12 players on the varsity. The two who do not make it will play with the javees and will be brought up to the varsity from time to time.

"Finnegan and Benson are our most improved players," the Quincy coach said. "Finnegan is the quickest player in our program, is strong and a good jumper. He and Benson took part in a weight training program during the summer and it has paid off.

"Donovan made the league first all-star team as a junior and he should have an outstanding season. Carrera and MacDonald are two tough guards who should be ready to face all opposition.

"Both are deceptively fast, are good shooters and fine defensive players. Carrera has started more than 30 games in his career and has been through the good times and the bad."

Cambridge Rindge & Latin, the defending champion, is the class of the league, but Amorosino expects Newton, Brockton, North Quincy and Weymouth North to be strong and Weymouth South to be much improved.

"This league has good balance and, with the teams knocking each other off, a team with six losses could again finish second and make the tournament," Amorosino added.

The Presidents scrimmaged Boston English and Burlington last week and the coach was pleased with their showing in both. English and Burlington are among the schoolboy powers.

The Presidents will play at Brookline Dec. 14 and at Newton North the 21st in league games, then will face Valley Stream High School of Long Island, N.Y.

"This will be a preliminary game to the Boston University-Charleston University game and will be played at 6:30 at Boston University's Case Center," Amorosino said. "We are looking forward to it, as Valley Stream is annually a state tournament entry."

Quincy will take part in a Christmas Tournament Dec. 26 and 29 at Hingham. The Presidents will play Hull at 7 o'clock and Weymouth North will meet Hingham the first night with the championship and consolation games the next night.

Doug McFarlane is back as junior varsity coach and also helping again as a volunteer assistant is John Franceschini.

QJC Wins 4th Straight

Paul Donoghue of Quincy sparked the undefeated Quincy Junior College basketball team to its third and fourth straight wins last week as first-year coach Brian Buckley has the Jaguars flying.

QJC last night (Wednesday) sought its fifth in a row against Emerson. The Jaguars will host Rhode Island Jr. College Monday at 7:30 at the Vo-Tech gym and Tuesday will play at Wentworth at 4.

Last Monday's scheduled game with Hellenic was shifted to next Thursday, Dec. 13. The Alumni game will be played Friday, Dec. 28.

Donoghue exploded for 31 points last Saturday to pace the Jaguars to an 85-75 win over North Shore Community College. Ed

Richard added 20 points.

QJC led by as many as 22 points but North Shore tied it up in the second half. Quincy hit on 12 of its last 15 foul shots as it capitalized on North Shore's press.

Earlier in the week QJC had little trouble downing Bunker Hill Community College, 84-57.

Donoghue again led the scoring with 19 points, followed by Bob Evans with 18, Richard with 12, Kevin Penney and Paul Waters with 11 each and Jim Holleran with nine.

The Jaguars employed both a man-to-man defense and an effective 2-1-2 zone in the victory. Holleran led the defensive charge.

Elks Win 2, Bow To Natick

The Quincy Elks Pee Wee A team defeated Canton, 5-3, in a South Shore Conference game as Robbie Reidy scored two goals and Sean Barry, John Reinhardt and Richard Horrigan one each.

Mark Abboud, Barry, Horrigan, Mike Hays, Bobby Kane and Ted Hohman had assists.

Quincy also edged Hyde Park, 1-0, on Horrigan's goal. Barry and Tom McGrath assisted. Greg McGlame, McGrath, David Cook and Peter Furtado played excellent defense.

Quincy lost to a powerful Natick team, 4-0, last Sunday despite the fantastic play of goalies Robbie Flannery and Tim Collins.

Quincy Wrestling Team Faces Big Title Challenge

Quincy High's wrestling team enjoyed its finest season over a year ago but Coach Carmen Mariano feels the Presidents face a monumental challenge this year to repeat as Suburban League and/or South Sectional champions.

Quincy, following scrimmages against Scituate and Dedham, will open its season next Wednesday against Catholic Memorial at 6 p.m. at the Vo-Tech gym.

"We graduated 11 seniors from last year's outstanding team, but we do have a number of current seniors returning and many of them have a good deal of varsity experience," Mariano said.

Leading the returnees are Co-Captains Martin Doyle and Paul Orlando at 121 and 128 pounds respectively, John Fitzgerald, Joe Irving and John O'Leary, who give the team plenty of experience and a depth at 134.

Also back for their third time around are Todd Veale and Joe Callahan at 147 pounds. Other third-year men Jim Graham (169), Jeff Heath (187) and Geoff Caffisch and Michael Salton (heavyweights) will make substantial contributions.

"Behind these upperclassmen is the best crop of juniors I've ever coached," Mariano said.

They include John Herald (140), Al DiVincentis (148), Mike Monahan (158), Jim Silcox (158), Greg Oriola (140), John Madden (121), Ed Ryan (107), Ed Mackey (169), Joe Souza (128), and Don Barnard (114), all back for their second season.

"Taken collectively, they already compare with the strongest group of seniors that have graduated in years past," the Quincy coach pointed out.

"The speed at which these juniors develop, as well as the amount of stability and leadership our seniors are able to provide, will determine our level of success this season."

Mariano expressed his pleasure at the progress being shown by the first-year wrestlers, seniors Leon Frazier and Jack Graham and juniors Kevin McCormick and Joe McClelland, who join underclassmen Mark Picot, Jim Mullin, Steve Ricci, Eric Swanson, Peter Connolly, Allen Costigliola, Bill Eastwick, Dave Silcox, Jerry McSharry, John Carvello and Steve Klaiman.

"It is most difficult to make any predictions in light of such strong competition as statewide powers Brockton, Waltham, Newton North, Billerica, Milford, Lowell, Weymouth, Springfield Classical and Westfield," Mariano said. "However, if this fine group of young men continues to exhibit the commitment and dedication which have been shown in our practice sessions and scrimmages then they deserve whatever success may be in store for them."

Mariano again has Tim Cahill, a former Quincy standout, and Joe Streadwick, veteran YMVA coach, as his assistants.

She finished the 4-mile course in 30:28, placing 152nd in the field. The Quincy Y is one of 11 United Way agencies in Quincy.

Hockey Jamboree Tuneup Saturday

The Quincy public schools will sponsor a hockey jamboree Saturday starting at 6:40 p.m. at the Quincy Youth Arena, involving Quincy, North Quincy, Braintree, Milton, Hingham and Cohasset.

At 8:15 North Quincy will do the same against Milton and Cohasset.

North will open its season next Wednesday with a non-league game against Boston English at Boston Arena at 3:30. Saturday, Dec. 15, the Raiders will play Barnstable in another non-leaguer at 7:30 at the Kennedy Rink in Barnstable.

Quincy will play Noble & Greenough next Friday, Dec. 14, and Thayer Academy next Saturday, the 15th, both non-league games at Noble & Greenough rink in Dedham.

Both Quincy and North will open their Suburban League seasons Wednesday, Dec. 19, North hosting Weymouth South at 6:40 at the Quincy Youth Arena and Quincy facing Newton at the same time at the Watertown Rink.

Brennan, Leone Top Scorers For Quincy, North

Tom Brennan, senior halfback who gained 1168 yards rushing this fall, led the Quincy football team in scoring with 66 points on 11 touchdowns.

Jack Leone, junior end, paced North Quincy with 34 points, coming on two touchdowns, 10 of 11 extra points and four field goals.

Although it was believed Brennan set a Quincy rushing record for a season, it was discovered that Nick Malvesti, former three-sport star and Morrisette Legion athletic officer, had gained 1176 yards back in 1934.

Despite Bulldogs' Claim

Hannah Club 'Official' Champs

Although the Quincy Bulldogs consider themselves the unofficial champions of the Boston Senior Park Football League, Al Austin, commissioner of Boston Parks and Recreation, said last week the "official position" is that the first place Hannah Club of Dorchester is the champion.

The dispute arose when the Park League banned the second place Shelbourne Cobras from the playoffs due to an alleged altercation with an official.

The Cobras went to court and it was ruled the playoffs could not go on without the Roxbury team.

The Hannah Club, Bulldogs, Charlestown T. T. and Chippewas agreed to go on with the playoffs without the league's sanction.

In the opening round of the unofficial playoffs, the Hannah Club defeated the Chippewas and the Bulldogs topped Charlestown.

When the Hannah Club failed to appear for the scheduled finals with the Bulldogs, the first-year Quincy team claimed the unofficial championship,

The day following the opening games, according to Hannah Coach Jack Curran, no field could be found for the Hannah-Quincy game. Tuesday night the Hannah Club was going to practice on a Boston Park and Recreation field but was told it couldn't because of the court injunction.

Curran said that Wednesday at 5 p.m. the park department declared Hannah the city champion. "I told Bob (DeVoe, the Bulldogs' coach) we weren't going to play any more games." The teams had to put up $260 each, according to Curran.

DeVoe said he had obtained a permit at 4 p.m. Wednesday (Nov. 21) to play at Kelley Field in Hyde Park. "We got the permits and the officials were notified," DeVoe said. "The Hannah Club knew well in advance. Curran told me, 'If we show up, we show up, if we don't, we don't.'"

"They didn't and we are the unofficial champs the way I look at it. We had a verbal contract."

One who feels the Hannah Club should be the champion is Mrs. Eugene Murray, whose son is one of 15 Quincy players on the Hannah squad.

"It would be a shame after the way these boys played all year if they weren't declared the champions," she said. "They didn't find out until two days before the scheduled game with Quincy that the Hyde Park field had been obtained."

So, there you have it. According to the Bulldogs, they are the unofficial champs, according to Hannah Coach Curran and the Park department, the Hannah Club is the official champ.

Junior High Basketball Central, Sterling Open With Wins

By PETE ZOIA

The Quincy Junior High basketball program got underway last Thursday with Central and Sterling getting big wins.

Coach Mike Casali's Central team overwhelmed Broad Meadows, 41-22, and Coach Jim Snodgrass and his Sterling boys also got off to a fast start with a 50-16 victory over Point.

Starting slowly, only scoring four points to Broad Meadows' seven in the first period, Central came on strong with 12 points while holding its opponent to four during the second quarter.

Bob Mudge, with two baskets and two foul shots, and John Pourland sinking two layups enabled Central to take a 16-11 halftime lead.

The second half was all Central, as it broke fast for 25 more points to the losers' 11.

Mudge, with 14 points, Pourland with seven and Gary Brown and Steve Racette with six each, were the high men for Central.

Playing well for Coach Paul Picarski's losers were Mark Prescott with eight, Mike Williams with six and Paul Medice with five.

The Central Junior Varsity team also had an easy time with a 41-9 victory.

Jack Bolister scored seven points and Bob McElaney, Nunzio Carboni, Jamie Paz, Steven Warren, Dan Morris and Dan McDonald had four points each for the winners, while Tony Cascarano with two baskets and one four marker was high man for Broad Meadows jayvees.

Sterling scored 18 points to Point's zero in the first period as Kevin Riggs had a hot hand garnering eight points, seven in a row, with Chris Draicchio adding six.

Great defensive play by Sterling held Point to three points at halftime, while the winners continued to blitz to a 33-3 lead.

Point improved during the second half, scoring 13 and holding the Sterling reserves to 17 points.

High scorer for Sterling in the third and fourth quarters was Justin Oberst with nine points. For Point, the high scorers were Rick Coscia with six points and Sal Lorezano with four points.

Riggs with 12 and Draicchio with eight were the other big scorers for Sterling.

The jayvee tussle was all Sterling, 28-3. Paul Kenney with six points was high for Sterling and Tom Travers sank the only basket for Point, which was held scoreless the entire second half.

Atlantic was idle last week but opened at Point Tuesday.

Today (Thursday) Central plays at Atlantic and Broad Meadows visits Point. Next Tuesday it will be Central at Sterling and Atlantic at Broad Meadows.

Shea Rink Open For New Skating Season

Metropolitan District Commissioner Guy A. Carbone announces that the 1979-80 ice skating season is underway with the opening of enclosed rinks.

They include the Shea Rink in West Quincy, the Unit Rink in Milton and the Connell Rink in Weymouth.

Admission to all rinks is 25 cents for those under 18 and senior citizens and 50 cents for adults. Public, private and parochial schools in the MDC Parks District may use the rinks free of charge from 9 a.m. to noon on school days.

Adults accompanying children under 10 to weekday morning and afternoon sessions will also be admitted free of charge.

Rinks will be closed Thanksgiving and Christmas. On Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve they will close at noon and on New Year's Day the rinks will reopen at 2 p.m.

For more information, call the MDC Public Information Office at 727-5215.

Correction

In The Quincy Sun's article last week on junior high girls' soccer, Dave Meehan was the coach.

Sterling coach. Actually, John Perkins is Sterling's first-year coach. Meehan coached last year.

Sterling Undefeated Football Champs

Sterling Junior High's ninth grade football team finished with a perfect (8-0) record and won the city championship under Coach John Gostanian.

The powerful Sterling team record scored 180 points while holding the opposition to 24. It had four shutouts and held the opposition to one touchdown in the other four games.

Sterling swept Broad Meadows, 12-6 and 22-6; Point, 28-0 and 30-0; Atlantic, 24-0 and 14-0, and Central, 30-6 and 20-6.

Mark Righini was the outstanding scorer with 90 points on 12 touchdowns and nine two-point conversions.

Justin Obert scored 32 points on four touchdowns and four conversions, Kevin Riggs had 26 points on four touchdowns and one conversion, Brian Callahan 14 points on two touchdowns and a conversion, Glen Oriola 12 points on two touchdowns and Dennis Obert had one touchdown.

KEVIN RIGGS, whose two brothers played at Quincy High, sacks quarterback in a recent Sterling ninth grade game. Sterling finished unbeaten and was the city champ.

PAUL GILBODY and Richard Gustin of Sterling's ninth grade football team move in on Quincy Point Jr. High quarterback as Sterling moved toward the city title.

Laracy 2nd In Breaststroke

Ten-year-old Bob Laracy of the Quincy Swim Club continued to be impressive in last weekend's 25th anniversary AAU International meet sponsored by the Greenwald Memorial AAU Swim Team at Mt. Wachusett College's new $4.5 million athletic facility in Gardiner.

Swimmers from 32 AAU teams competed in the meet in which young Laracy finished second in the 100-yard breaststroke, third in the 100-yard butterfly, third in the 200-yard freestyle and fifth in the 100-yard freestyle.

School Committee Newspaper Ads Run Into Criticism

Full-page newspaper advertisements purchased by the school committee last month have caused dissension among at least two board members.

The ads, titled "A Report To The Citizens Of Quincy From The Quincy School Committee Negotiating Team" included a comparison of salaries and length of workdays for Quincy teachers and 16 neighboring communities. They also included the School Committee's proposal for conducting "reduction in force" layoffs made necessary by the system's declining enrollment.

The two ads, published Nov. 19 in the Patriot Ledger and Nov. 21 in the Quincy Sun, cost $1,700 and $232 respectively.

Board member John Sullivan who says the ads were not authorized by the entire committee, calls them "confusing" and in "bad taste" and doesn't want the city to pay for them.

Sullivan said he will "publicly propose" at the next meeting that "the persons responsible for the placement of those ads shall pay the expense and no public funds be used for them."

A motion by Sullivan that the ads not be paid for until an explanation is presented was tabled at the request of board member Joan Picard.

Sullivan's motion was seconded by member Christopher Kennedy, who said he also was not consulted on the ads. Sullivan and Kennedy, who have relatives employed as teachers in Quincy, normally do not take part in or vote on negotiations with the QEA to avoid possible conflict of interest.

Board member Francis Anselmo has also publicly criticized placement of the ads.

The ads appeared over the name of "Patricia Toland, Vice-Chairwoman, Quincy School Committee." Mrs. Toland declined to comment on the ads, noting that a gag rule on matters involving the negotiations has been imposed by Higgins.

The matter will be discussed at the board's Dec. 12 meeting, she added.

Triples Floor Space

Tags Opens New Store In Downtown

A grand opening was held Sunday to celebrate the new location of Tag's Discount Furniture and Sleep Shop, at 1486 Hancock St., Quincy Center, formerly the old Hancock Bank building.

The move from 1568 Hancock St., occupied by Tag's for the last 10 years, will triple the store's floor space, from 2000 to 6000 square feet, according to owners Burt and Helen Cook. The increased space will allow Tag's to introduce new features, like dinette sets and a gift shop, as well as allowing the store to increase its variety of living room furniture, beds, lamps and other items, Cook said.

Among the local officials attending was Sen. Paul Harold, who presented the Cooks with a citation from the State Senate, for their "continued confidence in the future of Quincy Center."

85 Cent Telephone Dividend

The Board of Directors of New England Telephone today has increased the quarterly dividend from 79 cents to 85 cents per share, payable Jan. 2, to share owners of record on Dec. 10, 1979.

New England Telephone serves more than 3.6 million customers in its five-state area, which includes all of New England except Connecticut. It has some 44,000 share owners other than AT&T which owns about 86 percent of the stock.

Almost half of the share owners live in New England and similarly about half own less than 100 shares of stock.

Quincy Woman Wins Cruise In Claus Gelotte Contest

Mrs. Catherine L. Donovan, of Furnace Ave., Quincy, has won a one-week windjammer cruise for two in the Caribbean in a contest sponsored by the four Claus Gelotte Stores.

Mrs. Donovan submitted her entry coupon at the Quincy Claus Gelotte, and it was drawn as the first prize at the drawing in Cambridge.

Mrs. Donovan says she hasn't decided yet when to take the cruise, but was very surprised and pleased at winning the contest.

"It's the first thing I ever won," she said.

BayBank Norfolk Increases Pension Benefits

John F. Graham, chairman of BayBank Norfolk County Trust Company announces an increase in pension benefits for most retirees of the Company.

The upward adjustment amounts to a maximum of 39 percent in benefits for qualifying ex-employees who retired prior to 1973, with a decreasing scale for those who retired since 1973 but prior to 1979.

This increase in benefits was mandated by the continued high rate of inflation that has eroded the purchasing power of all citizens, said Graham. It is an effort on the part of the Company to see that its faithful long-term employees can continue to enjoy their retirement years without fear of economic conditions beyond their control.

The adjustments were made possible by the public's broad acceptance of the Bank's services and products all designed to provide fair value at reasonable prices, he said.

Atty. Margaret Sears Mead Appointed To Sun Life Law Dept

Stay Alive!

By Jack Silverstein

The Key To Long Life

Experts on longevity have always believed that the key to long life depended on an inherited tendency to live long. That the surest way to a long life was to have two parents and four grandparents whose lifespan totaled 500 years.

However, in a recent study made in the geriatric division of Duke Medical School on 500 volunteers, the results may have thrown this theory out the window. It concluded that the most important factor affecting longevity is work and satisfaction with work. If a person, therefore, is happy in his work, or way of life, and keeps busy after retirement, he will tend to live long. Other important factors were found to be happiness, good physical functioning and abstinence from smoking.

Curiously, however, the study found no correlation between a person's length of life and his family's history of longevity.

1. Chapter 24, Article VII Parking and Loading Requirements, Section 73 Location and Layout of Parking Facilities

Subsection [2] be amended by striking said subsection [2] and inserting in lieu thereof the following new subsection [2]:

Off-street parking facilities shall be under the same ownership as the building or buildings which they serve; or if the parking facility is under separate ownership, the owner[s] of the building or buildings must show that there is adequate parking to their building or buildings and that they have contractual agreements with the owner[s] of the parking facility to provide the building or buildings with adequate parking and said agreement is for a period of not less than 50 years.

2. Article VII Parking and Loading Requirements, Section 73 Location and Layout of Parking Facilities, Paragraph 1 [d].

In paragraph 1 [d] after the words "Business B" delete the words "and C" and add the following sentence:

In a Business C district, the required parking facilities may be provided on lots any part of which is five hundred [500] feet away from the building to be served.

so that the new paragraph 1 [d] reads as follows:
[d] In a Business B district, the required parking facilities may be provided on lots any part of which is three hundred [300] feet away from the building to be served. In a Business C district, the required parking facilities may be provided on lots any part of which is five hundred [500] feet away from the building to be served.

Teachers Meet On Stalled Negotiations

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Quincy teachers were scheduled to meet before school Wednesday to decide what, if any, action, to take on apparently stalled contract negotiations.

What took place at the meeting would depend on the results of Tuesday night's negotiating session, said Mary Curtin, chief negotiator for the Quincy Education Association, which represents the city's 1,000 teachers. School Committee negotiators and QEA representatives were scheduled to meet for the sixth time Tuesday with state-appointed fact-finder John Higgins.

Higgins has imposed a gag order, barring participants from discussing the progress of the negotiations.

Mrs. Curtin would not say what sort of motion the QEA's leadership would ask the members to vote on Wednesday, saying that would not be decided until Tuesday's outcome was known.

Rank-and-file teachers may introduce their own motion instructing the leadership on how to proceed, she said.

"They may ask for more picketing, or more leafletting, they may ask for other kinds of things. They may ask us to go back to the negotiating table, they may ask us to burn the table. I really don't know," she added.

The unusual pre-school meeting, scheduled for 7 a.m. at the George F. Ryan VFW Post, was called because "a lot of our members are extremely concerned with the progress of the negotiations," she said.

When asked if actions taken at the meeting might affect that day's school activities, she said, "I would not presume that it would."

Although negotiators on both sides of the fence are refusing to comment on where the talks stand, money may be the final stumbling block to an agreement.

Attorney Brian Riley of the Massachusetts Teachers Association reportedly said in court last Thursday that all issues have been settled except for the teachers' raise.

When questioned on that statement the following day, Riley said, "What I actually said was the primary issue was money."

He later added, though, "I forget exactly what I did say. . . . One probably could get that impression (that money was the only remaining issue)."

School Committee and QEA representatives declined to comment on Riley's remarks.

Riley was in court last week to argue on behalf of the QEA's request for an injunction preventing Quincy's tax rate from being set until Mayor Arthur John agrees to fund raises for the city's teachers.

The QEA's original request for that injunction was denied, as was an appeal of the denial.

Tobin: 'They Shoved It Down Our Throat' Tax Rate Up $24.60!

By TOM HENSHAW

The Quincy tax rate for fiscal 1980 has been set at $221.20, an increase of $24.60, and Chief Assessor John P. Comer said it would have been higher but for the intercession of Gov. Edward J. King.

Comer, flanked by City Auditor Charles L. Shea and Assessors Patricia J. Ceriani and John A. Belcastro, announced the rate in a hastily called press conference in his office at City Hall at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

"I am not happy with it," said Comer.

"But there is nothing we can do about it," added Shea.

Comer said he and not Mayor Arthur H. Tobin was announcing the rate because "the responsibility for the tax rate lies with the assessors and under the new tax cap legislation I want to make sure we follow the mandate to the letter."

Comer said he called the Mayor and told him he was going to hold a news conference because he didn't feel they could hold back the tax rate any longer.

"The Mayor was not happy with the rate," said Comer, "but he felt it was the best offer we could get from the state."

Asked for comment by The Sun, Tobin said that the state (Department of Revenue) "shoved the tax rate down our throat. It's just another example of bureaucratic red tape. We'll be vindicated in the long run."

He said the city was holding out for a $20 tax increase, based on its anticipated revenue figures.

"It's a terrible way they handled the city of Quincy," he said. "It's their tax rate, not ours. Without the intercession of the governor it not only could have been higher but we could have ended up in court."

Comer said personal property tax bills will go out this week and real estate tax bills, which have to be set on a computer, will be mailed in the next two weeks.

Taxpayers have 30 days in which to pay the first installment but must pay before the end of the year if they wish to deduct property taxes from the income tax forms.

Comer said the state Department of Revenue had been holding out for weeks for a $30.50 tax rate hike based on their interpretation of estimated receipts.

"We went to see the governor," said Comer. "We asked him to intercede and review the figures with us and help the city get a tax rate the citizens could live with."

"I was adamant to the governor that in no way would I recommend a $30.50 tax increase. I said I'd go to court first. My integrity was on the line that the figures were right and the estimates would be met."

Comer said the governor promised to get back to him but when the assessor left the office at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, he still had not heard.

"I knew the governor was going to be in Quincy at the Camp Massasoit party," he said. "I made it a point to be there to find out if

Close Vote Seen On Teachers Contract Ratification

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Quincy's teachers were scheduled to meet yesterday (Wednesday) to vote thumbs up or down on a tentative agreement reached with the School Committee.

Quincy Education Association President Robert Garner said he expected the city's 1,000 teachers to ratify the agreement by the required two-thirds margin - but not much more than that.

"I think it's going to pass, but I think it's going to be close," Garner said.

Approval by the teachers is only the first of three hurdles to implementation of the three-year contract. The second is approval by a majority of the School Committee - which School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Crendon says could come as soon as January night.

The final step is approval, by Mayor Arthur Tobin, of a supplementary budget request for the school department funding the teachers' and other contracts. Tobin has said for several months he will not approve the request and that any raises for school employees must come from the department's existing $33 million budget.

Although negotiators on both sides have refused to comment on the agreement, the major points are:

- Raises of five, five and seven percent during the three years of the contract. According to the School Committee, Quincy teachers now earn between $10,985 and a maximum of $21,750 after six years.

- Teachers' work hours are extended to include 10 minutes before school starts and 10 minutes after it ends. The previous contract had required teachers to be in school only during class hours - which was 29 hours per week for elementary teachers and 32.5 hours for others.

- Reduction in force (RIF) layoffs, made necessary by declining enrollments, will be conducted on a seniority basis at the elementary level. At higher levels, the teachers' certification and teaching specialties, as well as seniority, will also be taken into account.

A slight increase in the stipend paid elementary school assistant principals is reportedly the only other significant change in the contract.

Cost of the contract is estimated at over $1.1 million for fiscal 1979-80.

Dr. Crendon said the contract would be on the School Committee agenda for its Dec. 12 meeting. The committee could then decide whether to vote on the deal immediately or table it, he said.

Garner said he expected some dissent from teachers at Wednesday's meeting, scheduled

Sirand Withdraws Arcade Request

Owners of the Strand Theater, Quincy Sq., have withdrawn their request from the Quincy License Board for a "Backstage Arcade" at the theater.

In a letter read by city Clerk John Gillis at Tuesday's License Board meeting, co-owner Joseph O'Connor said the application for the family fun center was being withdrawn after "considerable thought."

Last week, O'Connor had said that the game room possibility was being explored as an alternative to selling the theater.

He said that the theater was a big place to keep going and that the owners have been trying to sell it for years, with no success.

The arcade was proposed to help the financially troubled theater.

At Chamber Breakfast

Brown: Mobilize Capital, Human Energy To Win War Against Inflation

By TOM HENSHAW

Gov. Edmund G. (Jerry) Brown Jr. (D-Calif) is urging Americans to consume less so they'll enjoy it more in the long run.

Brown, who is a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, was the fifth White House hopeful -- and the first Democrat -- to appear before the South Shore Chamber of Commerce Monday at breakfast in the Lantana in Randolph.

"I have built my campaign around a theme for reindustrializing America so that its businessmen can compete with anyone on this planet," he said, a declaration that was guaranteed to make very Chamber of Commerce-type sit up and listen.

Brown sees the great American dilemma of the 1980's as the fact that too much is spent on consumer goods and services and not enough is invested, consequently America is losing its fight against inflation and for world markets.

"We have to mobilize capital and human energy to shift the present balance between consumption and investment so that society is prepared to save and invest more and obviously that will come out of current consumption," he said. "There is no other way."

"Unfortunately, we are not prepared as a government or as a people to face up to that. We run chronic deficits. We monetize those deficits. We expand the monetary supply with the resulting inflation but without the corresponding investment."

"We have been focusing on the consumer sector with the hope that that somehow translates into investment to increase our productive capacity. It hasn't."

Brown said he believes that President Carter has failed to discern the American dilemma and may be a victim of the "rhetoric of the past that imprisons much of our public discourse."

"The present doctrines that inspire our economic thinking in Washington are outdated," he said. "They are difficult to change because it is politically unpleasant to tell people that the decade ahead requires discipline, frugality and an orientation away from consumption."

"What may have worked in 1962 does not necessarily work in 1980."

In the 1950's, said Brown, South Korea was being protected from North Korea, Germany and Japan were just getting to their feet after World War II and Red China was completely out of the world market.

"Right now," he said,

May Need $1.6 Million Bond

Campanelli, Unions Near Agreement On Downtown Building

By TOM HENSHAW

Campanelli Quincy Enterprises and the Building Trades Council of Quincy are close to agreement on the labor standards that will prevail during construction of $10 million Campanelli-Stop and Shop office building in downtown Quincy.

The City Council's Downtown Development Committee also learned Monday night that a $3.79 million federal grant is not going to be enough to build as originally planned a 680-space parking garage over the MBTA tracks adjacent to the building.

The Rev. Bedros Baharian, citywide development coordinator, said the garage will be put out to bid on the basis of 559 parking spaces and later the Council may be asked to approve a bond issue for as much as $1.6 million for a maximum 754 spaces.

One contradiction that was not fully explained at the hearing was how the city was going to lease up to 600 parking space to Campanelli and replace the 115 taken from the Della Chiesa Parking Area for the building when the bid would call for only 559.

The hearing started with a clash between Robert DeMarco of Campanelli and Carmine D'Olimpio of the Building Trades Council over a statement read by DeMarco which said that the company and the unions were "very close to finalizing a definitive agreement."

D'Olimpio said he was told that the meeting was not open to statements and he had not had an opportunity to see DeMarco's statement, which he felt committed the Building Trades Council to understandings without its knowledge.

After a brief consultation with DeMarco, however, D'Olimpio agreed that the statement was "substantially correct. We are working toward a solution. We are making progress."

DeMarco's statement said that Campanelli and the Building Trades Council "have reached an understanding to construct our proposed Quincy Square office building on a 100 per cent union basis. We believe we are very close at this time to finalizing such an agreement."

The agreement, said DeMarco, "materially increases" the cost of the project and the prime tenant, Stop and Shop, "is reviewing this project in order to determine how these increased costs will affect their commitment to this project."

He said he hoped to have some indication of Stop & Shop's feelings in a matter of days.

The Council got its first look at some of the leasing arrangements that are being worked out between the city and the MBTA on air

Rather Have Work But:

Special Unemployment Benefits Like Christmas Gift At Shipyard

It came like a gift at Christmas — meat and potatoes for the table but nothing to put under the tree.

"They love it," said Earl Christian, executive secretary of Shipbuilders Local 5. "They've been praying for it."

"Of course, we'd rather have the work but we don't have the work so this'll take some of the curse off anyway."

Christian was describing the reaction of most members of Local 5 to the news that the Department of Labor had ruled some 5,000 workers at the General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard would be eligible for special unemployment benefits if they are laid off.

It is expected that a high percentage of those employed at the shipyard may be laid off between now and next August when the last two liquefied natural gas (LNG) tankers are due to slide down the ways.

The program, called Trade Adjustment Assistance, can mean up to $250 a week for a year to laid off workers, including money spent seeking new work, relocating or retraining for a new trade.

Workers at the General Dynamics Shipyard had been ruled ineligible for the program last October but Marvin M.

Fooks, director of the Office of Trade Adjustment in the Labor Department, said the decision was reconsidered.

"Apparently it was a faulty investigation on our part," he said.

Christian said that to be eligible under the program, a worker must have been employed at wages of at least $30 a week for 26 of the 52 weeks preceding his or her layoff.

The layoff had to come after Aug. 7, 1979, the impact date, and before Aug. 7, 1982, the date the program expires.

"A lot of the new hires will not be

A little bit of practical Victoriana for your home-

With winter just ahead, what is more practical than a working oil lamp?

Despite all the hard work of public utility companies to keep electric service flowing without interruption, nature at times conspires by the use of wind and sleet to knock out lights.

The most practical item for emergency lighting under such circumstances is an old fashioned oil lamp. Oil lamps can be a thing of beauty for your home--just as they were during the Victorian period.

The Quincy Cooperative Bank is now offering oil lamps of unique and unusual beauty for your home. Whether in use or not, these lamps will enhance the decor of your home. The bases are custom created for us by New England Potters Guild, Inc., the same folks who brought you the unusually beautiful flower pots when our bank offered these promotional items some months ago.

Come in and see our lamps with their pretty pottery bases. Pick the color and form you like best for your home. The deal is very simple: *deposit $200 or more into a New or Existing savings account and you can buy a lamp for $5.00. (Only one lamp per account)

THIS OFFER IS GOOD WHILE SUPPLIES LAST.

*NOW accounts are not included in this promotion.

Many people have a problem storing their jewelry. Chains get tangled, earring pairs separated or rings get misplaced. Women sometimes find it difficult to get dressed in the morning because all of their jewelry is in disarray. The solution is to purchase a jewelry case appropriated for their jewelry. If one has many small pieces, get a case with a lot of small compartments. For several sets of earrings get an earring tree. Make sure necklaces have room to lay flat without being tangled.

Make sure to see us at GRONO & CHRISTIE, INC., 536 Adams St., East Milton, 696-1490 for all your holiday gift needs. We have been serving the community for over 35 years and are always happy to help you make the right selection for your needs. Gold chains, Bulova, Seiko, Timex, Omega, Tissot and Speldel watches, estate pocket watches, diamonds and other gems are carried. Don't forget to stop next store at "Something Special" for fine lines of greeting cards and gifts. Open: Mon. thru Sat. 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.

City Club Presents Equipment To Long Island Hospital Patients

The Quincy City Club held its fifth annual Christmas breakfast Sunday at Sherry's, Southern Artery, with 60 of its 90 members present and participating in the Holiday Charitable Allocations for 1979.

Richard J. Koch commended members for their personal contributions and commitments to assist in charitable, civic and community projects.

Koch stressed the importance of the City Club's Special Project, the caring and sharing with those persons confined to institutions, hospitals and homes during the holiday season.

In cooperation with the Long Island Hospital therapeutic activities director, items chosen and provided for the use and enjoyment of patients include a camera that will take instant snapshots for immediate development so that patients may have their pictures taken with relatives and friends visiting at the holiday season. Albums are kept by the activities committee of patient parties and programs.

A 40 inch by 40 inch portable movie screen for the 16-mm hospital projector will also be donated and several bus trips will be sponsored for the mobile patients including a trip to the recently opened Kennedy Memorial Library in Dorchester.

The City Club in the past five years has donated several color TV's for use in the wards where patients are bedridden, colored drapes and striped to brighten up several of the drab wards and a number of other items for those confined.

Among the gifts donated by the organization will be blankets and pajamas to the Faxon House Detoxification Center in Quincy, another of the annually committed projects.

Personal gifts will again be purchased and delivered to the Boston and Medfield State Hospitals for the mentally ill for distribution to confined patients.

For the fifth year, gifts will be donated to individuals participating in the annual Christmas party for the Retarded sponsored by the Quincy Recreation Department.

Dr. Allan Yacubian, chairman of the City Club Social Service Committee, informed the members that the five wheelchairs purchased by the organization at its first community service project five years ago are still being used and are reassigned as they become available.

Donald E. Conboy, chairman of the Christmas Charity Ways and Means Committee, informed the group that $1,600 had been contributed to date by 70 members to fund the Christmas 1979 programs.

Conboy said that it had been the most successful program in the past five years.

The City Club meets quarterly. Next breakfast meeting will be in February.

Chartered Sept. 12, 1974, the organization has a maximum membership of 100 with the main purpose to be of public service aiding those in need of help and assistance because of illness and confinement.

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL'S Winner in the Century III Leaders Scholarship competition is Mark Hamel shown with certificate of recognition he received. Mark is eligible to compete for statewide scholarships of up to $1,500, or a national scholarship of $10,000. With him are guidance counselor, Richard J. Pessin, (left) and Principal Lloyd H. Hill. (Nancy Sullivan Photo)

Mark Hamel Wins Leaders Scholarship Competition

Mark Hamel of Spring St., Houghs Neck, has won the Century III Leaders Scholarship competition at Quincy High School, announced Principal Lloyd Hill.

The 17-year-old senior is eligible to compete with other high school seniors throughout Massachusetts for two $1,500 scholarships and two $500 scholarships.

A $10,000 national scholarship will be awarded in a conference of state winners in historic Colonial Williamsburg, VA.

Hamel triumphed in the local phase of the Century III Leaders program, a scholarship competition which emphasizes the future concerns of America.

Students were judged on the basis of their leadership abilities, community involvement, and score on a current events examination.

To compete at the state level, Hamel must now write a brief projection outlining what he thinks is one of America's future challenges and how it should be met.

Runner-up in the competition at Quincy High School was Carolyn Donovan of Rockland St., Houghs Neck.

Hamel is the son of Armand and Marilyn Hamel.

The two top Massachusetts winners will receive an all-expense-paid trip to the fourth annual Century III National Leadership Seminar in Williamsburg, March 7-10, 1980, to participate in seminars on current issues.

In previous years, speakers at these seminars were such notables as news commentator Howard K. Smith, architect futurist Buckminster Fuller, and anthropologist Rene Dubos.

The program is administered by the National Association of Secondary School Principals and funded by Shell Oil Company.

Citgo Station Granted Gasoline Storage Permits For Ambulances

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

Owners of a Citgo Station at 1011-1015 Hancock St., have been granted permits for storage of 200 gallons of gasoline, above ground, in tanks of cars enabling them to base two Bay State Ambulances on the site.

South Shore Realty Trust was granted the permits at Tuesday's License Board meeting on the condition that ambulance drivers refrain from using the siren and lights in the residential area.

Residents of the nearby Executive House Apartments had voiced their concern about the ambulances at the Nov. 20 License Board meeting when existing gasoline storage licenses were transferred from the old owners to South Shore Realty.

Moya Baldwin, a representative of the tenants, told the board at this week's meeting that concerns had been worked out.

In other action, the board:

- Granted a request from Demetrios Katsoulis for a common victualer license for the 1100 Restaurant, 382 Quincy Ave. The license had been held by Peter Saxonia. The new license was granted with the stipulations that the emergency lights be fixed and the kitchen floor remodeled.

- Granted a request from Rogers Jewelry, 1402 Hancock St., for a pawnbroker's license.
- Continued until Jan. 8, a request from Williams Auto Electric, 53 Intervale St., for a Motor II License.

- Granted a request for a machine license for Quincy Youth Arena Inc., 60 Murphy Memorial Dr. Seven pin ball machines will be installed.

- Continued for one month a request from Murna H. Easter for a common victualer license for Kevin's Lunch, 723 Washington St.

- Granted a second hand license to Mrs. Judith Abbott and Sally Wolfe for a shop, "The Frog Pond" at 210 Washington St. No clothing or hub caps are to be sold, and the sign must have the approval of the Building Inspector.

- Granted Thomas G. Connelly Equipment Co., 29 Seammell St., a Motor II License to buy, sell, exchange second hand motor vehicles. Connelly said that the front building has been sold and will be taken down, and that he will occupy the rear building.

The next License Board meeting will be Jan. 8.

the governor had any information. "I had an opportunity to talk to him as a longtime friend. I told him how far apart we were and he agreed to a compromise. The figures $24.60 are about the middle of the road.

"So we acquiesced to the state and set the tax rate but I'm not happy about it."

City Treasurer Robert Foy said his office would begin work yesterday (Wednesday) to get the bills out as soon as possible. The first personal property bills could be mailed as soon as Wednesday, he said. Real estate bills should be out by Dec. 21, he added.

Regardless of when property owners receive their bills, they will have 30 days after the last bill is mailed to pay up, Foy said.

eligible," said Christian. "And some of the old timers who had a spell of sickness and didn't work 26 of the 52 weeks could lose out.

"How many, I don't know, but quite a few have called us up about it. They don't think it's fair."

He said about 3,500 members of Local 5 are employed at the shipyard right now.

Cong. Brian J. Donnelly (D-Dorchester), who announced the Labor Department's decision Monday, said it was especially gratifying to hear of the award during the Christmas season.

"It's not going to put several thousand employees back to work," he said, "only the Navy can do that at this point, but at least it will ease the economic burden within many households in Massachusetts this Christmas."

General Dynamics recently lost out to a San Diego shipyard for a Navy contract despite the fact that its bid was some $10 million below the West Coast yard.

Right now the yard has contracts to build two oil barges and an agreement to repair a naval vessel.

"They're bidding on all kinds of work," said Christian. "But the Trade Adjustment Assistance is the only thing that's sure."

for 3 p.m. at the Wollaston Theater. A gag order requested by fact-finder John Higgins prevented him from discussing what objections teachers might have to the contract, Garner said.

A meeting of teachers opposed to the present settlement drew about 60 teachers to Quincy High School Monday afternoon. Quincy High science teacher Janet Springfield, who moderated the meeting, would not comment on what was discussed at the closed session.

Garner would only say:

"I think it's very much a compromise contract. I guess I'm pleased it's over, but it's a far cry from what we really wanted. Given the state of the economy and the position of the School Committee, it was the best package we could get."

Cardinal To Visit

Abp Williams

Humberto Cardinal Medeiros, will visit Archbishop Williams High School, Braintree, Thursday, Dec. 20.

Cardinal Medeiros will celebrate the liturgy with the school community at 9 a.m. and then meet with student council members.

The visit climaxes the School's Advent and pre-Christmas activities which began with individual class liturgies and continued with a number of projects including a clothing drive for Pine Street Inn, Boston.

Christmas Nativity Program Sunday At First Parish Church

The Christmas Festival Committee of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association will sponsor the annual Christmas Nativity Program Sunday at 6:30 p.m. at United First Parish Church, Quincy Sq.

Rev. Keith Munson and the Church of the Presidents will host the program entitled "Christmas Nativity in Word and Song". A number of churches throughout the city will participate in the ecumenical services.

Rev. Thomas C. Garrett, Sacred Heart Church, North Quincy, will be master of ceremonies for the program. Highlight will be 120 first and second grade students of Sacred Heart School in North Quincy presenting "A Nativity Pageant in Song".

Other clergy participating in this year's program will be Rev. Darrell Urban, pastor, Lutheran Church of the Good Shepherd, Rev. Keith Lehman, pastor, Atlantic Methodist Church and Most Rev. Daniel Hart, Roman Catholic Bishop of the Southern Region.

The adult choir of the Atlantic Methodist Church will participate under the direction of George Wilkins and will be joined by the adult choir of Sacred Heart Church directed by James Connors.

The program will culminate with the placing of the Christ Child figure in the manger at Hancock Cemetery through the street.

Following the program, refreshments will be served in the Church of the Presidents parish hall.

The Nativity program will complete the Christmas Festival activities for 1979 which included the Christmas lighting ceremony, Santa's arrival, the Christmas parade and Santa mailbox distribution.

The following boys and girls from Sacred Heart School will participate in the Christmas Pageant Sunday evening.

ARCHBISHOP FULTON SHEEN (center) met with Rev. John McMahon (left) and Msgr. John Mullarkey before the Mass concelebrated at St. Mary's Church by the three on Feb. 15, 1975.

At St. Mary's

Abp. Fulton Sheen's Quincy Visit Recalled

The death this week of Archbishop Fulton Sheen stirred memories for several hundreds who heard or met the famed preacher during his last, and apparently only, visit to Quincy in 1975.

Archbishop Sheen came to St. Mary's Church in West Quincy Feb. 15, 1975 to concelebrate a Mass honoring the 350th anniversary of the city's founding and St. Mary's 135th anniversary. The other concelebrants were Rev. John McMahon, pastor of St. Mary's and Msgr. John Mullarkey.

About 600 persons heard Archbishop Sheen give the sermon at the Saturday afternoon Mass, including numerous state and city officials. Later, the "television preacher" mingled with about 250 persons in a reception in the church hall. He charmed all who came within talking distance, Rev. McMahon recalls, adding "he was a very personable, very outgoing man."

Archbishop Sheen, 87, died Sunday in his New York City home.

The Messina Family

If they possibly overlooked thanking anyone, would like to thank all their friends, relatives and neighbors who were so very kind and thoughtful to them in their recent loss of their beloved son David. The donations to the scholarship fund in his memory have been overwhelming. A sincere Thank You to each and every one of you and a special Thank You to our Pastor Fr. Cornelius Heery for his comforting.

Quincy Woman Wins $300 Gift Certificate In QCBPA Promotion

Mrs. Catherine Miethe of 228 Whitwell St., Quincy Center was a double winner in the recent Christmas shopping promotion sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

Mrs. Miethe won both the grand prize, a $300 gift certificate plus a $25 certificate from Jason's Luggage and Music Shop. Twenty-four other area residents also won $25 certificates awarded by QCBPA businesses participating in the "Sock Full of Savings" promotion.

"I think it was very, very nice," said Mrs. Miethe after being informed of the drawing. A clerk in the Town of Norwood's Department of Public Works, she lives with her daughter, Lynda Bryan and her granddaughter, Karen, 12.

Mrs. Miethe's winning coupon was deposited at Jason's Luggage and Music Shop, 1514 Hancock St.

The winners were drawn from among coupons from a Nov. 28 supplement to The Quincy Sun and The Patriot Ledger, clipped and deposited with participating winners.

Winners of the $25 gift

Brown Says He Would Wage War On Inflation

"South Korea is a major competitor in steel. Next year it will be automobiles. Japan can make a ton of steel cleaner and more efficiently than any steel mill in the United States. Send it here and sell it cheaper."

"We have seen what 13 million people can do in Taiwan and we have seen what 40 million people can do in South Korea. Just imagine what 800 million people in China will be able to do after we have exchanged the best of our technology."

Brown called for "tremendous cooperation between business and labor and government," similar to that in Germany and Japan, where the old adversary relationships have been replaced by a spirit of cooperation.

"I see the role of government as providing leadership in convincing the American people to accept the challenge," he said. "As the first step I have advocated a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution."

"We have to take some more drastic action to bring inflation under control. It takes more than rhetoric. It takes more than pious promises. The restraint of a constitutional amendment would give an expression of the political will of this country to live within its means."

rights over the tracks and between the city and Campanelli on the land and the garage.

Planning Director James Lydon said the original garage proposal called for 680 parking spaces.

"We were faced with the possibility that the amounts of money we received from the federal government was not enough to construct the 680 spaces," he said. "It appears the base bid will go out for 559 spaces with the possibility of an add-on."

The Rev. Baharian said the Planning Department was hurrying to get the bid in before Feb. 1.

"We have to have a bid in for this garage that we can live with and sign a contract before our deadline with HUD runs out for the grant," he said. "Then, if we need more money, we will have some breathing space."

"We feel fairly confident that we're going to get that bid (for 559 spaces) within the $3.79 million grant. We have to sign a contract in 30 days to hold the bid and get the money. Then we will be able to discuss with you whether we will add spaces."

Baharian said the specifications for the garage footing will be sufficient for 754 spaces so that two floors of parking can be added anytime after the building is built. Planning Assistant Judy Cullen said the cost of additions would be about $800,000 a floor, or $1.6 million for two floors, and she indicated that, instead of a bond, there might be "urban initiative" money available from the Urban Mass Transit Administration.

Councillor Joanne Condon noted that the proposed garage lease with Campanelli said the garage would have 620 spaces and that, over a period of time, Campanelli could lease up to 600 of them at a rate of $15 a space per year.

"This document indicates we're going to build a garage of not less than 620 parking spaces and we're talking about bidding 559," she said. "It also indicates that Campanelli has the option to have 600 of those spaces, leaving the city with as few as 20."

"I would suggest we should be talking in terms of the city at least guaranteeing replacement of the 115 spaces we're taking from the Della Chiesa Parking Area to build the building."

Lydon said it was possible that "we would seriously consider renegotiating the numbers in the lease," and Baharian added that Campanelli "may end up not needing more than 300 spaces."

Condon also noted that after 15 years Campanelli has the option of buying the city-owned land under the building at a fair market value and that it would continue getting its Chapter 121A tax break after the sale of the land.

Robert Tuchman, attorney for Campanelli, assured her that "at the moment we're paying the price as if we are owning the land and we're paying $300,000 a year for the ground lease. We are already paying those taxes."

Baharian said the value of the land on today's market was about $680,000.

DeMarco said Campanelli is trying to work out agreements with the business occupants of five stores at the corner of Hancock and Granite Sts. to move into the new building. Their stores will be taken by eminent domain as part of the project.

"We have talked with a majority of the tenants that occupy the existing buildings," said DeMarco. "We feel sure that we're going to be able to get together with the Bay Bank."

"We are talking with Claus Gelotte, Connie's Restaurant and the Presidential Cooperative Bank. We're not exactly sure where those discussions are going to lead but we're fairly optimistic that we will be able to accommodate them."

The fifth store is the Book Mark bookstore.

The Kelly Blitzkrieg

In a quiet behind-the-scenes blitzkrieg, Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly has become a political power in Quincy.

When the City Council presidency was up for grabs, just a couple weeks ago, Kelly smiled and said he thought he could put the votes together.

Most observers smiled politely back when they heard him. Others laughed. The latter thought the odds were better for Arthur Tobin and Joseph LaRaia collaborating on a book than Kelly becoming council president.

But Kelly is no novice in the putting-votes-together department. Two years ago he helped line up the necessary support for Quinn. The latter, this year, had little chance of being re-elected. The feeling was it should be someone else's turn.

So Kelly went to work for himself, swiftly and effectively. He had one big advantage over some of the others mentioned as contenders: he's not a prospective mayoral candidate for 1981.

Those in the council who already are privately twirling their hats for a toss into the mayoral ring two years from now didn't want another potential mayoral candidate as council president.

The council presidency is still considered a springboard to the mayor's office although there have been a number of mayors who never got to wield the gavel.

James Sheets, Frank McCauley, Daniel Raymondi are considered potential contenders in 1981 along with LaRaia who is returning to the City Council after losing the mayor's office to Tobin.

Regardless of how Kelly did it, he did it. And he did it faster than most council presidents have been able to. In the past the campaigning has often gone right down to the wire.

It'll be interesting to see how Kelly runs the council meetings with three, four or five mayoral hopefuls to contend with.

INAUGURATION DAY, incidentally, will be Monday, Jan. 7, according to City Clerk John Gillis. That is the latest possible date.

Inauguration Day is traditionally the first Monday in January, unless that Monday is a holiday. Then it is the following day (Tuesday). In 1980, Jan. 1 falls on a Tuesday thus moving the inauguration to Monday, Jan. 7. Confusing?

GEORGE BUSH, who seems to be gaining momentum as a GOP Presidential hopeful, will be the next speaker in the South Shore Chamber of Commerce series. He's scheduled for a 7:44 a.m. membership breakfast Jan. 16 at Val's, Braintree. The Chamber is also close to lining up John Connally for an appearance.

FORMER GOVERNOR, John Volpe told newsmen at Eastern Nazarene College last week where he was presented its Distinguished Statesman Award that he is backing John Connally for President.

"I'm very definitely supporting John Connally," he said. "He's a forceful speaker and a forceful leader who's not afraid to make a decision."

Volpe said he first met the Texan in 1961, when Secretary of the Navy Connally came to Quincy to commission a ship at the then-Fore River Shipyard. Volpe and Connally later served together in President Nixon's cabinet, as secretaries of Transportation and the Treasury, respectively.

But Connally is only one of several Republicans that Volpe could support.

"There are four or five excellent candidates," he said, naming Connally, Ronald Reagan, Phillip Crane and George Bush as being among Republicans he expects to run strongly.

"Some people say that's bad, but I think the competition is good, as long as they're not tearing each other apart. And I don't think they will."

"The Republican Party can definitely put a man in the White House, and I think they're going to."

Volpe's former lieutenant governor, Elliot Richardson, has been mentioned as a possible presidential or vice-presidential candidate.

Richardson is now serving as the U. S. delegate to the U.N. — sponsored International Law of the Sea conference. This long-running conference is aimed at hammering out agreements on territorial and fishing laws and the like.

"I don't think you'd see him making any plans on the national scene until an agreement is reached," Volpe said. "Once you start a job, you finish it."

$30,000 Needed For Renovations

Friends, Former Scouts R

Camp Massasoit in Plymouth, a "home away from home" for Quincy Boy Scouts for 50 years, is now in a state of disuse and disrepair.

That distresses former Scouts and others, who are in the midst of a fund-raising campaign to build a new future for the camp.

The Massasoit Development Committee is in the process of trying to raise $30,000 to cover repairs and renovations that would turn Massasoit into a year-round camp for Quincy Scouts. The 250-acre camp, founded in 1927, was used as a summer camp until 1967. Since then, it has been used for only sporadic weekend camping and almost no money has been spent on upkeep, according to Harold Crowley, secretary to the development committee.

Already about $6,000 has been raised from various sources, Crowley said. Other funds will be solicited by a canister campaign, cocktail party, a commemorative booklet, and contributions from fraternal and civic groups, he said.

The ultimate aim is to modernize the camp and make it suitable for year-round camping, Crowley said. This includes expenses of insulating and installing electricity in summer cabins, upgrading the water system and converting many of the other buildings to new uses.

The $30,000 figure for the renovations is actually a fraction of the true cost, Crowley said, since much of the work will be done by volunteers.

Beside Crowley, General Chairman Richard J. Koch, and Honorary Chairman Mayor Arthur Tobin, the members of the Massasoit Development Committee are:

Henry Bertolon, Henry Bosworth, Edward J. Coyle, Buell Fuller, John Fuller, Joseph Gelsomini, Nissie Grossman, Sen. Paul Harold, John Herbert, Joseph Hurney, Jr., James McIntyre, William O'Connell, Carmine D'Olimpio, Robert Packer and Paul Ricca.

The committee is also looking for persons willing to donate the following items:

Building materials — lumber [2x4, 2x6, 1x6], roofing shingles, felt roofing paper, insulation, floor tile and cement,

Commends St. Ann's Students For Cleaning Cemetery

Editor, The Quincy Sun: of enthusiastic young people
On Saturday, Nov. 17 a group from St. Ann's Church,

Wollaston directed their time to rake leaves and clean the historic Hancock Cemetery adjacent to City Hall.

Points To Ponder

- The real problem with common sense is that it's not all that common.
- With the energy situation what it is, some adults might consider being bad this Christmas so that Santa will fill their stockings with coal.
- With the economic situation the way it is, when an executive says to his secretary: "Get me my broker," she responds, "Stock or pawn?"
- The two most frightening phrases for Mom and Dad Santas on Christmas Eve — Batteries not included and Assembly required.
- Have you ever noticed that only other people have minor operations?

This confraternity of Christian Doctrine students was aided by Vincent Laroue, teachers and parents of the students. This outpouring of generosity is refreshing, especially during these turbulent times and their kindness should be commended by the public.

The Cemetery Board of Managers and Department Personnel join with me in thanking them for a job well done.

Lawrence Strout, owner of the Winfield House and the Presidents City Motel, has been elected president of the city's newly established Committee on Strout, whose family has been involved in the tourist business for 40 years, said the committee plans to develop programs involving publicity, funding, and bus and walking tours.

Mrs. Doris Oberg, first vice president of the Quincy Historical Society, was elected secretary of the Committee on Tourism.

City Councillors Vote Selves First Raise In 30 Years

Members of the City Council voted to boost their salaries from $500 to $1,000 and give the Mayor a raise from $5,000 to $6,000 a year, effective Jan. 1, 1948.

Councillor Clifton H. Baker pointed out that it was the first raise for those offices in 30 years.

"It's about time the councillors received enough money to pay for their expenses," said Councillor Frank N. Orcuit.

"Our take home pay has been $8 a week and that hardly covers the tickets we are called upon to buy. This raise will just about cover our donations."

ARCHTTECT RETAINED

Frank C. Hendry, executive secretary of the Quincy Housing Authority, announced that Boston architect Edward J. Shields had been retained to design a $400,000 veterans housing project in West Quincy.

The project, with four-room apartments that would rent for less than $50 a month, was to be built on land on West St. which was owned by Police Officer James J. Sullivan.

PEANUTS BANNED

The Licensing Board watched a demonstration of a new peanut vending machine, noted its possibilities for gambling and then ordered it banned from Quincy barrooms.

The customer put a penny in the slot and pulled a lever, activating a disc with six horses that continued spinning until one of the trusty steeds emerged the winner.

And one or two peanuts popped out.

QUINCY BOWS IN GARDEN

Jack Granville and Al Pasquale had seven points each but the Quincy High School basketball team lost to Lynn English 34-27 prior to the Boston Celtics-Providence Steamroller game in Boston Garden.

BETHEHEM ASKS ABATEMENT

The Bethlehem Steel Co. was prepared to go to the State Appellate Tax Board seeking a $5 million reduction in the assessed valuation of its Fore River Shipyard for 1946.

The city stood to lose $150,000 in revenue if the abatement was obtained.

'Elderly As Consumers'

Brownell To Meet With Clay St. Residents

Rep. Thomas F. Brownell (D. Quincy) will meet with the residents of Tobin Towers, 80 Clay St., Wollaston, today (Thursday) at 2 p.m. to discuss issues of political participation and the "elderly as consumers."

The meeting is the fourth in a series of elderly constituent meetings to be held at the senior citizen complexes in Brownell's district.

Brownell will explain legislation affecting senior citizens which became law last year, as well as identify bills which he has filed for the upcoming year. By explaining the unique Massachusetts provision of the free right to petition for legislation by all citizens, Brownell hopes to elicit ideas for future legislation.

Each senior citizen will also receive a "consumer packet." Included in the packet is information regarding credit rates, health insurance, the generic drug law, rip-off schemes, and an "Elder's Directory" of important telephone numbers.

McGrath Urges Tide Gates Repair

City Councillor Stephen J. McGrath has urged the MDC to repair as quickly as possible the tide gates in the area of Quincy Shore Drive and Furnace Brook Parkway.

McGrath noted that the Conservation Commission recently expressed concern that the gates, which are under MDC supervision, be tended to before winter weather sets in.

Glendon Sullivan Passes Exams At Kentucky School of Medicine

Glendon E. Sullivan, son of Rev. and Mrs. Kenneth E. Sullivan, 33 Albion Rd., Wollaston, has recently passed his first exams at the School of Medicine, University of Kentucky in Lexington.

A 1972 graduate of North Quincy High School, he receives his Bachelor of Science degree, with distinction, from McGill University, Montreal, Canada, in 1976. Subsequently, he has been engaged as a bio-medical researcher, for a year at the British Columbia Cancer Foundation, Vancouver, and the last two years at the Medical Center of the University of Kentucky.

Baron Hugo To Entertain At Fenno House Party Sunday

The annual Fenno House Christmas party will be held Sunday, Dec. 16, in the common room of the complex, 540 Hancock St., Wollaston.

A social hour will start at 5:30 p.m., followed by a catered dinner at 6:30 p.m.

Entertainment will be by Baron Hugo and his orchestra.

Volpe Sees Hope For 'Peaceful' Hostage Settlement

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Like most politicians, John Volpe is writing his memoirs now, and it's a shame Horatio Alger isn't around to act as co-author.

Then again, even he might regard the former governor's 'rags to riches' tale as a little too unbelievable.

"When you graduate from this fine institution, even if you are sweeping floors, sweep them better than they have ever been swept before," he told several hundred students at Eastern Nazarene College in Wollaston last week. "Somebody will notice and you will be rewarded."

Volpe was at ENC to receive an "Outstanding Statesmanship" award from the college, honoring his "contributions to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the United States."

Volpe, the son of Italian immigrants, began his own career carrying bricks and mortar for a bricklayer about 50 years ago. When he ended his public career in 1977, he had been elected governor three times and served as Secretary of Transportation and ambassador to Italy.

Volpe made his own fortune in the construction business. But he readily admits that he founded the Volpe Construction Co. in 1933 because "I realized that nobody else was going to hire me."

Another construction company he had worked for two years folded in 1932, at the lowest point of the depression.

"I spent a year selling shirts to my friends and relatives. Later, I sold housedresses and other apparel and made all of $10 or $15 a week."

"I decided that, since nobody else would hire me, I would start my own business. I guess you could say I had more nerve than brains."

The company was so successful that, when Volpe was asked to become state commissioner of public works in 1953, he didn't want to. He was earning a salary six or seven times the $15,000 the commissioner drew back then.

But, the way he tells it, his public spirit and desire for good government won out. Recent Congressional hearings revealing links between organized crime and public officials had disturbed him, he says.

"I began to think about what kind of country I wanted my daughter and son and grandchildren to grow up in."

After seven years as DPW commissioner, he decided to run for governor in 1960. The decision was greeted with enthusiasm by many state Republicans, but not by Mrs. Volpe.

"My wife cried for two nights when I told her I was going to run for governor. She said—and these are her words not mine—that I was too clean and too honest to get involved in politics."

She came around eventually though, and Volpe was elected three times—in 1960, 1962 and 1966. Midway through that third term, in 1968, Richard Nixon asked him to serve as Secretary of Transportation. Volpe said yes.

When Nixon won reelection in 1972, he had another surprise in store for Volpe—an invitation for him to serve as ambassador to Italy. By this time, Mrs. Volpe's attitude toward public life had changed.

"She said 'John, run right back to the White House and say yes before he changes his mind'. She wanted to get out of Washington that badly," he says. "Even then, there were storm clouds gathering over the city."

So, the Volpes weathered the Watergate and Jerry Ford years at the American embassy in Rome, surrounded by seven acres of parkland and a run-down bocce court.

"Can you imagine an American going back to Italy and having to rebuild the bocce courts?" he asks.

Volpe resigned in 1977 and is now devoting his time once again to the construction company and a book on his experiences.

Still an observer of the public scene, he is saddened by the hostage-taking in Iran, but thinks a peaceful settlement can be made.

"You are destroying the lives of all these men," he says of the hostages' plight. "They may never be the same individuals again."

The crisis is an especially difficult one, he says, "because there is no established government, per se, for you to deal with. You may be negotiating with the foreign minister, say, and all of a sudden he's not there anymore."

"I don't know how this is going to turn out. I don't think anyone down here knows, only someone up there," he said, pointing skyward. "But I think that cooler heads, persons concerned with the dignity of man, will eventually prevail."

Based on his experiences in Rome, Volpe says no amount of security could protect the embassy from a determined mob.

"No embassy can have enough Marines to guard it. In Rome, we had maybe 15 or 20 assigned to the embassy. With the various shifts and people taking time off, you never had more than four or five at a time."

"You have to depend on the local authorities. In Rome, we had Italian police stationed at each corner of the embassy—but I don't think they could have stopped a mob, either."

Your Dental Health

by Daniel P. Sweeney D.D.S.

Diet, oral hygiene and heredity are among the factors that determine the health of teeth. One can inherit a tendency toward cavities that can not be corrected, but anyone who takes good care of their teeth and pays attention to the food eaten will be able to minimize tooth decay. That includes avoiding processed sugars, but adhering to a regimen of brushing, flossing, and regular dental visits. Sufficient fluoride content in water is also important. If your neighborhood does not have sufficient fluoride in its water, use a toothpaste with fluoride and check with your dentist about the advisability of fluoride treatments. The proper care of your teeth between checkups is stressed by Dr. Daniel P. Sweeney, D.D.S., 539 Adams St., East Milton Square. As a family dentist, Dr. Sweeney teaches good oral hygiene and advises parents to bring young children to the office so that they may learn good dental habits. Dr. Sweeney provides general dental care for all members of the family. Call our office at 698-3636 for an appointment. Dental insurance plans are honored. DENTAL HINT: Have your dentist supervise intake of fluoride tablets to insure proper dosages taken.

6 Quincy Youngsters In Boston Ballet's 'Nutcracker'

Five Quincy youngsters are appearing in the Boston Ballet's production of Tchaikovsky's "The Nutcracker" which premiered Dec. 5, and is continuing through Dec. 24, at the Music Hall, Boston.

Kristen Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Campbell, 16 Elm Ave., Wollaston, plays a soldier.

Nine year old Kristen, who also appeared in last year's production is a fourth grader at Myles Standish School.

Mrs. Campbell is an art teacher at Sterling Junior High School.

Lynda Lee Rice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Rice, of 282 Palmer St., Germantown, plays a candy cane.

This is the fifth year that 12 year old Lynda Lee has appeared in "The Nutcracker". She is a seventh grade student at Broadmeadows Junior High School.

Also appearing in the production are Robert, Kathryn, and Karen Gralton, children of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Gralton, of 196 Marlboro St., Wollaston.

Robert, age 12, appears in a party scene. A member of last year's production, he is a seventh grader at Central Junior High School.

Nine year old Kathryn, who also had a part in last year's production, plays a reindeer.

She is a fourth grader at Beechwood Knoll School.

Karen, age seven, is appearing in the Christmas classic for the first time. She plays a doll and is a first grader at Beechwood Knoll School.

Fifteen-year-old Angela Cristiani, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Vincent A. Cristiani, 39 Sturtevant Rd., Quincy Center, plays an angel and a flower.

Angela has performed in the "Nutcracker" for the past six years, and is a junior at Fontbonne Academy.

'Annie' At South Area Jewish Center

The Young Actors Studio will present the musical, "Annie" Friday, Dec. 28, at 1:30 p.m. at the South Area Jewish Community Centre, 10 Merry-mount Rd., Quincy Center.

The performers have been seen on WBZ-TV's "KidsFair" and have appeared at the South Shore Plaza, Braintree. They have also given over 200 performances across the state.

For reservations, phone Joan Brown, 773-3000.

Historical Society 'Yule Forest' Exhibit Now Through Jan. 5

The Quincy Historical Society is presenting its annual exhibit of colorful Christmas trees with a "Yule Forest" in celebration of "The Year of The Child".

These include trees of Hungary, France, Sweden, Germany, Denmark, Japan, as well as Victorian and Colonial trees accompanied by dolls of the various countries.

The exhibit, in the Adams Academy Building, 8 Adams St., Quincy Center, is open to the public Mondays through Fridays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturdays from 1 to 4 p.m. through Jan. 5. Admission is free and the public is welcomed.

Good Will Performers Seek Accordionist, Pianist'

The Good Will Performers, beginning their fourth year entertaining South Shore senior citizens, have an opening for a pianist or accordionist to accompany singers and dancers with the band.

The opening is the result of heavy demand for the show by organizations.

The Quincy based group, under the direction of Edward Bennett, have put on 117 performances in the past two years. During that time, many talented people have received free professional training and exposure to develop their talent.

The Good Will Performers have been able to carry on their program through the sponsorship of community minded business organizations. The number one unit of the group is the well known Royal Troubadours.

For more information, call 471-3725, or write to The Good Will Performers, Box 25, Wollaston.

Eye-Openers Entertain At Norfolk County Hospital

The Eye-Openers, a singing group of 12 legally blind people from the South Shore Center for the Blind, Quincy, recently performed at the Norfolk County Hospital for Respiratory Care, Braintree.

The group's performance is one of many patient events organized by the Hospital's Recreational Therapy Department.

The singing engagement for the Eye-Openers is part of a program of hand crafts, ceramics, cooking and typing lessons, and bowling outings which are organized by the South Shore Center for the Blind for the 40 blind persons who attend.

The Center is staffed by Mrs. Rayne O'Garra, director; two full time teachers, the Retired Seniors' Volunteer Program (RSVP) and Mrs. Elizabeth Chase, Music Director for the Eye-Openers.

Koch Club Distributing 1,500 Gifts To Needy

Approximately 1,500 Christmas gifts including games, books, toys and other items of enjoyment will be distributed for the next two weeks to needy children in the Quincy, South Shore and Boston area by the Koch Club of Quincy announces Richard J. Koch, executive director.

Gifts and used clothing have already been assigned to an area in the South End of Boston for distribution to adults and children.

In the 24th annual program to assist needy families at Christmas time, food supplies will be provided to 40 families in the Quincy area to assist them during the holiday season including turkeys, canned food and fresh fruits and vegetables.

All ages and groups have joined with the Koch Club in the largest Christmas ever of the organization.

Members of the Spirit Committee of Broad Meadows Junior High School collected 1,400 items of canned goods. The Granite City Grange membership provided over 60 gifts including dozens of dolls and trucks for needy children to make Christmas a happy occasion for many boys and girls.

Each year, for the past 23, a number of anonymous families and individuals have provided the Koch Club with the money to purchase the foods needed and the additional donors this year assisted to help offset the rising price of food since the program started in 1954.

The program to refurbish and recycle used toys was started at Christmas 1971 with the collection of 300 gifts for a number of families left homeless with a pre-Christmas fire. This year's number will raise the total to 15,000 items in the nine years of the project. The used toys and other items for children to enjoy are donated and collected year round from people in Quincy and the surrounding communities, most unknown, who delivered their gifts during the evening hours to Koch's home.

Koch said the project was now too enormous for the Koch Club to undertake alone and that the assistance of organizations, families and individuals makes the annual gifts for needy children a reality.

Eighty-five percent of the donated articles have been able to be salvaged and refurbished in the recycle for the enjoyment of needy children.

The Massachusetts Fields, Parker and Sacred Heart School students provided hundreds of new and used toys for the project while students of the Woodward School for Girls provided Christmas paper and gift wrapped 200 items for presentation to needy and retarded children.

Approximately 150 dolls were provided and refurbished by the Dress-A-Doll Committee, under the direction of Mrs. Simone Koch and Mrs. Ginny Derringer, for presentation to some happy girls for Christmas. Women and girls from Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree and Milton took many of the discarded dolls and washed, groomed and provided new clothing for presentation to their new owners.

"The response and cooperation has been tremendous this Christmas season" Koch said. "We are now a coordinating agency of organizations, families and individuals wishing to share their holidays with those people less fortunate and in need of help."

"Although the poor throughout the world is stressed daily, within our own geographical area we find thousands and literally thousands in need of assistance."

First For Miller, Too

North Hosts Brockton In First Home Game In 3 Years

The North Quincy basketball team not only will be playing its first home game in three years Friday night when it hosts Brockton in a Suburban League game, but Coach Eddie Miller will be coaching his first game at home.

"Ever since I've been head coach, we have had to play away due to the construction of the new school addition," Miller said. "So we all are looking forward to returning home and playing on our beautiful new court."

North has one of the finest facilities in the area. The new gym will seat about 1500.

For the last three years the Raiders have played their home games at Quincy Vo-Tech and practiced there and at the Lincoln-Hancock School.

Miller has a good nucleus of veterans as North tries to improve upon last year's 9-11 record. "We lost four games by two points, two of them at the buzzer," Miller said.

Varsity returnees are seniors Joe Flynn, Bill O'Connell and Rich Keenan and juniors Mark Millane (6-3) and Paul Mallory (6-4).

Behind them are seniors Bill Timmons, Ricky Anderson and 6-4 Rico MacTaggart and junior Paul Gill.

Others battling for varsity spots are Jack Brown, Brian McCarthy, Vic O'Leary, Bill DeCarli, Bob Bolster and Tom McFarland.

"Millane and Mallory started last year and, although only a sophomore, Millane was our number two scorer," Miller said. "O'Connell played a good deal over the second half of the season."

North is experienced in the front court and Miller expects the team to do well off the boards. Keenan is outstanding in the back court and Gill was the best of last year's junior varsity and is an excellent prospect.

The North coach has been pleased with the Raiders' showing in scrimmages against Milton, Lexington, Winthrop and Somerville.

"This is a real hard working group and I think we should hold our own in the tough Suburban League," he said.

The first home game in three years will be Alumni Night with many graduates planning to attend and give the Raiders some encouragement.

Following the Brockton opener, North will be at Weymouth North next Tuesday and will be home to Weymouth South Friday, the 21st.

The Raiders will play in a Christmas tournament at Silver Lake Regional on Dec. 28 and 29, facing Plymouth-Carver at 7 o'clock on the opening night while Silver Lake meets Weymouth South. The championship and consolation games will be played the 29th.

Paul Bregoli is back as North Quincy's assistant and junior varsity coach.

LISA BURNE of Wollaston a nursing student, played her first year of varsity soccer for Curry College this fall. The team had a 10-5-2 record in only its second year of varsity play.

QJC Wins 5th Straight

The Quincy Junior College basketball team continues to roll along unbeaten and Tuesday went after its sixth win in a row at Wentworth.

The Jaguars will be home to Hellenic College tonight (Thursday) at 7 at the Vo-Tech gym and next Monday will host Northern Essex at 7 at Vo-Tech.

Next Tuesday QJC will play at Blue Hills Regional at 7.

The Jaguars, under first-year coach Brian Buckley, improved their record to 5-0 in the Greater Boston Small College Conference last week with an 83-75 victory over Emerson. It was the first defeat for Emerson.

The Jaguars broke fast and Emerson was not able to overcome their early lead.

QJC had five players in double figures, Ed Richard scoring 18 points, Jim Holleran and Paul Donoghue 15 each, Bob Evans 14 and Paul Waters 11.

"I want to pay tribute to my assistant coach, Steve McJe, and Earl Vermillion, a volunteer assistant and our statistician, as well as my managers, cheerleaders and the enthusiastic student body, all of whom have helped us get off to such a fast start," Buckley said.

Milton edged Cohasset, 1-0.

Raiders Take 2 Quincy Wins, Bows In Jamboree

North Quincy's hockey team showed much promise as it defeated Milton and Cohasset by 2-0 scores in last Saturday's jamboree at the Quincy Youth Arena.

Bob McHugh and Leo Graham scored against Milton and Tom Gerry, last year's leading scorer, had both goals against Cohasset.

Quincy tied Braintree, 1-1, with Robbie Craig scoring for the Presidents, but bowed to Hingham, 2-0.

Hingham, which looked strong, also edged Braintree, 1-0, while

Raiders Face Barnstable Saturday

Lewis Hopes To Keep North Players At Home

Hockey

When Kevin Lewis took over as North Quincy's hockey coach last year, his number one goal was to induce North Quincy boys to stay at North instead of going to outside schools.

He is gradually reaching this goal and when the Raiders opened their season yesterday (Wednesday) with a non-league game against Boston English, six boys who attended other schools last year were back with North.

"This is a step in the right direction and we would be in a tough spot without these six," Lewis said. "But we still have a long way to go. At least seven boys who would be ninth graders in North Quincy are attending other schools this season. We just have to talk them into staying at North where we now have outstanding facilities."

North will play another non-league game against Barnstable Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at the Kennedy Rink in Barnstable. The Raiders will open their Suburban League season next Wednesday, Dec. 19, against Weymouth South at 6:40 at the Quincy Youth Arena, where all home games will be played.

On Saturday, Dec. 22, North will face Quincy at 6:40 at the Youth Arena.

Lewis' first line is comprised of Leo Graham, an outstanding player who was one of North's top two-way football players; Tom Gerry, last season's leading scorer, and Bob McHugh, one of the transfers.

The second line has sophomore Rich Stevens, Rick Reinhardt and Paul O'Sullivan. "All are football players and are good, strong boys," Lewis said.

The second-year coach has a "white" line made up of sophomore Kevin Duff, Mike McNeice, another transfer, and another sophomore, Tom Lester.

A "gold" line has two more sophomores, Billy Nee and Tom Reidy, and battling for the third spot on the line have been Chris Coleman, Jim McGuinness and Steve Igo.

"Our forwards are young but are aggressive and showing great desire," Lewis said.

The first defense pairing has Mark Andrews, the top defenseman, and sophomore Bill Bradley, who was on the squad last year as a ninth grader but was sidelined most of the season with injuries. Although only a sophomore, Bradley, a fine athlete, was tri-captain of the soccer team this fall.

Other defensemen are Tommy Hannon, Scott Alberti, Bobby Collins, Bill Cooke, Tim Joy,

Mark Tenney and Brian Ofria, who has been hurt. He also may play on one of the lines.

Lewis has one of the outstanding goalies in the league, Bobby Tierney, a standout last year who should be even better this season. Behind him are sophomore Danny Newcomb and junior Don Golden.

"This is the second year of my four-year plan to put North near the top in hockey," Lewis said. "If we can just talk the North Quincy boys into staying at North, where we have a lot to offer, we can reach this goal."

The Raiders were 7-10-2 last year, one of the best records in several years.

Kevin Jago, a former North star, is back as the Raiders' assistant coach.

Lewis is proud of the fact five of last year's players are playing varsity college hockey this year, although only freshmen. They are Paul Cooney and Leo Doyle at North Adams State, Pat Ennis, Bridgewater State; Brian McGilvray, Mass. Maritime, and Tim McCormick, Fitchburg State.

Quincy Opens Season Against Thayer Friday

By TOM SULLIVAN

When the Quincy hockey team opens its season Friday and Saturday with non-league games at the Buckingham Browne & Nichols rink in Cambridge in preparation for next Wednesday's Suburban League opener, it will be led by last year's highest scoring line in the league.

The Presidents, hoping to make the state tournament for the 11th time in Bob Sylvia's 16 year-reign as coach, will face Thayer Academy Friday at 3 p.m. and Buckingham Browne & Nichols Saturday at 2 p.m.

In its league opener Wednesday, Quincy will meet Newton North at 6:40 at the Watertown rink and on Saturday, the 22nd, it will meet North Quincy at 6:40 at the Quincy Youth Arena.

The Presidents' first line of Scott Richardson, Tom Brennan and Robbie Craig last year led the Suburban League in scoring when all were juniors and Craig was the number two individual scorer with 34 points.

"The key to our success this year is definitely how much scoring we get beyond our first line," Sylvia said.

"That first line (the yellow line) is one of the best in the state and we'll again have plenty of scoring from them, but we must get some scoring from our other lines."

Last year Quincy missed by a single point of qualifying for the tournament. It was only the fifth time in Sylvia's 15 years that the Presidents had failed to make it.

The second or blue line has Bob Currier, John Furey and Mike Looby. Furey, whose brother Mike, a former Quincy standout, is playing for the West Point varsity, is one of the best distance runners in the area and made the Suburban League cross-country all-star team this fall. He is also a fine skater.

Making up the third or white line are Kevin Craig, Robbie's brother; Tom Roche and John Maginnis.

On the fourth or red line are Steve Kamb, Mark Abboud and Kevin Ryan.

Sylvia has three veteran defensemen in Chick Milford, Bernie Van Tassel and Bill Flynn. Joining them are John Balus, Paul Flynn, Mike Quigg and Howie Chadbourne.

"I have what I feel is the league's best 1-2 punch in goal with Jim Campbell and Chuck Dooley," Sylvia said. "They both are outstanding and if one should get hurt, the other will not weaken us one bit."

Behind them are Richie Brill and Paul Sarno.

Dan McLaughlin is the Presidents' manager.

"The defensemen are good and strong and we have good depth there," Sylvia said. "The first line is the best around but after that the question marks begin. Just how the other lines develop will tell the story of how far we will go."

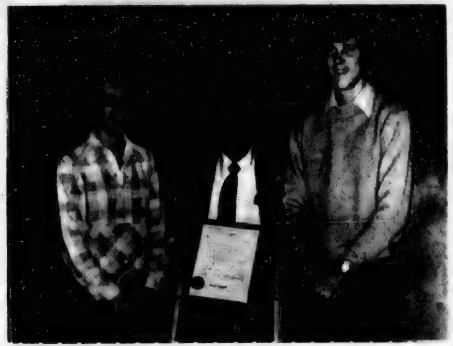

Sylvia sees Weymouth North as the team to beat this year but sees a dog fight all the way. "This is a well-balanced league and any team is capable of knocking off another," he said.

Sylvia praised The Friends of Quincy Hockey, a boosters club which has been in existence as long as he has been coach.

"The club held a faceoff dinner on Dec. 4 at Walsh's and about 50 parents were there," he said. Carl Leone (athletic coordinator), Lloyd Hill (principal) and Bill Hutchinson (a former Quincy coach for several years) attended and spoke to the group.

Anyone interested in joining should contact Larry Richardson or Jim Deitsch. They will be at the Youth Arena for all our games."

Jack Crowley, who played for Sylvia at Quincy, is back as assistant coach.

Crowley's Hat Trick Powers Washington

Jack Crowley had a hat trick and assisted on another goal to spark Washington Tap to an 8-5 win over A's Cafe Monday night in the Executive Hockey League.

Bill Sweeney, Joe Capuzzo, Paul Casey, Ed Hannon and Marty Tolson had a goal apiece. Tolson, Capuzzo, Casey and Charlie Duffy had two assists apiece and Chet Brunstrom and Wayne Gauthier one each. Dick McCabe and Mike Haynes had two goals apiece for A's and Bill Hansen one. Haynes and Rick Golden had two assists apiece and McCabe and Terry Flaman one each.

The Hofbrau topped Sportlight Tavern, 5-1, Dave Towle, Jerry Fitzgerald, Dave Bonito, Artie Boyle and Jim Horner had the goals, while Boyle and Horner had two assists apiece and Fitzgerald one. Dave Costa scored for Sportlight with Kevin Sullivan assisting.

Paul O'Brien had a hat trick and an assist to lead Darcy's Pub over Sundowner's Cafe, 9-2. Bob O'Connell had two goals and Bob Donovan, Al Gullickson, Pete Lynch and Dennis O'Connell one each. Bibby Lewis and Donovan had two assists apiece and Don Fawcett, O'Brien, Bob O'Connell and Dennis O'Connell one each. For Sundowner's Bob Carroll and Doug MacLean had the goals and each assisted on the other's goal.

Hanukkah Joyous Holiday for Jews

By LESTER GLASSER

Every December, Jews observe a festival called Hanukkah.

It is a joyous holiday, celebrating the first great victory for religious freedom won by Jews more than 2,000 years ago.

Hanukkah, which means "dedication", is a holiday liked best by children and it will begin Friday evening, Dec. 14 (the 25th day of the Jewish month Kislev), continuing for eight days.

During those eight days a Menorah holding the candles stands in a window facing the street. At sunset on the first night a candle is lit. The second night two candles are lit and so on until all eight candles are burning.

The following blessings are recited:

"Praised be you, O Lord, our God King of the Universe who has sanctified us by his commandments and commanded us to kindle the Chanukkah lights.

"Praised be you O Lord, our God, King of the Universe, who worked wonders for our ancestors in times past at this season. (This blessing is recited only on the first night.

"Praised Be You, O Lord our God, King of the Universe who has given us life, sustained us and enabled us to reach this season."

According to popular legend, Judah Maccabee, leader of the Jewish Army, much smaller in number and arms than the enemy force, set up a dummy camp.

The Syrian-Greeks, believing this to be the complete Jewish encampment, attacked in full force only to find themselves surrounded by the major part of the Hebrew army, which under cover of darkness, had left the dummy camp and encircled the area.

George Washington, who had studied the Book of Maccabees, used this same stratagem against the British when the outnumbered American troops were also struggling to achieve independence.

Judah Maccabee was finally able to lead his troops victoriously into Jerusalem.

There the Jews cleansed and purified the Temple sanctuary, which had been defiled by the Seleucid armies of Antiochus Epiphanes IV, of every pagan object that had been brought into it and made it once again a house of worship of God.

It is told in Jewish legend that when Judah's men were cleaning the Temple they found a single jar of holy oil - only enough to keep the Eternal Light before the Holy Ark burning for one day.

Miraculously, this one jar burned for eight days and nights.

Judah Maccabee then proclaimed an eight-day holiday to celebrate the rededication of the Temple to God.

It is generally agreed by scholars that if Judaism had been defeated by the Syrian-Greeks, the religious foundations upon which Christianity was later established would have been lost to the world and neither Judaism nor Christianity would have exerted their influence upon civilization.

The children love this holiday because it is a time to give small gifts, very often (as in my family) distributed on each night.

Also Hanukkah is the traditional time to play the "dreidel game". The dreidel is a four-sided wooden or metal top that is spun by hand. The sides are inscribed with the four Hebrew letters which begin the words "Nes gadol haya sham", a great miracle happened there.

The Hanukkah candles have taken on a deep meaning for the Jews, for they symbolize the light of religious freedom that Judah Maccabee and his followers kept alive.

In the glow of the candles, many Jews rededicate themselves to the ideals of their faith, just as once the Maccabees rededicated the Temple to the service of the One God.

Because Hanukkah symbolizes the triumph of faith in God over brute force, it has long been a source of inspiration to the weak and small in number who fight for liberty and justice against stronger tyrannical foes.

As it strengthens the conviction that religious freedom is right of all people, Chanukkah is festival of Human Rights.

The lights of Chanukkah should remind us that the struggle is not over. It strengthens the conviction that religious freedom is the right of every people and that God desires man to worship Him in freedom.

St. John's Choir In Christmas Concert Thursday

St. John's parish choir will present its annual Advent and Christmas concert tonight (Thursday) at 8 p.m. at the church, School St., Quincy Center.

The concert will feature season readings and music which will be familiar to many. In addition to the choral selections, a group of vocal solos and instrumental music will be included, and the congregation will be invited to join in a sing-along of popular carols. The organ and piano accompanist is Phyllis Ross. The choir is directed by Donald Hovey.

Following the concert a reception will be held in the Church Hall.

QHS Choir In Christmas Concert At Bethany Church

The Quincy High School choir will present a Christmas concert at Bethany Congregational Church, Wednesday, Dec. 19 at 7:30 p.m. The 63-voice choir, directed by Catherine Carnabuci will be accompanied by noted organist Lambert W. Brandes.

The program will include selections from "Messiah" and "Gloria" from Bach's B Minor Mass. Seniors Brad Harvey and David Masidlover will sing "Gesu Bambino" and they will join "The Barbershops" in a rendition of "We Need A Little Christmas" from "Mame".

The public is invited to the concert and reception. Refreshments will be served.

Candlelighting Vesper Service At Wollaston Congregational

Wollaston Congregational Church, Winthrop and Lincoln Ave. will celebrate the Prophecies & Nativity of Our Lord with the Festival of Lessons and Carols Sunday, Dec. 16 at 7 p.m.

A number of parishioners will take part including Janice Pullman, Mrs. Leroy Carter, Mrs. Woodworth Jenkins, Henry Gray, Herbert S. Fairclough, Jr., John Fuller, and Lawrence Hilton.

The choir will sing carols from America, England, and Germany, and Donald A. Reade, organist & choir director, will play D'Aquin's "Noel" during the Offertory.

At the close of Vesper Service, those present will participate in a Candle Lighting Service symbolizing the light coming into the world by the birth of Christ.

The public is invited.

First Church Of Squantum Holds Second Advent Service

Members of the First Church of Squantum held their second Advent service Sunday in the church sanctuary which was decorated with greens.

Worshippers arriving at the church were greeted with carols by the Cinnamon Toast Crowd. Inside, the greeters were Leon and Edna MacIntyre.

Richard Williams gave the Call to Worship, Kathy Hansen led the Opening Prayer and Dorothy Abbe read the Scripture. David Stohberg led the lighting of the second candle in the Advent wreath, assisted by Lori Ogilvie and Kimberly Olson.

The Boys' Choir sang "The Little Drummer Boy" by Davis, Onarati and Simeone. They are directed by Kathi Fluhr. The Senior Choir sang "Jesus, Jesus, Rest Your Head", an Appalachian carol.

Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, pastor, preached on "Seeking the Christ Through Reading the Bible", the second in a series.

The Fellowship Hour after the service was hosted by Barbara Fluhr, Tommy Adams, Pat Sorensen, Holly Bumpus and Sandy Sumner.

Next Sunday, at 10:15 a.m., the sermon will be, "Seeking the Christ Through Others".

Atlantic 7th Graders Win Football Title

The Atlantic Junior High seventh grade football team enjoyed an undefeated season and won the city-wide championship with a 5-0-1 record under Coach Ron Adams.

Atlantic had an outstanding defense which allowed only one touchdown, that by Broad Meadows. The champs played to a scoreless tie with Central and defeated Sterling, 8-0; Broad Meadows, 8-6; Point twice by 2-0 scores and Central, 6-0.

The defense was keyed by Al DiBella, Rich Brown, Jack Hannon, Tim Griggett, Steve Kelly, Ted Mulch, David Cooke and a swarming gang of rugged reserves. The defense forced safeties for the wins over Point.

Offensively, Atlantic was consistent and the touchdowns were scored on power sweeps led by pulling guards Brown and Craig Eaton. Mike Sullivan, Rich Brooks, Joe Bangs and Tom Connolly were the running backs behind the power blocking of Tom Smith and Mulch. Steve Kelly was the scoring leader with all three touchdowns.

The Atlantic special teams had little to do over the course of the season as the offense was so consistent that they did not punt once all season. The lone high point for the special teams came when Kelly returned a punt 75 yards for the touchdown against Sterling.

Point Bounces Back To Take 2 Wins

By PETE ZOIA

Point's basketball team bounced back from an opening day loss to capture two wins in the Junior High boys' basketball league last week, while Sterling and Central continued their winning ways.

Point spoiled Atlantic's season opener by taking a 59-53 decision.

It was a high scoring first half with Point leading, 35-23. With Rick Coscia calling the offensive plays, Point built up a 52-35 third period edge. Atlantic came to life with a great last quarter of 20 points, only to fall short by six points.

Leading the Bill Maver-coached Point five were Sal Lorenzano with 27 points and Chris McCray with 15.

For Atlantic, Peter McGillicuddy scored 19 and Dave Ceurvels had 14.

Atlantic Junior Varsity triumphed over Point, 55-13. Chris Bunker and Brian Gibbons had 10 points each for the winners, while Tom Travers managed six for Point.

Sterling had its shooting toes on in its 64-38 victory over Broad Meadows.

Always in front, Sterling led, 34-17, at the half break and outscored the opposition, 30-21 the remainder of the game.

This was Sterling's second win. Leading the attack was Jeff Timberlake with 13 points, closely followed by Paul Gilbody's 11 points and Mark Righini's 10.

For Broad Meadows, high scorer was Mike Williams with 13, Paul Connolly with 10 and Mark Prescott with eight.

In a close Jayvee game, Sterling eked out a 16-12 win. Notable scorers for Sterling were Paul Kenney with eight points, Steve Ray with four and Brad Hart with three.

Tony Pascarano was high for Broad Meadows with eight points.

A greatly improved Broad Meadows team was edged in a thriller by Point, 47-45. This was a rough affair with both teams having foul trouble late in the game. Broad Meadows trailed, 26-16, at half-time but with some classy play, knotted the score at 45 with less than a minute to go. Prior to the deadlock, each team suffered via the foul route, with many regulars ejected.

Point replacements Will Cullen, Adam McGhee and Rob Williams proved worthy as McGhee and Cullen made the winning points. Sal Lorenzano notched 20 points while Chris McCray added 14 for the Pointers.

Bruce King, besides shining defensively, came thru with an important basket late in the game.

For the hard-luck Broad Meadows group, Mark Prescott was high with 13 points followed by Paul Connolly with 12.

In the Jayvee game, Broad Meadows won handily, 25-14. Tony Pascarano had 12 points for the winners while Tom Travers and Tom Delaney scored four each for Point.

Coach Mario Casali's Central club nosed out Atlantic in overtime, 33-31. Central led at halftime, 17-15, in this close contest and Atlantic, spearheaded by Peter McGillicuddy, pulled even at 31—all at the final buzzer.

With three seconds remaining in overtime John Phelan sank a jump-shot from outside the foul line to clinch it for Central.

High scorers for the winners were Bob Mudge with 14 points, and Jim Purland with seven. McGillicuddy had 13 and Bob Leonard along with Paul Ceurvels had six each for Atlantic.

Atlantic salvaged the Jayvee game 25 to 12. Mike Kelly with six points and Lloyd Cahill and Chris Bunker four each, were the top Atlantic scorers. The 12 Central points were distributed among six players with two each, Bob McElaney, Jack Bolster, Paul Ryan, Mark Hubbard, Dennis Dowling and Bob Nichols.

Stay Alive!

By Jack Silverstein

MARRIED'S LIVE LONGER

Want to live longer? Get married! Statistics show that married individuals stand a much better chance of staying alive at various ages than singles. In fact, in the 25 to 34 age group, the death rate for married men is 1.5 per thousand, while those not married die at a double 3.5 rate per thousand.

The difference is even greater as the men become older. In the 35-44 age group, the death rate for married men is 3.1 per thousand; for unmarried, it is 8.3.

For married women in the 35-44 age group, it's 4.1. Among women in general, the mortality rate for single females is almost twice that of the wives.

While these figures apply to large groups, you can hardly ignore them. So, if you are a happy bachelor, take note and weigh the odds.

Arthur M. Chandler Re-elected QCA President

Arthur M. Chandler was re-elected president of the Quincy Citizen's Association at the organization's 12th annual meeting recently at Walsh's Restaurant.

Also re-elected were Joseph N. Gildea Sr., vice president; Saul Lipsitz, treasurer; and Dorothy C. Kelly, secretary.

Heading up the organization's 1980 membership drive will be Beverly and Paul Operach and Deborah and Roger Orman.

Mrs. Laurence J. Curtin was voted a life membership in recognition of her late husband's contributions to the association as its charter founder and first president.

The Quincy Citizen's Association was organized in 1967 when Quincy residents started their fight against revaluation.

Membership is open to all registered Quincy voters, and meetings are held monthly at the Montclair Men's Club.

Over $50,000 For City All Alcoholic, Common Victualer License Fees Increased

The Quincy License Board voted Tuesday to increase the fee for a common victualer license to $25 and an all alcoholic license to $1,000, effective Jan. 1, 1980.

The fees had been $5 and $700, respectively, and City Clerk John Gillis said the increase was necessary because the city's funds are low.

He said the city could realize $50,000 to $55,000 from the increases.

Common victualer and all alcoholic licenses paid for this year will be charged at the old rate, and those paid next year will be charged the new rate, according to Gillis.

Gillis said the increases will not apply to the licenses of charitable or veterans groups.

Quincy eating and drinking establishments with common victualer or all alcoholic licenses can remain open until 2 a.m. New Years Eve as in past years, ruled the Quincy License Board at Tuesday's meeting.

OLD COLONY BANK PRESENTS THE $10,000 SAVINGS CERTIFICATE FOR PEOPLE WHO DON'T HAVE $10,000.

Now you can buy a $10,000 six-month savings certificate with as little as $5,000. That means your savings can earn a lot more interest. It's one way banking on a first name basis at Old Colony makes your money work harder.

Here's how. Let's say you have $5,000. We'll lend you the $5,000 you need to buy a $10,000 six-month certificate.

You receive the interest on the $10,000 certificate. You repay the $5,000 loan plus the minimum interest we're required by law to charge. The difference between the interest you earn and the interest you pay is equal to a 10.944% annual rate* on your $5,000 investment. The chart shows how the accounts work for other amounts.

Don't lose one more day of high interest — start earning it today. Stop in and let us show you how banking on a first name basis means new ways to make more with your money.

On 'Earn-It' Kramer, Riley Agree '60 Minutes' Fair But At Odds On Program Merits

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Two of the main figures in CBS' "Sixty Minutes" feature on Quincy District Court's "Earn-It" program praised that feature as "balanced."

After that, though, the two didn't agree on much.

"I think, for 'Sixty Minutes', we did OK," said Judge Albert Kramer, Presiding Justice of Quincy District Court, prime mover behind Earn-It.

"Sixty Minutes" Program

"Usually, when you submit to dealing with them, you come out a little bloodied."

"I thought it was good, very balanced and objective," said Quincy Police Sgt. Donald Riley, a critic of Earn-It. "I thought they'd portray Al Kramer as the Second Coming of the Savior, but it wasn't like that."

Earn-It, founded in 1975, allows some offenders to repay the victims of the crime, instead of "doing time."

That pleases those who see sentencing as being expensive, often unnecessary and self-

"I think Al Kramer has a lot to offer, if he'd just put his political ambitions aside," Riley said.

New Rate $224

Tax Bills In Mail By Christmas Eve

By TOM HENSHAW

Real estate tax bills based on the new state-approved rate of $224 per thousand are expected to be in the mail to some 25,000 Quincy taxpayers by Christmas Eve or soon thereafter.

"It will be a nice Christmas present from the State Department of Revenue," said a bitter Mayor Arthur H. Tobin, who had held out to defer some of the increase to next year.

Tobin, with the attorney general's office looking over his shoulder, announced the 1980 tax rate for the second time Tuesday at $224, an increase of $27.40 over 1979.

A week before, after consultation with Gov. Edward J. King, it was John P. Comer, chairman of the Board of Assessors, who announced a tax rate of $221.20, up $24.60.

In the meantime, the Department of Revenue stood firm for a higher rate, the governor apparently washed his hands of the whole thing, and Quincy was stuck with another $2.80 on the tax rate.

"We fought the good fight and it has come to an end," said Tobin. "We tried to get the lower tax rate set and we failed. The Department of Revenue officials are totally insensitive and uncompassionate."

Comer said real estate tax bills began running on the computer at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday. The run should be finished on Saturday. Then senior citizens will be hired to stuff envelopes and the bills will go in the mail.

Taxpayers have 30 days in which to pay the bills, which would be around the last week in January, but they have to be paid by Dec. 31 if the taxpayer wants to deduct them from his 1979 federal income tax.

Koch Warns Skaters: Beware Of Thin Ice

Skaters using natural ice surfaces should wait for several days of freezing weather to guarantee a solid skating surface, warns Richard J. Koch, executive secretary to the Park-Recreation Board.

The largest natural ice skating area in Quincy, Sailor's Home Pond in Wollaston, should not be used until there is a minimum of three inches of solid ice. The pond's gates are locked until skating is safe, Koch said.

Other skating areas, like ponds in the Blue Hills or area golf courses, may also be dangerous unless there have been several days of sub-freezing weather.

Park Department employees will be flooding tennis courts in many areas of the city so school children may use them for skating during the holiday season, said Koch.

Popular Christmas Carol First Heard In Quincy

It was just 130 years ago this week that the Christmas carol "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear" was read, not sung, in public for the first time at a party in Quincy's Town Hall.

The words to the now familiar carol were written by Edmund Hamilton in 1846 but he did not get around to sending it to the Christian Register for publication until 1849.

It was received by Nathaniel S. Folsom, the editor, too late for publication in the December, 1849, issue but he liked it so much he took it with him to the Christmas party in the Town Hall.

The party was an annual event given by the Sunday school class of Dr. William Parsons Lunt, pastor of the First Parish Church from 1835 to 1857.

Later the words to the carol were set to music and it was finally published in the Christian Register in December, 1850.

Fore River Bridge Repair Starts Soon

Repair work to strengthen the structural steel in part of the Fore River Bridge between Quincy and Weymouth is expected to begin within the next few weeks, Sen. Paul D. Harold (D-Quincy) announced.

The work, required to reinforce an area where the bridge was struck by a ship on Aug. 17, 1978, will not involve closing the bridge. Apparent low bidder in bid openings was Bonacorso Construction Corp. of Winthrop with a bid of $28,250.

The Department of Public Works estimate for the work had been $31,000.

Harold said plans and specifications for the work require the winning bidder to close only one lane of traffic and divert other traffic so as to minimize the inconvenience to motorists.

Weymouth Savings Sending Greetings To Hostages

The Weymouth Savings Bank is helping its patrons send holiday greetings to the hostages in Iran.

Customers at each of the bank's four branches will pick up and sign a free, pre-printed message to the hostages or compose their own. Envelopes addressed to the American Embassy in Tehran are available and the bank pays all postage.

The pre-printed greeting for the hostages reads, "Our thoughts and our prayers are with you during this holiday season. We wish you a speedy return."

The bank's four branches are at 372 Quincy Ave., Braintree; 47 Washington St., Weymouth Landing; 295 Washington St., Weymouth; and 383 Bridge St., North Weymouth.

Putting 'Merry' In Christmas

Salvation Army, Elks, Koch Club Giving Food Baskets To Over 300 Families

Hundreds of needy families in Quincy will have a happier and more filling Christmas thanks to several area charities.

The Koch Club, the Salvation Army and the Quincy Lodge of Elks are aiding in the distribution of Christmas meals to over 300 families.

The Elks will meet Sunday, Dec. 23 at the Capitol Market, 150 Parkway, Quincy Center to begin distribution of 180 Christmas baskets. The baskets, purchased by contributions from lodge members, contain a turkey and other food items for a full holiday meal.

Families were selected by the Salvation Army. Head Start program, the Mayor's office and Elks members.

The Salvation Army's own meal program will aid over 100 families, according to Mrs. Major Carol Waddington. Although the official deadline has passed, applications are still coming at the rate of five or six a day, and those families will also be helped, she said.

Applications are coming in at a slightly higher rate than last year, according to Mrs. Major Waddington.

Large and extra large families will receive the full meal package, "including everything you can think of for a holiday meal," she adds. "It takes a hand cart to carry one out of here." These packages are donated by the employees of Raytheon Corp.

Smaller families will receive a selection of canned goods and a gift certificate, to be used at either an Angelo's Supermarket or a King's department store. The amount of these certificates vary according to the size and need of each family, she said.

The Koch Club will distribute food baskets to about 40 families, according to Executive Director Richard Koch. This is about five more than last year, he said.

"A lot of times the pride of the family will cause them to refuse the Christmas baskets," said Koch. "We'll go into a house, and we'll see that they have nothing, but they still don't want to take charity. Sometimes, we'll just drop it off and run."

The baskets consist of turkeys, fresh fruits, vegetables and canned food items in sufficient number to provide enjoyment during the holidays other than the traditional Christmas dinner.

The baskets are assigned and delivered through various social and charitable service agencies and members of the Christmas Committee of the Koch Club.

All food is provided, perishable and non-perishable, through donations from a number of organizations, families and individuals. Money gift donations are used to purchase the turkeys provided with each food delivery.

The largest single donation of food for the project is about 1400 canned food items collected by the Spirit Committee and students of Broadmeadows Junior High School. Other canned goods were received from the Camp Fire Girls, Koch Club Recreational Leagues and Districts and a number of families and individuals who annually participate in the Christmas program.

St. John's CYO Conducts 'Share Your Christmas'

St. John's CYO conducted its annual "Share Your Christmas" program this weekend for the benefit of the needy and homeless of Pine Street Inn and Rosie's Place, Boston.

Parishioners brought inexpensive socks, hats, gloves, and other items wrapped in Christmas paper to the week-end Masses.

Cards on the outside of the packages identified whether the gift was for a man or woman, the size, etc.

Members of the CYO collected the gifts and brought them to the altar as part of the offertory of the Mass.

Baharian Denies 'Politics' In N.Q. Condominium

By TOM HENSHAW

The Rev. Bedros Baharian, chairman of the Planning Board, has denied that any pressure was exerted by the State House through him to get Building Inspector Allan F. McDonald to change his opposition to a proposed North Quincy condominium project.

McDonald told the City Council Monday night that he suspects "there's a lot of politics involved" in attempts to obtain a building permit for the 176-unit town house project to be built by Quincy Shore Nominee Trust at 124-168 Quincy Shore Drive, Atlantic.

McDonald said he began to suspect that political pressure was being applied from the State House when he was asked to meet last Friday with Baharian and Ralph Bruno of the Nominee Trust to discuss his opposition to the condominium development.

He said Baharian called the meeting, adding that "Apparently, he set it up as a request from someone in the State House."

Baharian said he called the meeting, which was also attended by Planning Director James Lydon, to discuss McDonald's opposition but that no one asked him to set it up. He said he was exerting no pressure on McDonald to change his mind.

McDonald's objection to the project is based on his opinion that the two egresses to each town house apartment are not designed to be "as far apart as possible," as required by the building code. Fire Chief Edward Barry said he shares McDonald's concern.

Nevertheless, the City Council approved the Planned Unit Development proposal for the project by an 8-1 vote. The "no" vote came from Councillor Stephen J. McGrath after he lost a motion to have the order sent back to the Public Safety Committee for more study.

One of the amendments to the PUD specified that the design should have the approval of the State Building Commission. McDonald agreed he would accept the SBC's decision provided it was judged on its merits with no politics involved.

The injection of the word "politics" into the issue drew a heated response from Councillor Leo J. Kelly, who attempted to elicit a more specific charge from McDonald. Their exchange went like this:

McDONALD - Anyone who disagrees with my decision has the right to appeal to the State Building Code Commission and I agreed to be guided by their decision, provided it was weighed on its merits and no politics involved in it. I made that very clear at the hearings. However, I suspect from what's happened in the past week that there's a lot of politics involved in it and I'm wondering what kind of a decision we will get.

KELLY - Point of order! As I understand it this amendment's put in and, Mr. McDonald, contrary to what you're just saying here, you have yielded more or less and said you would go along with this if the State Building Commission so approves it.

McDONALD - If they weighed it on its merits. I said that at the meetings many, many times. If they would weigh it on its merits, I would accept it. But I said politics has to be kept out of it. I want it weighed on its merits. And that was made very crystal clear to them.

KELLY - I really don't know what's going on and I don't know whether there's politics or anything like this and what you're alluding to and I wish you (indistinct) before the thing came in here.

McDONALD - Well, we only had the meeting two days ago.

KELLY - I don't think you answered the question.

McDONALD - What's the question?

KELLY - What are you alluding to? What's your problem with it? If they do approve it or they don't approve it, what's your problem

LEO J. KELLY

'You made an accusation and never backed it up!'

ALLAN F. McDONALD

with it? What are you talking about, a meeting a couple of days ago? I'd like to know what you're talking about.

McDONALD - There was a meeting with the chairman of the Planning Board, it must have been last Friday, and there was indication there that there was political pressure on this thing. As I said at the meetings, I'd accept the finding of the board, providing it was on its merits and not political pressure.

KELLY - Who are you implying that there's political pressure

Josephine Carnali Asks Out Of Council Post

Mrs. Josephine Carnali has asked that she not be nominated for another term as the City Council's Clerk of Committees, a post she has held for the past nine years.

Mrs. Carnali told the Council Monday night she is too busy to handle the job since her appointment as acting assistant city clerk, filling in for Thomas Burke.

Burke recently took a leave of absence as assistant city clerk to be executive secretary to Mayor Arthur H. Tobin.

A successor to Mrs. Carnali as clerk of committees will be chosen when the Council organizes for the 1980-81 session on Monday, Jan. 7.

Police Offer Holiday Security Tips

The Quincy Police Department reminds all residents of security tips that should be employed to insure a safe holiday season.

Due to the influx of Christmas shoppers, the incidence of auto-related incidents has increased in Quincy Center. To reduce auto theft and larceny: lock all car doors, roll up windows tightly, and keep all packages out of sight by locking them in the trunk.

When shopping, do not put your pocketbook on the floor or counter when making a purchase. More importantly, do not leave your purse in the baby seat of a shopping cart.

Carry only the case you will need. Avoid being the victim of a pickpocket; do not carry all your money in one pocket or in one location in your handbag.

Before visiting, make sure all doors and windows of your home are locked securely, leave lights on and a radio playing.

Do not use gift boxes as receptacles for rubbish. It is a simple matter for a burglar to drive down the street on rubbish collection day and not who has a new appliance.

Engrave all new gifts with your driver's license number by joining the Quincy Police Department's Operation Identification Program.

First Woman Elevator Construction Worker

Debbie D'Olimpio Likes Working On a Steel Beam 16 Stories Up

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

The smallest construction worker on the site of the new Affiliated Hospital in Boston is known to many on the job as "Little Bit."

At home, though, she's known simply as Debbie.

Debbie D'Olimpio, 23, became the first female member of her elevator construction union in New England after she decided she'd be more at home on a steel beam 16 stories above the street than in an office.

"I've always wanted a trade," says Debbie, who is five feet tall and about 115 pounds. "I love to work with my hands."

After graduating from Quincy High School in 1974, though, she worked at a variety of office jobs for South Shore National Bank and Kemper Insurance. Last year, she decided she'd had enough.

"I was just getting itchy with the office work," she says. Eager to make a change, she didn't have to look very far for advice. Her father, Carmine, is president of the Building Construction and Trades Council of Quincy.

"I went to him and said, 'I need some help, what should I do?' We talked about the different trades, what the job fields were like and what would make the best career."

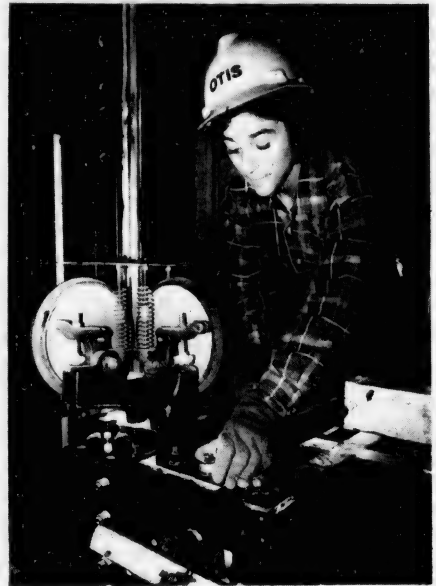

Last February, she took a mechanical aptitude test for potential members run by the Elevators Constructors Local 4 of Boston. She passed, was hired by the Otis Elevator Co. a week later and became a full-fledged union member in September after a six month probationary period and a "final exam."

Her father, naturally, was pleased. But winning over her mother, Amy D'Olimpio, was another thing.

"She was really excited when I first told her. But when the (starting) day got closer and closer, she started to get a little nervous," Debbie said.

"But, she's adjusted to it," Debbie says.

Nowadays, she says, Mrs. D'Olimpio's biggest complaint is LEARNING THE UPS AND DOWNS of the elevator construction business, Debbie D'Olimpio assembles part of an elevator "cab."

when Debbie wears her muddy work boots into the house.

"They both tell me, as long I'm a lady, that's all that counts," she says.

Her co-workers, all male, have also adjusted, she adds.

"I get along with everybody very well. I know they'll accept me as long as I try my best."

"I've sat down with them and asked 'How do you feel about working with me?' They say the only thing that concerns them is how I would react in a life-and-death situation."

That prospect doesn't seem to bother her, nor does the idea of working on a steel beam 16 stories up.

"After a while, you don't even think about that," she says. Physically, the job can get to be a grind, she admits—like when she and one other worker have to move a 16-foot, 250-lb. steel beam.

"The cold gets to you after a while," she adds.

Those are two reasons she hopes eventually to get out of construction and into the less strenuous field of elevator maintenance.

"I do find it difficult," she says of the heavy-lifting aspect of the job. "Physically, it tends to get to you."

But, getting involved in the construction industry has its interesting benefits, too.

"My father gets me involved in all of the 'union deals,' like taking me to union marches in Framingham and things like that. He used to take my brother, now he takes me."

Council Vote Clears Way For Campanelli Building

The City Council smoothed the way as much as it could Tuesday night for construction of the $10 million Campanelli-Stop and Shop office building on the Della Chiesa Parking Area.

Five orders were passed unanimously by the Council in connection with the project that will be built under a Chapter 121A tax enticement and has been called vital for downtown development.

Councillors Daniel G. Raymond and Stephen J. McGrath gave the five orders their final push to approval during the last hearing before the Council's Downtown Development Committee.

"This matter has been before the public for an extended period of time," said Raymond.

"We've all read the extensive documentation. We've listened to testimony both pro and con. We've debated all these items extensively. We've exhausted all the arguments.

"We recognize that something has to be done to promote and stimulate growth in the downtown area. We have to do something to broaden the tax base in this city."

McGrath said he thought the project was the victim of much misinformation in the past, particularly the "tax break" aspects.

"It was not coming through clearly exactly the benefits this project will bring to the city of Quincy," he said.

"The area is now producing $62,000 in revenue a year to the city—$55,000 in taxes and the difference in parking meter receipts.

"Conceivably in the first year upon completion of the building this will at a minimum take into the city $133,000. It's a good agreement, a good project."

The orders that were passed by the Council included the taking of land and buildings at the corner of Hancock and Granite Sts., the tax incentive agreement, and permission for Campanelli to use tax-free bonds to finance construction.

Speedy approval was necessary to enable the city to meet a Feb. 1 federal deadline involving a $3.79 million grant to build a parking garage for the project over the MBTA tracks.

Planning Director James Lydon told the Council that the air rights over the tracks would be leased from the MBTA for 99 years at a cost of $5,877.38 a year.

OLD COLONY BANK PRESENTS THE $10,000 SAVINGS CERTIFICATE FOR PEOPLE WHO DON'T HAVE $10,000.

Now you can buy a $10,000 six-month savings certificate with as little as $5,000. That means your savings can earn a lot more interest. It's one way banking on a first name basis at Old Colony makes your money work harder.

Here's how. Let's say you have $5,000. We'll lend you the $5,000 you need to buy a $10,000 six-month certificate. You receive the interest on the $10,000 certificate. You repay the $5,000 loan plus the minimum interest we're required by law to charge. The difference between the interest you earn and the interest you pay is equal to a 11.177% annual rate* on your $5,000 investment. The chart shows how the accounts work for other amounts.

Don't lose one more day of high interest—start earning it today. Stop in and let us show you how banking on a first name basis means new ways to make more with your money.

ENRICH YOUR HOLIDAY COME TO CHURCH THIS CHRISTMAS

The Christmas Story

Luke, 2, 1-14. At that time, there went forth a decree from Caesar Augustus that a census of the whole world should be taken. This first census took place while Cyrenus was governor of Syria.

And all were going, each to his own town, to register.

And Joseph also sent from Galilee out of the town of Nazareth into Judea to the town of David, which is called Bethlehem - because he was of the house and family of David - to register, together with Mary his espoused wife, who was with child.

And it came to pass while they were there, that the days for her to be delivered were fulfilled.

And she brought forth her firstborn Son, and wrapped Him in swaddling clothes, and laid Him in a Manger, because there was no room for them in the Inn.

And there were shepherds in the same district living in the fields and keeping watch over their flock by night.

And behold, an angel of the Lord stood by them and the glory of God shone round them, and they feared exceedingly.

And the angel said to them, "Do not be afraid, for behold, I bring you good news of great joy which shall be to all the people: for today in the town of David a Savior has been born to you. Who is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign to you: you will find an infant wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a manger."

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men of good will."

Christmas Services, Activities At Church Of Presidents

The congregation of United First Parish Unitarian Church, Quincy Center, will celebrate Christmas Sunday, Dec. 23 with a Family Service at 10:45 a.m.

Ruth Parrish will greet people as they enter the historic sanctuary, bright with dozens of poinsettias donated by friends and members and arranged by Caroline Crane.

Rev. Keith Munson will gather the church school children around him for a Christmas story, to be illustrated by Helen Burgess.

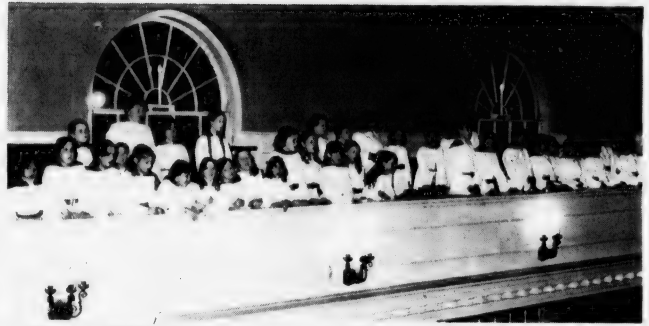

Adults will remain in the sanctuary for Rev. Munson's pulpit address, "The Year They Forgot Christmas". The children will return to church school to make cards and wrap hats, mittens, and Christmas candies for The New England Home for Little Wanderers.

The church's traditional Christmas Eve Candlelighting Service will be Monday, Dec. 24 at 7:30 p.m. This year's theme is "The Story of the Carols".

Rev. Munson will start the lighting with the flame of a single candle in the darkened sanctuary. Members of the congregation will pass the light from candle to candle, until every person's candle has been lit.

Carols will be sung, this year featuring "The Candlelight Carolers."

First Church Of Squantum Observes Third Sunday Of Advent

A dramatic recitation of Masfield's Christmas poem, "How The Great Guest Came," by Ethyl Lawless highlighted the third Advent service of the First Church of Squantum Sunday.

As worshippers arrived for the service, they were greeted at the front door by the Cinnamon Toast Crowd singing Christmas carols. Inside, the greeters were Robert and Ida Von Riegers.

Fred MacMillan gave the Call to Worship. Dorothy Abbe led the Opening Prayer, Sandra Ahearn read the Scripture and Genevieve Todd led the Offertory Prayer, assisted by Tore Wallin and David Mildram.

Kathi Fluhr led the lighting of the third candle in the Advent wreath, assisted by Greg Gale, Brian Colwell and Christopher Shionis.

The Junior Choir sang "Sing Noel" by Natalie Sleeth. The group is directed by Mary Ruth Scott. The Senior Choir sang a Polish carol, "Infant Holy, Infant Lowly," arranged by Da' d Willocks.

Rev. Dr. Gen. Langevin, pastor, preached on "Seeking the Christ Through Others," the third in a series.

The Fellowship Hour after the service was hosted by Barbara Frazier, Steven Williams, Dave Mildram, Bonnie Adams and Kathryn Kelly.

Dear Santa

Dear Santa:

I promised you last year I'd try to write sooner and not leave everything to the last minute like I usually do. Well, I am a little earlier.

I know you're busy and have a lot of things to do and a lot of places to go. But I'd really appreciate it if you could squeeze these gifts into your sleigh for delivery at Christmas.

Some of these requests, as you'll note, are being asked in fun and a few in a serious vein. Please do your best to get the following to the following:

Mayor ARTHUR TOBIN, a set of wheels to really get the city turned around. . . LEO KELLY, the new City Council president-to-be, a bigger gavel to keep all the prospective mayoral candidates in the City Council under control. . . DICK KOCH, Jr., a 198-vote head start next time out as a City Council candidate.

RUTH GORDON, completion of the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater in Merrymount Park and a visit home to help dedicate it. . . School Committeeman JOHN SULLIVAN, a full page ad in The Quincy Sun and the Patriot Ledger. . .

TAXPAYERS of Quincy, a $50 tax rate decrease. . . Councillor JAMES SHEETS, a shiny new coin to toss (two out of three) to decide whether to run for mayor and, if not, for what. . . TED KENNEDY, a new campaign start. . . School Committee Vice Chairwoman PATRICIA TOLAND, an honorary membership in the Quincy Education Association. . .

School Committeewoman MARY COLLINS, an apple from the teachers. . . GENERAL DYNAMICS, a billion dollar contract. Make that two. . . WARREN WATSON, director of the Crane Public Library, a copy of the best seller "The Streets Were Paved With Gold". That's the autopsy on ailing New York City's financial woes brought about, among other things, by over estimating anticipated revenues. This request comes from Councillor FRANK McCauley who thinks everybody in Quincy should have the chance to read the book. . . Senator PAUL HAROLD, a room full of frames for his Senate citations. . . TOM CURTIS, outgoing president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, a "Well Done" citation for a job very well done. . . RON ZOOLECK, executive vice-president of the Chamber, the entire city of Philadelphia as the southern boundary for the fast expanding S.S. Chamber. . . Councillor JOSEPH BRETT, many years of happy retirement after 20 years of public service. But no rocking chair. Santa, Joe can't sit still long enough. . . CARMINE D'OLIMPIO, an erector set. Union made, of course. . . City Councillor DANIEL RAYMONDI, a Christmas card from Kathy O'Donnell. . . KATHY O'DONNELL, a Christmas card from Daniel Raymondi. . . Senator PAUL TSONGAS, a Quincy referee's license. . . Former Mayor JOSEPH LA RAIA, a bookcase to keep his unsold books in. . . City Clerk JOHN GILLIS, a couple of voting machines as a starter set. (Santa, he keeps asking for them, but you don't bring them). . . WJDA's JAY ASHER, an after-sundown radio license. . . Quincy District Court Clerk DENNIS RYAN and former Deputy Sheriff JACK BROWNELL, again something very special. (Their birthdays are the day before Christmas and as you know, Santa, people with birthdays that close to Christmas usually get a little cheated on Christmas presents). . . Happy retirement for Rev. JOHN BANKS, long-time popular pastor of Bethany Congregational Church who will be stepping down in June. . . Former Quincy High School Principal GEORGE WILSON, another gallon or two or three from the Fountain of Youth. . . Former North Coach JACK DONAHUE, a lot more Quincy-North Thanksgiving Day football games. He hasn't missed one yet. . . CBS' DAN RATHER and MOREY SAFER, congratulations for correctly pronouncing Quincy on the "60 Minutes" look at the Quincy District Court's "Earn It" program. . . HERB FONTAINE, a new fence to view. . . BERNICE MADER, at least one day without seeing or hearing a jet. . . TOM BURKE, Mayor Tobin's new executive secretary, keeping things as smooth as GEORGE RILEY did. . . Public Works Commissioner JAMES (PETE) RICCIUTI, a package of red golf balls for snowy weekends. . . School Supt. Dr. LAWRENCE CREEDON, the North Quincy High School project finally completed. . . Members of QUINCY JEWISH WAR VETERANS POST 193, a Happy Hanukkah. . . SYBIL MATTSOON, a happy family reunion and continued good friendships. . . DICK KOCH, Sr., NORMA and PETER GACICIA, KEN RUNGE, AGNES COSTELLO, WIN BETTINGSON, ROY LIND, BARON HUGO, PAUL RICCA a big thank-you to them and to the hundreds of others for their assistance in helping "Jerry's Kids". . . And, another sincere thank you to DR. ALFRED MAHONEY for all the nice things he has done for so many. . . And, everything nice to my little friends at the Lincoln Hancock School: STEVE ACORN, MICHAEL BROWN, KENNETH CALDWELL, DONNA CLEMENTS, PAUL DELLA BARBA, GEORGE DI BONA, ENNIO ELEUTERI, DAVID GARDINER, ROBERT GRANT, JULIE JANKARD, MARY JENKINS, CRAIG KEEFE, LISA KELLEY, TODD KIMMEL, JOHN LITTLE, KRISTIN MARSHALL, ROBERT NEAL, MARY VO. . .

To all of them, and all of you, a very Merry Christmas and a happy, healthy New Year.

Tax Bills In Mail By Christmas Eve

Tobin gave this account of what happened between Tuesday, Dec. 11, and Tuesday, Dec. 18:

Comer met King at a party and the governor told him that, since the city and the state were so close in figures on estimated receipts, he saw no reason why the city's figures could not be used.

King said he would communicate with the Department of Revenue and the city of Quincy could proceed with the tax rate. Comer hastily called a news conference at 8 p.m. and announced the rate as $221.20.

But the Department of Revenue refused to accept Quincy's figures, which were some $750,000 higher than those of the Department, despite the governor's intervention.

Early Monday morning, Tobin received a letter and two telegrams from Revenue Commissioner L. Joyce Hampers instructing the city not to use any figures on its tax bills not directed by her Department.

Later that day, City Solicitor Robert Fleming was contacted by the Attorney General's office inquiring whether the city had taken any action over the weekend to send out tax bills.

If any such action had been taken, Fleming was told, the Department of Revenue had requested the Attorney General's office to seek out a judge and get a temporary restraining order.

Tobin contacted the Department of Revenue and asked for another meeting. He was told they'd get back to him. He waited until 4:30 p.m. but no one called.

"No one wanted to talk to us," he said.

"I did not want to bring another law suit on the city of Quincy nor did I want to embarrass the governor, who has enough problems right now. I didn't think there was anything to be gained."

At the heart of the dispute, which went on for the better part of two months, were the estimated city receipts for 1980. The city said slightly over $35 million. The state held out for $34.4.

Tobin said he was aware that the city had a record of overestimating anticipated receipts but his figures were solid and he only wanted to defer payment over a period of two years.

"Ironically," he said, "I was present at a conversation where the Commissioner of Revenue informed the City Auditor to 'balloon the estimated receipts.'"

"We informed them that we do not want to do that because that was the reason for the problems that have caused serious concerns to the city over the past seven or eight years.

"It was our strong stand at that meeting that caused some embarrassment to the Department of Revenue that they just put the screws in and started to twist."

Tobin said that things would have been different if he was still a member of the State Senate, a post he lost to Sen. Paul D. Harold [D-Quincy] in the 1978 election.

"I know in my heart that if I was still there that there would be a lower tax rate in Quincy right now and you could make book on it," he said.

"In my position on powerful Senate committees I would not have had to take what the city of Quincy has had to endure in the past few weeks."

He said he did not blame Sen. Harold for not being able to help out in the State House.

"All the state legislators were briefed by Mr. Comer," said the Mayor, "and two of them [Reps. Thomas F. Brownell and Michael W. Morrissey] called to say that they had made efforts in behalf of the city."

"One of them had angry words with the Department of Revenue. He is a member of the Taxation Committee and I'm sure he will have a long memory of what happened to his city."

Brownell is a member of the Taxation Committee.

South Shore Aid Groups Organize Against Fuel Crisis

A number of care-giving groups on the South Shore recently took the first step toward developing a network to share resource information and formulate strategy for the expected energy crisis.

The meeting was sponsored by Quincy Community Action, the Interagency Council for the South Shore, the South Shore Council of Churches and Rep. Robert A. Cerasoli (D-Quincy).

"We were able to establish from this meeting the fact that most communities are faced with similar problems," said Cerasoli.

The basic problem, the groups discovered, is the inability of many people to pay for fuel and the identification of the proper authority to get in touch with in an emergency.

Some of the suggested solutions: • Establishment of an emergency reserve fund by contributions from civic and fraternal groups, to be used in cases of empty or near empty fuel tanks.

• Contracting with several oil dealers within the community who will deliver fuel and be paid from the reserve fund.

• Publication of the proper number to call for emergency assistance.

• Setting up a network between municipalities to share resource information.

• Formulation of a resource directory listing agencies, clubs, churches and the resources they can provide in crisis situations.

Cerasoli called it "the beginning step in a process which will assist those in leadership roles to organize the necessary resources in their communities."

Readers Forum

Takes Issue With Article On Teachers Maximum

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

With regard to the quoted minimum and maximum salaries for teachers in the Quincy Public Schools [December 13 edition of the Sun], you are doing the teachers of Quincy a disservice by misquoting the maximum as $21,750 after six years.

Whoever did the research for the article either does not know how to read the salary schedule or got incorrect information from someone. The six year level means that a teacher has earned a Master's Degree as well as 30 additional hours (college credit hours) beyond the Master's. Also, this figure of $21,750 is attained only after teaching in the Quincy Public Schools for 12 years and accumulating the above noted college credits.

Patricia A. Cheverie

Points To Ponder

• Do you have the feeling that the Patriots and Red Sox just exchanged uniforms for their seasons?

• Ode to the MBTA:

M is for the millions it costs because you're over-manned

B is for the breakdowns that occur all over the land

T is for the travelers packed like sardines in a can

A is for the attorney who made himself 800 grand.

• While holiday shopping, watch out for a book entitled How to Hug. It's really the fifth volume of an encyclopedia.

• In order to compute the cost of living, simply take your salary and add 15%.

• The percentage of members of Congress who have been arrested is higher than the percentage of unemployed white males who have been arrested. Maybe we should make some members of Congress unemployed and reduce the crime rate.

• A road map gives you lots of valuable information—except how to refold it.

[Editor's Note: The salary figures in the Dec. 13 article were taken from advertisements placed last month by the School Committee in the Patriot Ledger and The Quincy Sun. Those ads quoted $21,750 as "maximum salary at six-year level." However, the term "six-year level" refers not to the teacher's term of service, but to the level of education. Placement on the six-year level requires a Master's Degree and actually 60 semester hours beyond a Bachelor Degree according to the teachers contract and not the 30 hours cited by reader Cheverie.]

Highlights Of 'Sixty Minutes' Look At 'Earn-It' Program

Judge Albert Kramer's "Earn It" program for the rehabilitation of some offenders convicted in Quincy District Court came in for national attention Sunday night on CBS' "60 Minutes" program.

Here are the highlights of that program, as taped by The Quincy Sun:

MOREY SAFER—(Introducing the Program) ... that's the idea behind a program in Quincy, Mass., called "Earn It" in which convicted offenders are sent, not to jail, but to work, to earn money to reimburse their victims. It's one of many such programs that are springing up around the country. But, as Dan Rather found, some people in Quincy have big doubts about it.

RILEY—The first instance, let's try and give the kid a break if we can. In the second instance let's give him five or 10 days in the Dedham House of Correction and let him fight off the furies for five or 10 nights. Let him see how much romance is involved in being a hard guy.

RATHER—But the judge, who can sentence men to the Dedham jail, doesn't think jails do much good.

KRAMER—Your recidivism rate is high, maybe 50 or 60 per cent will go back and commit crimes, and they don't pay a penny to their victims or do anything to make up for their offenses.

BAILEIFF—Hear ye, hear ye ... RATHER—Massachusetts District Court Judge Albert Kramer started the "Earn It" program and the case before him today is typical. Two teenagers on trial for vandalizing a municipal ice skating rink, setting fire to part of the building and causing $25,000 worth of damage.

LAWYER—Your honor, young Mr. Barris (?) is deeply remorseful for what he has done. Some people don't want to admit they are sorry for some wrongdoing that they have done, but Mr. Barris ...

KRAMER—... I don't know if all people are sorry but when they seem to come to court on this day they tend to express that to the court ...

RATHER—The decision? Not jail, but some alternatives.

KRAMER—If you're willing to go to work immediately and to make up for those damages, that would include from 12 to 14 weeks of five days a week, more than three months of labor without any fee, so that you can begin to work right at the rink where you caused the damage, would you agree to do that as a condition of this sentence?

DEFENDANT—I agree to that.

RATHER—"Earn It" sentences such as this one are given not only to teenagers and first offenders but to adults with prior records. The usual sentence: Turn over two thirds of what you earn to repay the people you wronged. These men, unable to earn enough to repay the $25,000 in losses they caused, spent the summer working for free at the skating rink they damaged. Jobs are provided by local agencies and businessmen after being given a hard sell by Judge Kramer whose loudest sales pitch is that "Earn It" helps not only the perpetrators of crime but the victims.

CBS CAMERAMAN captured Quincy District Court Judge Albert Kramer during court session this June. The footage was used in Sunday night's "60 Minutes" feature on the Earn-It program.

KRAMER—The victim has been the forgotten person in this process. The victim is the one that's often left out of the process. The victim is the one who neither often appears in court and doesn't even know what the sentence is nor gets compensated. There's no secret that the public has lost confidence in a system that has failed to rehabilitate the offender or protect the community or compensate a victim in any way. And the simple reason for that, and that is because traditional sentencing has, but a couple of options, both of which are ineffective and unacceptable. One option is either send somebody to jail or the other option, which is used most of the time, which is if you don't send him to jail send him back out on the street with just a promise that he won't do it again.

RATHER—Whether crime

does or does not pay can be debated. But once a criminal is caught and put in jail there is no debate about who pays the bill. You do, of course. And the cost is staggering. A day in jail now costs as much as some hotel rooms and a new jail cell costs more than the average whole house in some of the suburbs of this country. Here's why I say that: Last year the federal prison system spent about $25 per day for prisoners. In Massachusetts the cost was far greater. And to build a new maximum security prison now costs $51,000 a bed.

KRAMER—There's no way that we can start building jails and trying to put all kinds of people behind bars (indistinct) the alternatives ...

RATHER—Those who like the alternatives most are crime victims like Keo Kerakis (?). His office was broken into and some of his property destroyed. The offenders were sentenced to repay him.

KERAKIS—(?) It's the first time I've ever been reimbursed in the two years I've been here and there have been a half a dozen breaks I've never even reported. Yes, it does make sense.

RATHER—But lots of people think it (alternative sentencing)

Fleeing Hungarians Find Refuge In Houghs Neck

A Hungarian refugee family, Jozsef Hanzl, his wife Maria and their son Antal, 13, who walked 20 miles to the Austrian border just ahead of invading Russians, arrived in Quincy to start a new life.

They were sponsored by 50 residents of Houghs Neck and Most Blessed Sacrament Church and were to live with Mrs. David Parr of 101 Bird St., Houghs Neck.

QUARRY ST. WORK POSTPONED

Public Works Commissioner Charles R. Herbert said there would be a delay of one to two years in the proposed widening of Quarry St. as an access road between Quincy Center and the Southeast Expressway.

Herbert said he had been advised by the state that the $75,000 earmarked for the Quarry St. project would instead go toward work on Revere Rd. and Canal St.

QUINCY TRIPS WEYMOUTH

Art Burke scored three goals and Ed Houghton tallied twice as the Quincy High School hockey team whipped Weymouth, 5-1, to retain a share of the lead in the South Shore Hockey League.

Correction and said "his (Kramer's) programs have become a joke."

"I don't think that level of criticism really represents the attitude of the Quincy Police Department," Kramer said. "I don't know if he really meant what he said ... maybe he was a little surprised by the TV cameras."

"I hope I didn't come across as the wise-guy cop," Riley said. "He (Kramer) had three months to prepare. I got a phone call at the station one day. I went downstairs and talked to them for 45 minutes."

"I think it should have been made clear that I was speaking with the permission of the chief, although not as a spokesman for the department," Riley added. "But the chief (Francis X. Finn) shares my opinions, to the best of my knowledge."

"I guess I've been appointed the spokesman for the negative publicity on Earn-It. A lot of downtown businessmen will tell you they don't like it, but they don't want to go public. They feel there's been some arm-twisting."

On the presentation, Kramer said, "It was very balanced. I would have liked to have seen more details on the program, but Sixty Minutes was aiming more to set up the various issues involved."

"I think we answered the issues. We would have liked a more ringing endorsement. But Sixty Minutes isn't the kind of format that will give you that."

"I think CBS did an excellent job," said Riley. "I was pleasantly surprised."

Christmas is a time of joys and toys but it can also be a time of tragedy if extra precautions are not observed to head off the ever-present possibility of fire.

With this in mind, Deputy Chief Carl V. Valenti of the Quincy Fire Prevention Bureau, has issued the following check list of holiday safety rules and precautions.

On Christmas trees:

- Buy a tree that has not dried out from prolonged storage.
- Stand the cut end of the tree trunk in water until it is taken indoors.
- Place the tree securely in a stand that has a water receptacle for the cut end of the trunk.
- Keep the water receptacle filled by checking it at least once a day.
- Use a stand that will support the tree.
- Stand the tree away from fireplaces, radiators, space heaters and other things that might cause it to burst into flame.
- Place the tree where it will not block a door or an exit.
- When needles become dry and start to shed, dismantle the tree and discard it immediately.

On Christmas lighting:

- Do not use candles on or near a Christmas tree.
- Use only electric lighting sets that have been approved and bear the Underwriters Laboratory (UL) label.
- Before using an electric lighting set check it for frayed wires, loose connections and broken sockets.
- Use only 15 amp fuses on electric lighting set circuits.
- Don't do extensive holiday lighting yourself; it can be dangerous unless it's done by an expert.
- Avoid plugging too many cords into one outlet.
- Turn off all Christmas tree lighting before retiring or leaving the house.
- Provide a switch some distance from the tree for turning the tree lights on and off.

On decorations and wrapping:

- Dispose of the Christmas wrapping immediately after the gifts are opened.
- Decorate with non-combustible materials whenever possible.
- If combustible materials must be used, make sure they are flameproofed.
- Use only flameproofed materials for Santa Claus' whiskers and clothing since cotton batting and certain papers ignite easily and burn intensely.
- Do not burn Christmas wrappings or decorations in the fireplace or the stove.

On toys:

- Avoid buying pyroxylin plastic toys or costumes that have not been flameproofed.
- Avoid buying toys operated by flammable liquids such as alcohol, kerosene and gasoline.
- Buy only electrical toys that have been approved by the Underwriters Laboratory (UL).
- Do not operate electric trains or other electrical toys under or close to the Christmas tree since a spark may result in a fire.

Some general suggestions:

- Avoid smoking near the Christmas tree or amidst decorations.
- Use a substantial fireplace screen to guard against flying sparks.
- Keep matches, lighters and burning candles beyond the reach of children.
- Have a fire extinguisher or a garden hose connected to a faucet or buckets of water within easy reach near the tree.
- In case of fire, call the Fire Department immediately.

April Target Date

Spring Completion Seen For New NQHS

By BERNIE O'DONNELL.

The oft-delayed and frequently controversial new North Quincy High School should be completed this spring—and by all accounts it'll be a beauty.

"We should have that building in April," clerk of the works Frank Leporini told the School Committee last week. The project should come in within its most recent budget, $17.6 million, he added.

Construction began in July, 1976 and was to have been completed for occupancy in September, 1978. The price tag during that time climbed from $13.5 million to the present figure.

The project includes both a 131,000-square-foot annex, already completed and in use, and renovations to the old building.

Despite the problems, Arthur Woodward, coordinator of secondary education, is enthusiastic.

The old building, he said, "will be an amazement to everyone who's ever seen it before."

"It's completely different," said committee Vice-Chairwoman Patricia Toland, who toured it that day. "It's bright, it's really looking good."

Both Woodward and Leporini foresee no further problems.

"We fully expect to be in that building in the fall," Woodward said.

"We don't have any of the problems we had last year—like labor problems or leaky roofs," Leporini added.

When asked by board member Francis Anselmo if leftover funds could finance a rooftop greenhouse for the school's science department, Leporini placed the cost of such an addition at $150,000 and said "it's too early to tell if there will be any money left over."

In other business, the committee approved the following personnel moves:

- Retirement of Adams School principal Henry Paterson, a 28-year employee of the school department.

- Resignation of Quincy High teacher Marilyn Scrizzi.

- Maternity leaves for Quincy High teacher Janice Walsh (effective Nov. 26) and special needs teacher Jean Whalen (effective Jan. 2).

- Appointment of Jane A. McGuiness, 15 Clifton St., Quincy Center to fill a teaching vacancy at the Willard School.

- Appointment of Thomas W. Dolan, 84 Faxon Rd., North Quincy as a home tutor.

- The committee also voted to reschedule its next meeting, originally to be held Dec. 26, to Jan. 2.

What Christmas... And Chanukah Mean To Me...

Pupils in Quincy's public elementary and junior high schools have submitted the following articles on the themes "What Christmas Means To Me" and "What Hanukkah Means To Me".

The Sun is happy to share their unedited thoughts with you and hope you enjoy them as much as we do.

Because of the tremendous response by the students we are unable to print all of the articles because of space limitations. We are sorry about that because there were several hundred others worthy of publication. We tried to give space to each school participating.

To those students whose articles we were unable to publish, we wish to apologize, thank them for their interest and commend them for their writing talent.

To them and everyone who participated, we wish a Merry Christmas and a Happy, Healthy New Year.

Christmas is a time when you give and receive. But you care more about what you give. Some little children don't realize what Christmas really is. It is Jesus Birthday. We would be giving presents to Jesus if he were alive.

To most children my age, Christmas means many presents and lots of turkey. I don't blame them for turkey and presents are a nice way to spend you holiday. However, there is much more to Christmas than that. In religious terms, Christmas is the birth of Christ. Even though nobody today was there when Christ was born, it is still a nice celebration. Love fills the air from the houses. Relatives gather and make the day joyful.

Christmas is my favorite holiday and I just can't wait!

Christmas means to me the sharing and giving of Christmas. I like receiving presents but I really like giving presents. Christmas is a joyful time and it's full of excitement. What Chanukah Means To Me...

To me Hanukah means to celebrate the Jews standing up to the king and getting their religious freedom. The reason there are eight days in Hanukah is because in the Temple of Jerusalem long ago there was a jar of oil which everyone thought would only burn one day. Miraculously it burned for eight days. In memory of this, Jewish families all over the world light a candle every night for eight days. On the menorah is a ninth candle called the shammas which is used to light the other eight candles.

It also means for families to get together and celebrate. In celebration we eat latkes, chicken soup with knadlchs and many other things.

We also play games such as spin the dreidel. On the dreidel are four Hebrew letters nun, gimmel, hay, and shin. They stand for Nea Gadel Hayak Shom, where the great miracle happened.

We receive one present on each of the eight days. But mostly Hanukah is a day for giving thanks to God.

Paul Kurtzman
Beechwood Knoll School
Grade 6

Chanukah is a time of sharing and joy. When I light the candles and say the blessing I feel so good all over. I really love the story of Chanukah.

Spinning the dreidel is fun too. That's what Chanukah means to me.

Jonathan Stein
Mass Fields School
Grade 5

The Hanukkah celebration
Is among other things,
One of illumination.

In the darkest
In the darkest time of the year
The candles, lit one by one.
Bring much cheer.

The flame like golden lace
Feels very warm
Against the young one's face.

Let us not forget the unbroken chain
Of family warmth and love,
That remains when the candles no longer flame.

Hanukkah brightens my day,
And may it brighten yours,
In a very special way.

Happy Hanukkah!
Elaine Sugarman
Central Jr. High
Grade 8

What Hanukkah means to me is a lot of things. One of the things is that I eat potato pancakes. These are called "latkes". It got its name because it is fried like a pancake, but uses potatoes and onions instead of batter.

Another thing that Hanukkah means to me is spinning the dreidel and receiving presents. A dreidel is a top with four flat sides having Hebrew letters on each side. The children play it, and put money in the pot and try to win it all.

Receiving presents is fun because we exchange gifts with other people and with relatives, and it is just as fun giving as receiving. On Hanukkah you get a gift every night.

The last thing that Hanukkah means to me is lighting the Menorah. We light the Menorah, one candle each night, and say a blessing over it. By the time of the last night all the candles are lit. There is one other candle higher than the others called the "Shammash", meaning "the servant." The Shammash means the servant because we use the Shammash to light all the other candles.

The menorah symbolizes a legend of long ago, passed down. The legend says when the soldiers looked for holy oil to burn in the Temple Menorah, they only found enough for one day. They poured it into the menorah and it burned for eight days. There are other symbols of the menorah, but I like this one.

The most important meaning of Hanukkah to me is being with my family and relatives during this time of the year and knowing that all year long we fight and kid around, but when this time of year comes around we are all serious and peaceful.

Marcia Rudnick
Central Jr. High
Grade 9

To me Chanukah isn't just getting presents. It's a lot of things like lighting the candles each night saying the prayers, and singing the songs. Just having fun: fun like opening presents, spinning the dreidel and eating latkes [potato pancakes].

Chanukah is fun because it is many things rolled into one that lasts for eight days.

What Christmas Means To Me...

Once upon a time there was a couple named Joseph and Mary. Mary was expecting a baby. The baby was born on December 25. So they named the child Jesus! He was a beautiful baby. Everybody even the three wise men, came to see him. One day Jesus said.

"Mother, I will die young," and He did. And now on December 25, we celebrate Christmas. It stands for Christ's Mass.

So now on Christmas there is a man and his wife called Santa Claus and Mrs. Santa Claus. Santa Claus comes around with eight reindeer and their names are Rudolph and Donner, Blitzen, Dasher, Dancer, Comet, and Cupid, Prancer and last but not least Vixen, those are the eight reindeer. They leave presents to all good boys and girls.

They sing Christmas carols and sit by the fireplace and they have a good time exchanging gifts.

Christmas is a happy time for some people and a sad time for others. There are many people who can't have gifts and other things like toys, clothes and a big Christmas dinner. Some people that can't give gifts, have something better that can't be bought, love. While people are happy opening gifts others are sad but everyone still can give love. Love is much greater than any gift. And that's what Christmas is to me.

Christmas means to me sharing and loving all. Christmas is joining together with my relatives. On Christmas eve I like to shake my Christmas presents. I also like to wake up real early in the morning.

But my mother always says, "Get up to bed." We usually go up to bed then come back down again. On Christmas day I like to play with my gifts. Then I like to go to church to say a prayer for my lovely gifts I got for Christmas and for my cousin Lynn who died in a car crash.

After that I like to go to my Grandmothers house for Christmas and a happy time.

Christmas is a time to give presents to your mother, father, sisters, and brothers, and to other people. Christmas is fun. If God did not make us, we would not have a Christmas. My family loves Christmas because sometimes you get presents that you really do need!!! Its really fun when my mother's family and my father's family come over to our house. Christmas is not all the gifts one receives, it is when you get together with your family and share love!

Many people think Christmas is just for getting, they forget the real meaning. In my home it's not like that. A week before Christmas my family and I go out to get our Christmas tree, and after we do that we decorate it. Under the tree we put our homemade gifts, along with the Nativity Scene. That's what Christmas is really about. It is a day to remember, it is God's birthday, and that is how I hope it will stay.

Christmas is only twelve days away but it feels more like a hundred. Christmas is a time to be happy, joyful, pleasant and giving. It's a time to be thanking God that you are alive this very moment. I think that Christmas is a time that you should be celebrating Jesus' birth.

I think Christmas is a happy holiday. Christmas, in my house is a big family reunion.

Christmas joy is the expression of love. One day an Angel came upon Judah and said, "Fear not, for I bring you tidings of great joy. Christmas is a way of giving thanks, to the people you love. Christmas is when little children see the toys Santa brought them, and Merry Christmas is a pleasant sound you always hear."

Joseph Zappi

Christmas means to me a wonderful time of year when people get together. It means putting up a Christmas tree and singing Christmas carols, getting and giving gifts and having fun. Christmas also means the birth of Jesus.

Michelle Graham

The best thing I like about Christmas is, that it is Jesus' birthday.

It's a special holiday. Santa Claus comes down the chimney saying, "Ho, Ho, Ho. Merry Christmas", to everyone. Santa Claus fills your stocking with candy and toys.

Christmas is the time to love and be with your family, and to watch the bright lights on the Christmas tree and to sing Christmas carols, and to give not to get. That is what Christmas means to me.

Ralph Willard

I like Christmas because, when I give a present to someone, it makes me feel good that I just made someone happy. Christmas is a time when you and your family, friends, and relatives get together, and have a good time. I like to greet people at the door and talking to them. I also enjoy Christmas, by going out and singing Christmas Carols at people's doors. That's what Christmas means to me.

Christmas is a time to celebrate Jesus Christ's birthday. We celebrate his birthday by going to church.

We also celebrate Christmas with a Christmas tree and brightly wrapped presents. The gaily wrapped gifts are underneath the beautifully decorated tree. It is fun to open the presents and be thankful for everything. Christmas is the best day of my life!

David Carlson

Once upon a time over in the North Pole there was an evil man called Mean Mock Monster. He didn't like Christmas because it was so happy. He determined that he would stop Christmas.

On the night before Christmas he planned to put awful drugs that make you go crazy and make Santa's reindeer not able to fly. And so Santa won't be able to deliver all the toys to all the girls and boys. Well you know Santa, he's not that dumb. He always has someone guarding the reindeer so know one will harm them.

On the night before Christmas sure enough the Mean Mock Monster put something in the reindeer. But not the real potion. Just like I told you, Santa was much smarter than Mean Mock Monster. Santa knew that he was doing all this, and he had a plan of his own. He switched the potion so that all the Mean Mock Monster did was put more flying potion in the reindeer. So Santa Claus went around even faster to all the houses. And the Mean Mock Monster, I think that's the end of him!!!

What Christmas Means To Me...

Christmas means loving and caring about someone you like. The most important thing is making a present yourself. That present means a lot to the person you give it to. It isn't the present that counts, it's the care that is put into making the present for them.

Jeffrey Barker
Pollard School
Grade 5.

You might be wondering how Christmas got started. I'll tell you. A long time ago a man named Joseph was engaged to Mary. Mary was going to have a baby. One night an angel appeared to Mary and said, "Mary, you will have a son. You will name him Jesus."

The angel appeared to Joseph and said, "Joseph, Mary is going to have a baby. You will name his Jesus."

Joseph and Mary went to Bethlehem. Mary rode on a donkey. They found an inn. The innkeeper said, "I am full. I will let you use the stable." When they got to the manger in the stable Mary had the baby. They named him Jesus like the angel told them to. Three Wise Men came bringing gifts. Shepherds came, too.

On Christmas we should remember Jesus, because we are celebrating his birthday.

We give and receive gifts. That's what Christmas means to me.

What Christmas means to me is not just Santa and lots of presents, but it means the thought of giving, sharing, and loving. I like putting up lights and trimming the tree. Putting up the star is fun, the stockings too. I can smell roast beef in the air, and the smell of pies cooking, and pudding being made.

There is lots of fun and music. Candy and nuts are being passed around. Lots of laughter too. But the most important thing is Love. There is mistletoe hanging with poinsettias in a pretty green pot. Many warm faces and hearts, and also a nativity set. That is What Christmas means to me.

On Christmas people settle down in their houses while their children play games with each other. Sometimes aunts and uncles come over with their children. Sometimes my relatives invite my family over for a big Christmas dinner. Many people don't have a Merry Christmas because their poor and can't afford presents. Christmas means to me all the great things in my life. If there weren't a Christmas there wouldn't be as much happiness every year. Christmas is when we get toys, and people show love and respect to each other.

What Christmas Means To Me...

Once a year we buy a tree, the biggest tree you will ever see. With yellow, red and green glass balls. Surprise-Surprise that's not all. We put on the tinsel and on top a star. But are we finished - not by far.

Christmas is a time for receiving gifts, shopping for gifts, getting the meal, hanging decorations, putting up the tree and maybe putting on a fire, but often we forget the real reason we have Christmas. Children often believe in Santa Claus. There's really nothing wrong with that but they often forget the real meaning.

I like waking up early Christmas morning and seeing the gifts Santa leaves for the family. It is fun opening gifts and sharing, playing with them. My parents say it doesn't matter how much you spend on gifts. It's the thought of remembrance. This year I am making fudge and cookies for some people.

I remember one Christmas Day when I was seen under the Christmas tree by a four year old named Juliann Campbell. She really loved me a lot. She used to play with me every day. One day she got bored playing with me. I sat there in the corner of the den until one day her mother was cleaning up the den and put me and some other toys up in the attic. Ever since I've been sitting up in the attic. I still see her once in a while when she comes to take down the Christmas tree. Her mother said she was going to save us toys for when her children have children.

Christmas is for giving not for receiving. On Christmas you should not think of yourself. You should think of others. Christmas should be happy for others. What Christmas Means To Me...

To me Christmas is a joyful time of the year. It is a season when people and families get together and have a good time and give gifts. However, the best gift happened a long time ago. It took place in a manger in Bethlehem. The gift was the birth of baby Jesus. A gift no one could buy. Lots of gifts were received that night. The three wise men came bearing gifts of myrrh and frankincense. Mary and Joseph had the gift of Christ. The most precious gift of all was love. To me at Christmas love is the most important gift of all and that is what Christmas means to me.

Paul Cook

Christmas is a time for the World to be happy and to respect each other and think about the message Christ brought to us.

Christmas means to me the birth of our Lord Jesus Christ who was born in a stable in Bethlehem where he brought love and happiness to mankind to carry his message to each generation.

Donald Rosemond

Christmas means to me a time of caring, sharing, and loving. It is a time when people should give up things, and give to the needy and the poor. It is a time when you should not only think of yourself but other people. Christmas means to me a time of thinking of others.

My most memorable Christmas was when I was about seven years old. After we had all finished opening our presents, my oldest brother handed me a leash and said it was for our next dog. Our old dog had recently died and we were planning on getting a new one.

My brother then disappeared upstairs for a few minutes. When he came down, he had a big box under his arm. He said it was his present to the family. We all ran to it and opened it. When we opened it, we saw a cute little puppy looking up at us with her big brown eyes. We took her out and played with her all day and named her Fritz.

To me this was most memorable because it made us all happy and excited about our new dog.

What Christmas Means To Me...

Christmas is a time of love and giving. Receiving is fun too, but not the point. It is the most fun to see someone open the present you have given; There is love in that face. You have shown that you have cared. So you turn around and open a present, and you're happy too. You even have a great dinner, and when Christmas is over you'll never forget the fun you had.

Mike Hays

Christmas is for loving and sharing for giving gifts to one another. Singing Christmas carols and having plays and parties. For decorating your tree and windows. Christmas means a lot of happiness around the world. It brings happiness into peoples homes too. It's a time when we share. It's a time when we care a lot about people. And that's what Christmas means to me.

Patty Rinehart

Christmas is a time for trees to be put up and decorated with ornaments and Christmas lights. We give presents to our families and friends and they give presents back. Cards are mailed to people we know, and little children write letters to Santa Claus. Wreaths are hung on doors and windows. We sing Christmas carols and we go to church. We have a nice dinner of turkey with candy to eat and tonic to drink. The little children hang their stockings on Christmas Eve hoping for Santa to fill them with toys, and candy.

Christmas to me is the time for my family to get together. It is a time to show my love, happiness and to give.

I have a lot of fun on Christmas. singing Christmas carols, eating a big meal and just getting together with the people I love. Love is the greatest gift you can give someone for Christmas.

I am very lucky to have a family, food and a special Christmas because some kids don't have anything.

It's a time to celebrate for Christ was born.

I remember the time when my family and I, on New Year's Eve, all sat down together and sang Christmas carols we all had a lot of fun! My family and I were very happy to hear that my older brother came home for a week from the Navy.

On Christmas morning, I got up, opened presents, and ate my breakfast. Then I got ready for church. When we came home, I prepared to go to my Aunt's house. My aunt had everything out on the table. We all sat down at the table, and said Grace, then my other aunts, uncles, and cousins, came and gave everyone a present. Later on the day, my aunts, my mother, and I visited my grandmother. The day was passing by so quickly. Everyone went. We then looked forward to being together on New Year's Day.

What Christmas Means To Me...

Christmas means loving and sharing, giving and receiving, not only gifts but love for others. It is sitting by the big bright Christmas tree, talking over the new gifts.

It is waiting for the other relatives to come over, to eat the big feast.

I like Christmas time for lots of different things. I like the Christmas songs that everybody sings. I like Christmas trees in shops along the way. Best of all I like the things we give away. Mother will hang a wreath of holly on our door. As she's done each year at Christmas time before. On the window sill some Christmas lights will be shining on Christmas Eve for everyone to see. Christmas is the day when Christ was born, and I will go to church on Christmas morn.

Way down a steep hill in the North Pole was a [almost] house almost like a castle. There was a nice old man, a nice old woman, and a lot of little elves. A cottage next to it was filled with nine reindeers, Rudolf, Dunder, Blitzer, Dasher, Dancer, Comet, Cupid, Prancer, and Vixen. The old man loved to make things out of wood like, toys, chairs, tables, and other things. He decided to give toys to children all over the world, but he didn't know how to get there.

He had no car. So he went to his friend Wizard who lived inside of a mountain. His friend the wizard gave him nine flying pills to give to his reindeer. The nice old man gave them to his reindeer but didn't know how that would help. The Wizard told him to make a sleigh so he did.

He went back to the Wizard and the Wizard said, "When you were a young boy you had a red suit didn't you?" "Yes" said the old man.

"You will teach your little elves how to make toys just as good as you can. You will go around Christmas night you will call yourself Santa Claus."

"But what will I do with my sleigh and my flying reindeer?"

"On Christmas night you will load up your sleigh and hitch the reindeer to the sleigh. They will fly up to the sky."

"But what if its foggy out?"

"Rudolf will take care of that with his nose." So it was every Christmas night Santa Claus comes around with Rudolf leading the way.

What Christmas Means To Me...

Christmas can mean many things, such as singing around a Christmas tree. Christmas can mean going over a friend's or your grandmothers and eating a Christmas dinner. Christmas means Christ was born to bring peace to the world. It is a time for the whole world to show peace and gratitude. Christmas also means hope for the hostages, to be home with their families.

When will we live in tranquility?
When will we live in harmony?
When will the world be peaceful?

Yuletide is now!
Outside it is frigid.
It is a blizzard.
Beautiful icicles like upside down glaciers
Hang from the houses.
People in houses
For once are not thinking about prosperity. Avalanche!
We are snowbound.
But do we mind?

No, the silver and gold tinsel on the Christmas tree
Sparkle by the light of the fire.
Brotherhood and Goodwill live throughout the land.
Harmony and tranquility are now.

Christmas means to me loving, sharing and trying more. Another part of Christmas is Advent. It's the four weeks before Christmas when one is getting ready for the coming of Christ.

Christmas is sharing with the poor people. It is waiting for all your presents and putting up your Christmas tree. Going caroling and every one smiling and greeting each other is a very joyous time, too. I enjoy seeing the pretty lights and the manger, and lots of families and friends. It is really super when you're getting ready for Christmas.

Central Jr. Students Brighten Holidays For Others

Students from Central Junior High School have formed a group, "Crafts for Others", which meets Friday afternoons to work on projects to give to others to brighten their holidays.

The group's Christmas project has been to make wreaths for nursing homes and Christmas stockings filled with candy for the Quincy City Hospital children's ward.

Marcia Rosenblum, language arts teacher, is directing the group which has also worked on project for other holidays during the year.

For Halloween, students delivered decorative pencils and bags of candy to Quincy City Hospital. A canned food drive was conducted at Thanksgiving with the food donated to the Salvation Army.

Crafts for others is also planning projects for Valentines Day and Easter.

Among the students participating in the group are Jennifer McCauley, Pam Keddy, Bernadette Murphy, Suzanne Picard, Michelle McLaughlin, Liz Toland, Diane Veale and Kristin Howard.

Houghs Neck Community Council Holds Tree Lighting Ceremonies

The 20th Annual Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremonies of the Houghs Neck Community Council was held Sunday at the Houghs Neck Fire Station. Representatives of all church and civic groups took part.

Councilor Francis X. McCauley was master of ceremonies, and Councilor Leo J. Kelly officiated as the official "lighter", representing the City of Quincy. State Senator Paul Harold and Rep. Thomas Brownell brought greetings.

Devotions were led by Rev. James Hart of Most Blessed Sacrament Church and Rev. M. Alicia Corea, Houghs Neck

Congregational Church. Most Blessed Sacrament choir sang carols.

A wreath was placed at the veterans's memorial by a delegation from the Houghs Neck Legion Post. The delegation consisted of past and present commanders Willard J. Timcoe, William Morrill, John Christensen, Mary Timcoe and D. Paul Shaw, accompanied by Sergeant-at-Arms Robert Clarke. The Legion also arranged for Santa Claus to distribute candy to the children.

Mrs. William Gardner was chairwoman, with John Nigro, Council president.

Megan Johnson First In Wollaston Talent Contest

An audience of 400 were on hand Sunday to see Megan Blythe Johnson, a singer from Quincy, place first in the second quarterfinals of the Wollaston Theater's Amateur Talent Contest.

Other contest finalists, in the order in which they placed, were:

The Olson Brothers, a band from North Quincy High School; Laurie Coots, Cindy Mackin and Michelle McNeil, a singing trio from Quincy; Robin Healy, a 19 year old singer from Braintree; Ashot Gheridian, a 16 year old singer from Quincy High School; Sheila McIntyre, a Quincy singer; and 20 year olds Joseph Brooker and Steve Miceli, a guitar duo from Quincy.

The next quarterfinal contest will be Jan. 6, and there is still time to enter. For more information, call Edward Bennett at 471-3725.

Despite Sullivan Protest

School Committee Approves Payment Of Newspaper Ads

By BERNIE O'DONNELL
John Sullivan's crusade against two newspaper advertisements purchased by the School Committee failed to win the support of his fellow committee members last week.

The committee voted 4-1 against Sullivan's motion to stop payment on the ads.

The two full-page ads, outlining the committee's position in negotiations with city teachers, appeared in the Nov. 19 Patriot
Ledger and the Nov. 21 Quincy
Sun. The ad cost $1,700 in the Ledger and $232 in the Sun.

They contained a comparison of the salaries and workloads of teachers in Quincy and 16 surrounding communities, as well as the committee's proposal for conducting "reduction in force" layoffs. The ads appeared as school negotiators and representatives of the teachers union entered the fact-finding stage of their recently completed contract talks.

All four members of the negotiating committee approved the ads, according to Patricia Toland, committee vice-chairwoman. The ads were placed in Mrs. Toland's name.

Sullivan and fellow board member Christopher Kennedy are not members of the negotiating committee and were not consulted on the ads. Both have relatives employed as teachers in the school system and do not take part in or vote on negotiations to avoid possible conflict of interest.

Sullivan called the ads "Confusing" and "in poor taste" and noted that they were not approved by the entire committee.

"I don't think the taxpayers should be forced to pay for this sort of advertisement," Sullivan said. He motioned that no public funds be spent on the ad and that the persons responsible pay for the ads themselves.

Mrs. Toland, Francis Anselmo,
Kennedy and Joan Picard voted against Sullivan's motion, while Mary Collins, saying "I wouldn't even dignify the motion with a reply", abstained.

Both Kennedy and Anselmo commented that, while Sullivan's complaints had some merit, the negotiating committee was within its rights in purchasing the ads.

Boy Scout Night Dec. 20

The Blue Granite District of the Boy Scouts, which serves 1,300 boys through 43 units in Quincy and Milton, will hold an open house Thursday, Dec. 20, at 7 p.m. at the following locations:

Wollaston Congregational Church, Winthrop Ave.,
Wollaston; Lincoln Hancock
School, Wood Floor Room, 300

McDonald, Kelly Clash Over N.Q. Condominium

being put on? On the State Building Commission?

McDONALD - I don't know. We had that . . .

KELLY - I'd like to know because, Mr. McDonald, you made quite an accusation after I seconded the motion and I'd like to know what you're talking about. If you're alluding to the State Building Commission, then say the State Building Commission is political.

McDONALD - I don't know what they are because I haven't had the hearing yet.

KELLY - What are you saying then?

McDONALD I am saying there was a special meeting called last Friday because some high officials asked for it, okay.

KELLY - You made an accusation and you're not making it very clear. Say it. Lay it right out here. Say what you're feeling. Say what you're implying. I'd like to know what you're talking about.

McDONALD - I'm saying . . .

KELLY - I seconded a motion out here.

McDONALD - Well, go ahead and second it.

KELLY - I have seconded it. Now you're saying something's political and something's hanky panky. What are you talking about?

McDONALD - I said I would accept the finding of the board provided it was weighed on its merits. All right?

KELLY - And now you say something different. Now you're saying it's political. What are you talking about?

McDONALD - I'm talking . . .

KELLY - Say what it is!

McDONALD - I'll say what it is.

KELLY - Well, do it!

McDONALD - We had a meeting last Friday that was called. All right? And I asked why the meeting was called. We had been over and over this thing. They had a call from somewhere in the State House asking to have this meeting. That's why I'm taking that position tonight.

KELLY - Mr. McDonald, you made quite an accusation.

McDONALD - Sure I did.

KELLY - Well, then say what you mean. Is the State Building Commission, is that political? Is it being used in this issue?

McDONALD - I . . .

KELLY - If it is then say it.

McDONALD - I have no idea that . . .

KELLY - Then what are you talking about? You came up here and said something's political, some board's political. And you say it after the motion has been made and duly seconded.

McDONALD - I didn't say . . .

KELLY - What are you talking about?

McDONALD - I'm talking about the hearing. That if it's weighed on its merits I'm happy with it. If it's weighed . . .

KELLY - That's not what you said.

McDONALD - That's exactly what I said.

KELLY - You said somebody's playing politics.

McDONALD - I said that we had a special meeting Friday and when I asked why we had the meeting, it was at the request of a high official at the State House. That's what I said.

KELLY - Mr. McDonald, what are you talking about? You made quite an accusation. Say what you're talking about. What is political? Who is political? And who is putting the pressure on whom? Now that's clear. Now you made an accusation. What are you saying?

McDONALD - What more can I add to it then what I've said?

KELLY - Good God, Mr. McDonald, you're not sitting up here and voting on what you just said. I don't know what you would think if I just did that to you while you're seconding a motion. What are you talking about? Say what you mean.

McDONALD - I've said it.

KELLY - You didn't say it. You didn't say anything. You made an accusation and never backed it up. That's what you just did.

COUNCILLOR JOANNE CONDON - Mr. McDonald, I have sat in on a number of meetings and we've been going through this project for an entire year to reach the point that we're at tonight. And it's very clear that you have some problems with the egress. We're all aware of that. But you did say at the last two meetings that were held, that you would be agreeable to a ruling by the State Building Commission. It was your suggestion, sir, that if the builders chose to go to the State Building Commission, at your suggestion, that you would agree with the ruling.

McDONALD - Providing it was weighed on its merits. That's what I said.

CONDON - At the time that you suggested the State Building Commission you never indicated anywhere that I'm aware of about any political problems with the State Building Commission.

McDONALD - There weren't any at that time.

CONDON - What has developed since then that we're not aware of, Mr. McDonald, right up to this evening? Are you suggesting that the State Building Commission that you referred the city to as a resource is no longer a resource?

McDONALD - No, I did not say that. I said if it's weighed on its merits, I'm happy with it.

CONDON - Would you have a problem with us voting for it?

McDONALD - No, I don't have a problem on it. And if it goes to the board in there, weighed on its merits, I'm going to abide by it.

COUNCILLOR DANIEL G. RAYMONDI - I'm not all that clear what you're getting at unless you can give us the person who set up the meeting in the State House. Was there a person who called you and set the meeting up? Who was in charge of that meeting? There must have been a call for somebody.

McDONALD - Rev. Baharian. Apparently, he set it up as a request from someone in the State House.

RAYMONDI - He set up the meeting?

McDONALD - To discuss this a little further.

RAYMONDI - And you thought that was unusual?

McDONALD - I did.

William Horne Memorial Bloodmobile Dec. 28 at St. John's School

The ninth annual William J. Horne III Memorial Bloodmobile will be held Friday, Dec. 28 from noon to 6 p.m., at St. John's School, first floor, Phipps St., Quincy.

The drive is conducted by the Quincy Red Cross with the assistance of Marion and William Horne of Quincy, whose son, William, died nine years ago of leukemia at age 23.

According to the Red Cross, blood supplies reach dangerously low levels during the busy holiday season.

The bloodmobile is scheduled for the Friday after Christmas to give people the opportunity to give an important gift of the season—a pint of blood.

Any healthy person age 17-66 (parental permission required for 17 years olds) can donate blood which can be credited to individuals, businesses or special groups.

For an appointment, call 471-3866 or 472-2700.

Harold Holds Party For St. Coletta

Some 138 children at St. Coletta's School, Braintree, participated Monday in a Christmas "thank you" party sponsored by Sen. Paul D. Harold.

The party was in recognition of the students' work in the annual competition to design Harold's Christmas card.

The winning entry, drawn by Kevin Gannon, has been printed on more than 2,000 Christmas cards Harold is sending to friends and officials in the district this year.

Students at St. Coletta's who participated in the design contest were treated to ice cream and cookies and each received a special Senate citation recognizing their participation.

Entries were judged by the staff at the school, who selected Kevin's design as the best representation of the theme, "Christmas in Massachusetts."

The drawing depicts Santa Claus pointing to a decorated Christmas tree with gift packages, a Christmas wreath, and sprigs of holly.

Quincy Faces Powerful Long Island Saturday

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Quincy basketball team got off to a good start with two wins last week and the Presidents are looking forward to one of the season's high spots Saturday night.

Following a Suburban League game Friday at Newton North, the Presidents will face Valley Stream High School of Long Island, N.Y., a perennial state tournament team, Saturday at 6:30 p.m. at Boston University's Case Center.

This game, arranged by BU Coach Rick Pittino, is a preliminary to the BU-University of Charleston game.

"We are eagerly looking toward this game and we hope to make a good showing," said Coach Joe Amorosino. "Valley Stream is always in the state tournament and we know we are going to face a really strong team."

Last Friday Quincy played a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde role as it defeated Brookline, 78-62, in its league opener at Brookline.

The Presidents played a poor first half, committing fouls and missing foul shots but came back in the second half, displayed fine defense, passed well and shot well to outclass the home forces.

"That team in the second half was the one I expected us to be this season," said Amorosino. "We were tentative bringing the ball up in the first half and all we could do was commit fouls."

Just as they did in their opener against B.C. High, the Presidents got into early foul trouble and lost their rhythm. Brookline ran off eight straight points to take a 19-15 first period lead.

Quincy went ice cold from the floor and foul line in the second period as Brookline widened its lead to 32-19, but a late rally, sparked by Brian Donovan's six points, cut the halftime deficit to 36-32.

Things changed drastically in the second half as Andy Cerrera, Scott MacDonald and Rich Finnegan broke the Brookline press and moved the ball up quickly to feed Donovan and junior Steve Priscella underneath.

Donovan, 6-4 senior who led the team in scoring and was the league's No. 2 scorer last year, scored 30 points as he hit from everywhere.

The Presidents took a 50-48 edge into the final period and then completely outplayed the home club, outscoring it, 28-14, to win going away.

"Donovan played like he's capable of playing and everyone else picked up," said Amorosino.

Priscella, the team's No. 2 scorer as a sophomore last year, had 14 points, Finnegan had 16 and Stan Benson had 10.

Quincy had foul trouble galore in its opening night 63-54 win over B.C. High. Benson and Finnegan fouled out and Donovan had four on him.

"Our bench came through for us," Amorosino said. "Priscella scored 20 points and had 10 rebounds and pulled us through when B.C. closed in. Carrera was great both ways but the big boy for us in this game was Kurt MacDonald, a 6-4 junior, who came off the bench when Donovan got into foul trouble, scored 11 points and took down nine rebounds.

"I had to make changes in the lineup due to the fouls and I found out what our reserves can do. I'm pleased with the win and it is good to win when things don't go right."

Despite sitting out a good portion of the game with foul trouble, Donovan did score 12 points. He returned to action late in the game and hit four pressure free throws in the final minute to help the Presidents gain a comfortable edge.

Quincy will play in a Christmas tournament at Hingham on Friday, Dec. 28, and Saturday, the 29th. The Presidents will play Hull on opening night at 7 and Hingham will meet Weymouth North at 9. The championship and consolation games will be played at the same times Saturday.

Sports

MIKE DONOVAN, left, and Richard Joyce of Quincy have finished successful seasons with the Xaverian High School football team. The two played for both the varsity and junior varsity squads. The two juniors will be key players for Coach George McCabe's Hawks next year. They are currently playing varsity hockey.

Host Weymouth S. Friday

For Raiders, It's Nice To Be Home

It was a perfect setting last Friday night at North Quincy.

The Raiders were playing their first home game in three years in the beautiful new gym.

A large crowd was on hand including many former North players, who came to get the Raiders off on the right foot.

The game was broadcast by Station WATD (Marshfield) with Roger Hohman doing the play-by-play and Quincy's Bob Fisher, former Rockland coach, the color.

And Eddie Miller's North team capped the night with an impressive 58-44 Suburban League victory over Brockton.

The Raiders will host Weymouth South Friday at 8 and next Thursday will be home to the undefeated defending state champion Cambridge Rindge and Latin at 8. They will play in a Christmas tournament at Silver Lake on Dec. 28 and 29, facing Plymouth-Carver in the opener.

"This was a good night," Miller said. "It was the first home game I've had since becoming head coach and it was a fine crowd. It was a good game to win and I was pleased with our overall performance."

Junior Mark Millane had a big night with 15 points and 12 rebounds and was given Station WATD's Most Valuable Player award.

"Mark was outstanding as were Bill O'Connell and Rich Keenan," Miller said. "O'Connell scored 15 points and was excellent off the boards as we controlled both boards and Keenan scored 14 points, had eight assists and did some fine ball handling."

North came out fast and took a 19-10 lead after one period. Brockton came back to tie it at 24 but the Raiders scored six straight points to take a 30-24 halftime advantage.

"We came out flying in the third period and blew them off the court," Miller said. "We led, 49-32, going into the final period as the whole team did just an excellent job. We shot 60 percent from the floor."

Johnson Holds Lead

Johnson Motor maintained its two-point lead in the Bantam League by defeating BoCar Printing, formerly the Black and Gold team, 5-1. Bill Lawless and Bob Doyle had two goals apiece and Bryan Provenzano one. Doyle and Ricky Miller had two assists apiece and Lawless, Jeff Murphy and Rich Cicchese one each. Mike Novak scored for BoCar with Brian Carney assisting.

The Quincy Sun gained a forfeit win over Burgin Platner.

Baskin Robbins defeated Doran & Horrigan, 5-2, on goals by Dick Kelley, Steve Golden, Jamie Seamons, John Burn and Jim McSweeney. Bob Drury had two assists and Steve Brennan, Golden, Rich Marnell, Kelley and Tom Ryan one each. Kevin Jennette and Phil Sheldone scored for Doran with assists for Sheldone, Jennette and John DiPietro.

Squirt A's Regain Top Spot

Quincy's Squirt A team regained first place in the South Shore Conference by defeating Milton, 6-1. Matt Furtado and Bobby Furlan scored two goals apiece and Billy Connolly and Mark Zimmerman one each. Dave Kurnelis and Connolly had two assists apiece and Zimmerman and Billy Roche one each.

Quincy now has a 10-1-1 record.

Pee Wee B's Win, 3-1

The Pee Wee B team, improving its record to 12-2-2, defeated Neponset, 3-1, on goals by Gerard Coughlin, Gerry Layden and George Hartford. Dave Fasano, Bill Connolly and Jim Milano had assists.

The Pee Wee B's tied Brockton, with Coughlin scoring two goals and Chris Doyle one. Connolly, Fasano, Mark Simonelli, P. J. Hussey and Layden had assists.

In a non-league game The B's bombed South Boston, 10-0.

Elks Defeat Randolph

The Quincy Elks Pee Wee A team defeated Randolph, 4-1, on goals by Peter Furtado, John Reinhardt, Bobby Kane and A. J. Pugliese. Chris Marshall and Mike Haynes had two assists apiece and Mike Hays, Ted Hohmann and Reinhardt one each. Robbie Flannery and Tim Collins were in goal.

3 Shine For Track Club In N.J. Meet

Linda Kennedy, Sheila Barrett and Vicki Finlayson of the Quincy Track Club turned in excellent performances last Saturday in the National Junior Olympics in Hightstown, N.J.

Kennedy placed 21st and Barrett 28th in the 12-13 girls over the two-mile course. Kennedy received a medal and Barrett a ribbon.

In girls 16-17 Finlayson placed 42nd over a 3-mile course.

Robbie Glynn, who was expected to do well in the 10-11 boys, pulled a hamstring midway through the race and did not finish. He placed 11th in 9 and under boys last year.

Suburban, Firefighters Win

Suburban Disposal kept its five-point lead in the Midget House League with a 6-4 victory over the Caddy Marines.

Scott Freeman had a hat trick and Dick Comeau, Bill Joyce and John Joyce one goal each. John and Bill Joyce, and Jamie Doyle had two assists apiece and Joe Lamparelli, Bill Thomas and Paul McCabe one each. Steve Baylis had two goals for Caddy and Dave Clifford and Mike Panico one each. Baylis had an assist.

Quincy Fire stayed in second place by topping the Police Club, 6-1, sparked by Paul Reinhardt's four goals. Tom Hennessey and Bill Stone had one goal each. John Grenier and Steve Hall had two assists apiece and Reinhardt, Stone, Joe Cellini and Vin Whelan one each. Darby Flaherty scored for Police.

St. Joseph's Defeats Immaculate Conception, 54-52

St. Joseph's CYO basketball team defeated Immaculate Conception of Weymouth, 54-52, in overtime, to open the Quincy Vicariate season.

Dave Austin and Jim Travers scored three overtime points each to lead St. Joseph's to the win. Paul Bandera's two foul shots with five seconds left in regulation play sent the well-played game into the extra period.

Austin led all scorers with 20 points, while Bandera had 11. Travers scored eight, Peter Memmolo six, Mike Cronin five, Mike Trubiano two and Jim Paolucci one. John Griffin and Bill Johnson scored 12 points apiece for Immaculate.

St. Joseph's will play St. John's tonight (Thursday) at 8:30 at Sterling Junior High.

At Youth Arena

Quincy, North Square Off Saturday

The Quincy and North Quincy hockey teams will clash Saturday at 6:40 p.m. at the Youth Arena after opening their Suburban League seasons yesterday (Wednesday).

Next Wednesday Quincy will host Weymouth South at 6:40 at the Youth Arena.

Kevin Lewis' North team split two non-league games last week, dropping a 3-2 heartbreaker to Barnstable last Saturday at the Kennedy Rink in Hyannis.

Barnstable won the game with a disputed goal with four minutes left in the game and had scored earlier on another controversial goal.

Tom Gerry and Leo Graham scored the Raider goals but the big man was goalie Bobby Tierney, who was amazing. He had 30 saves and in the third period stopped 16 shots while North had only two shots on the Barnstable goalie.

"Bobby was absolutely outstanding," Lewis said. "We played a good game against a very strong team but everyone agreed there were several questionable calls by the officials."

Earlier in the week North had bombarded Boston English, 11-0, at Boston Arena as Lewis had a chance to use everyone and was pleased with the showings of several underclassmen.

Sophomore Mike McNeice had a hat trick and Graham added two goals. Mark Andrews, Steve Igo, Billy Nee, Rick Reinhardt, Chris Coleman and Kevin Duff each had a goal.

Tierney, Danny Newcomb and Don Golden split the goalie chores.

Bob Sylvia's Quincy team broke even in a pair of games in the Buckingham Browne & Nichols jamboree at Cambridge.

The Presidents lost to Thayer, 4-0, last Friday, but came back Saturday to top Browne & Nichols, 6-4.

Robbie Craig scored two goals and John Furey, Bob Currier, John Balus and Scott Richardson had a goal each. Jim Campbell and Chuck Dooley divided the goalie duties.

"I feel these two games against prep school powers will help us," Sylvia said. "I think both teams are as strong as any we will play in our league and we made a good showing against both. We had our chances against Thayer but couldn't capitalize."

Central Wins Girls Volleyball Crown

Coach Tom Henderson's Central Junior High girls' varsity volleyball team won the city championship recently when it topped Broad Meadows, two games to one.

The Central girls finished with a 6-2 league record and split two games with Milton junior high teams.

Central won its first game against Atlantic, then lost the next two to Sterling and Point.

The champs rebounded, however, and won their last five games in a row, two over Broad Meadows and one each over Atlantic, Sterling and Point.

Most of the girls were playing volleyball for only the second season. With the exception of seven newcomers, the team consisted of the same 23 girls who compiled a 6-2 junior varsity record a year ago.

"I am extremely pleased with the progress the girls have shown in only two years and I expect many of them to play at Quincy and North Quincy high schools next year on both the varsity and junior varsity levels."

Sterling Rolls Along

By PETE ZOIA

The unbeaten Sterling Junior High varsity basketball team defeated Central and Atlantic during the past week and has now defeated every team.

Jim Snodgrass' Sterling club walloped Central, 52-23, and scored more points in the first half than Central had in the entire game as it took a 32-13 lead.

Sterling continued to coast the remainder of the game. Outstanding for Sterling were Jeff Timberlake with 13 points and Kevin Riggs with 10. For Central Bob Mudge had six points and Jim Kelly five.

In the junior varsity game, Central was the victor, 22-16. Jack Bolster was high for the winners with eight points and Paul Kenney led Sterling with four.

Atlantic proved no match for Sterling this time around as Sterling romped, 54-34. Never behind, Sterling's quickness proved fatal for Atlantic. Three players had double figures for Sterling, Mark Righini with 14, Riggs 12 and Timberlake 10.

Scoring most for the Northerners were Pete McGillicuddy with seven along with Dave Ceurels and Greg DiBella's six each.

The Atlantic Jayvees salvaged a 29-18 win. Brian Gibbons and Dennis Cronin had seven points each for Atlantic. Paul Kenney led Sterling with six.

All was not futile for Atlantic for the week as it defeated Broad Meadows, 51-29. It was close contest after one period, with Broad Meadows trailing, 11-12. Atlantic opened up the gap to 28-19 at halftime. Both coaches used reserves most of the second half with Atlantic continuing its steady scoring. Dave Ceurels glistered for Atlantic with 14 points. Teammates Pete McGillicuddy and Jim Whitehouse came up with 11 and nine points respectively. Mike Williams led BM with 11 followed by Paul Connolly with seven.

The unbeaten Atlantic Junior Varsity won, 25-19. Gibbons with seven tallies and Jeff Striker getting six led the victors. Tony Cascarano pushed in nine points for Broad Meadows.

Central also managed to split for the week with a 39-23 win over Point. It sped to a 16-6 margin at the half. It built up a 24-13 lead after three periods, zeroing into the final 15-10 scoring quarter.

Highlighting for Central, Tim Ryan hit for 14 points and John Purland got eight. Hard working Sal Lorenzano banged in 10.

The Central Jayvees trounced Point, 44-18. Bob McElaney starred with 10 points. Three of his mates, Paul Ryan, Kevin Kelly and Dennis Downing, managed six points each.

For Point, Sean Aruda collected six points.

First Ladies Home To Newton North Raiderettes At Weymouth South

The Quincy girls' basketball team got off on the right foot last week when it pounded Brookline, 63-32, in a Suburban League game.

The First Ladies will host Newton North on Friday at 3:15 p.m. at the Quincy High gym.

Susan Callahan had a big day with 26 points, including seven for nine at the foul line, and Laura Riley pulled down six rebounds.

Anne McCarron had 13 points for Quincy, which jumped off to a huge 39-14 halftime lead after leading, 23-9, after a period.

The North Quincy girls were not so lucky as they dropped a 40-29 decision to Brookline.

The Raiderettes will play at Weymouth South Friday and will be at Cambridge Rindge and Latin next Thursday. Both games start at 3:15.

North trailed by only a 22-19 score at the half but Brookline broke the game open in the second half.

Debbie Curry placed North with 14 points and Jackie Thayer had eight. Julie Watts had nine rebounds and Cheryl Ames took down nine.

THE ASPIRIN MYSTERY

Aspirin, the commonest of all drugs, has for 50 years been one of the most mysterious. Everybody knows it works, but nobody knew how. Now, at last, science may have found the answer.

The discovery came out of research on compounds called prostaglandins, which are found in almost every tissue of the body. They cause fever, pain, and swelling - symptoms which may be annoying, but which help the body fight infection. British researchers have now found that aspirin reduces these bothersome symptoms by blocking the body's production of prostaglandins.

The solution to the aspirin puzzle is more than just a new piece of information - it's a chance to produce a whole variety of new drugs for all sorts of conditions including arthritis.

Highlights Of 'Sixty Minutes' Look At 'Earn It' does not make sense. Quincy Police Sgt. Don Riley.

RILEY—His programs have become more or less the butt of a joke. They allude to the possibility of creating a program for expositors called "Flash It," a program for crooks at the Pancake House called "Flip It." I think there's no fear of the law. There's certainly no fear of the police. The only thing that bothers them is the immediate inconvenience of possibly getting a ride in the wagon and spending a couple of hours in the lockup. They certainly have no fear of being in court.

RATHER—Criticism comes, not just from law and order police, but from liberal academics as well. Harvard Law Professor Allan Dershowitz.

DEWSHOWITZ—Restitution programs are very seductive and very alluring. They go back to the primitive instincts of "make people whole," but there are lots of practical problems. First of all, restitution programs can be used as a kind of extortion; we will use the criminal law against you really as a collection agency. Second of all, it discriminates against the poor. There are a great many people who simply cannot make restitution. Third of all, it simply applies to a very small number of people. Very few people are caught and only people who are caught, of course, can make restitution, indeed, only people who are convicted.

KRAMER—If the criminal is not tried, I can't deal with the issue. Now, let's talk about what I can deal with, what comes into my court. Out of the victims that come to my court I can deal with all of them. If I have 1,400 defendants (indistinct) victim, that means I'm dealing with 1,400 victims in this court. That's not insignificant, and that's multiplied. If this were multiplied across the country, and that's just $100,000 in this court, think of all the money that would go to victims.

DEWSHOWITZ—I think it presents a false hope to victims of crime that they will actually get money for their suffering and it won't happen with restitution programs.

RATHER—One objective of "Earn It" is to humanize the system.

(Offender, victim and court officers around table.)

WOMAN—First of all, let me introduce you. This is Mr. Michael Aucoine (?). Christopher Matthews (?).

RATHER—All victims are invited to meet their offenders. In this case, the offender had stolen a car and then smashed it into three other cars. One of which was owned by Michael Aucoine (?).

WOMAN—What is the extent of the damages to your car?

VICTIM—It was totaled.

WOMAN—It was totaled?

VICTIM—The whole... he hit the rear end of the car and pushed it right back to the windshield and, ah... hitting it in the back he caused it to hit another car in front so the front was smashed, too.

WOMAN—Do you remember that? Christopher?

OFFENDER—No. All I can remember about the whole thing basically is just running.

WOMAN—Just running?

OFFENDER—Afterwards. I thought I passed out. I opened my eyes and there was blood on the dashboard and everything. I couldn't see out the (indistinct). I just opened the door. Then I started running.

RATHER—The final goal of these conferences is to sign a contract agreeing to an amount the offender will repay the victim. Here, the agreement was quick and cordial. At the next conference, nothing was quick or cordial. This young man also stole a vehicle, a pickup truck owned by this young man.

VICTIM—I just went out and my truck wasn't there and there was all kinds of stuff all around, where you kind of tore everything apart. Remember that?

OFFENDER—No.

VICTIM—Kind of tore everything apart... ripped out the inside of my truck where everything was in...

WOMAN—Did you say something about the key being in the car?

OFFENDER—There was one silver key stuck in the ignition.

VICTIM—No, it wasn't. There's only one key to that truck. Don't lie.

OFFENDER—I'm not.

VICTIM—... so don't lie.

OFFENDER—All right, so how did I get it going?

VICTIM—I know how you got it going. You want me to go over to my house and show you?

OFFENDER—Don't tell me I'm lying.

VICTIM—I know you lie.

OFFENDER—You know I lie? That's what that estimate (of damage) is. That's also a lie.

VICTIM—You want me to, ah, go out to the store and maybe buy some beer or something and go over to your house and steal your father's car? How would you feel about that?

RATHER—The final disposition? The offender went to work at McDonald's to repay the victim $875. But before sentencing, this offender, like all others, was scrutinized by probation officers and psychologists, who get together to consider whether or not to recommend "Earn It" sentences to the judge.

OFFICER—... ah, this is a young man who has been struggling for some time with...

RATHER—All this attention and consideration given to offenders aggravates lots of Quincy residents but nothing aggravates them more than the court actually finding jobs for offenders who are unemployed. Job seekers complain that jobs should be given to law abiders, instead of law breakers.

RILEY—Good kids and bad kids are not treated equally in this town. It seems that there's an incentive for a kid... I have five of my own and I'd be very inclined to tell my oldest boy if he wants to get a good education don't bother to work hard, go and stick up a gas station and Judge Kramer will get him a good job and get him into a good school.

KRAMER—I don't think it's fun to go out and work 40 hours a week and make $120 and turn over $90 of your money to somebody else and keep $30 for expenses and do that for a whole summer or maybe for a whole year. I don't think that's fun at all. I don't think that's a break. I think that's a real penalty.

RATHER—Judge, that sounds terrific but you know there are any number of people... I want to be candid with you now... I find myself thinking there is your classic bleeding heart liberal point of view. Most of these offenders don't care where that brick lands. They don't care about the victim of the mugging. All they're looking for is to get out of it once they're caught and then they'll be right back doing the same thing.

KRAMER—The point of the court is, if you don't make up... if you don't take advantage of this, we're going to pull you right back and we're going to begin to apply pressure, oftentimes sentencing weekends until you do conform; if you can't do that I'll give you long sentences.

RATHER—Alternative sentencing schemes vary. In some states both male and female inmates are released daily to work at outside jobs to pay their victims. In some other states jobs are provided within prison walls. And now the federal government is starting to pour millions of dollars into various experimental programs.

RATHER—Do you think this is an idea that's going to catch on?

DEWSHOWITZ—I think it is an idea that's going to catch on. There is a lot of popular appeal to a program which is symmetrical, which takes something from the assailant and gives it to the victim, which tries to create a situation of making the whole thing whole. I think it's shortsighted in the sense that it really does cost the government money. The vast majority of the people who would be making restitution are people who can't even support their own families, who have obligations that come even prior to the obligation to support the victim and to the extent that money is diverted from them to the victim, it's going to have to be made up some other way. It's going to have to be made up by welfare, by payment to their attorneys. There's no such thing as free lunch, even in restitution schemes.

RATHER—And the victims themselves? Well, even some of them who were repaid, like this woman, remain unsatisfied.

MRS. CLEMENTS—I believe that if I'd have caught the teenagers that if I was just young enough and fast enough to catch that car I would have... for the first time in my life I would have killed somebody. I was just so mad.

RATHER—Martha Clements is a hospital secretary and the sole support her two teenagers sons. She says she worked one and a half years, 12 hours a day, to afford to buy a used car for $600. Soon after she drove it home, it was stolen and wrecked by a young woman and two accomplices. All were apprehended and sentenced to repay Mrs. Clements.

MRS. CLEMENTS—She just didn't steal my car, you know. She stole more than that. She stole everything that I believed in and everything I had to work for to get... this wasn't handed to me. I worked for that car.

RATHER—They caught the people who did it. Restitution was attempted.

MRS. CLEMENTS—Well, the restitution repairs the damage to the car. If it could repair the damage that it did to me and my family...

RATHER—Honestly now, do you think after going through this program that these same young people would have any hesitancy about doing this again.

MRS. CLEMENTS—They will continue doing it as long as they are getting away with it.

RATHER—And you think they did get away with it?

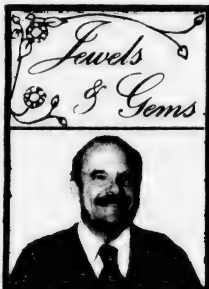

MRS. CLEMENTS—I think so.

RATHER—The final judgement on alternative sentencing is not yet in. But one thing is clear. It is not the cure all promised by overzealous advocates. The number of victims helped is small. The amount of money saved is questionable. Jail population is not sufficiently reduced. And offenders given alternate sentences continue to repeat crimes at the same rate as those sentenced in the traditional way.

KRAMER—... to the victims until they are all paid in full. Is that your understanding?

RATHER—But, while not a cure all, alternatives can provide some modest remedies. And given the widespread discontent with the current court system, alternatives like "Earn It" have increasing political appeal.

KRAMER—What is interesting is the tremendous support we get from conservatives and liberals, conservatives saying "It's about time they were made to go to work and not just given a break," and liberals who say that "jail is a crazy system; it's good that you give them an opportunity to work back."

Wildly fluctuating prices aside, it might make sense to collect gold pretty soon. Scientists have discovered uses of gold that may soon demand a large quantity of the world's supply. These uses involve energy. Researchers have discovered that gold-reflective window panes help cut heating and cooling costs. Also, scientists have found that gold is very useful in lining nickel alloy containers designed to store nuclear waste. With the current concern about energy conservation and safety, you can bet gold demand will continue to rise with no limit to potential price increases.

If you are interested in gold jewelry, come by soon and look over our fine selection at GROVO & CHRISTIE, INC., 536 Adams St., East Milton, 696-1490. We still have a nice choice of jewelry for Christmas gifts and are willing to take the time to help you make that right selection. Codman Bell Ringers Perform At Kiwanis Meeting

The Codman Bell Ringers, directed by Bernice Hunt, presented a program of Christmas music at the Quincy Kiwanis Club's Christmas meeting Monday at Christ Church.

The program was arranged by Ted Whittredge, and the Bell Ringers performed on 39 bells made by the Whitechapel Bell Foundry, England.

The bells were purchased several years ago by the late Delavere King for the Granite Trust Bell Ringers, directed at the time by Ted Whittredge.

They later became known as the Quincy Bell Ringers and eventually the Codman Bell Ringers.

There will be no Kiwanis meeting Dec. 24. The meeting that week will be Thursday, Dec. 27 at Dutton's Restaurant.

Josiah's Journal

Quincy Cooperative Bank

Our 90th Birthday Edition

December, 1979

We've Come a Long Way, Josiah

1889

A year that opened up a wholly new era for America.

It was the year that Nellie Bly set off to circle the world in less than 80 days.

It was the year that the French were building the Eiffel Tower.

And the great Johnstown flood occurred taking 2200 lives.

And Harry Truman was five years old.

Benjamin Harrison became President of the United States -- electric lights were just coming into vogue, the telephone was still a novelty and movies were not yet ready for theater showing.

Having voted for the idea in 1888, Quincy began operating as a City in 1889.

And in that historic year of 1889, The Quincy Co-operative Bank was created by 630 sturdy citizens of Quincy who subscribed $690 to get the new bank started.

Now, 90 years later and with assets of $128,000,000, The Quincy Co-operative Bank not only celebrates its significant birthday this year but we look forward to a continuation of our progressive banking services for the South Shore. To celebrate our 90th Birthday, we created this newspaper to pay tribute, in a historic sense, to the City of Quincy and the Towns of Braintree, Cohasset and Hanover where we have banking facilities.

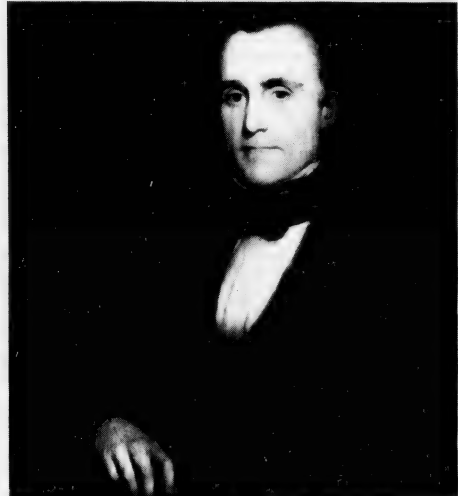

Josiah Quincy founded co-operative banking and we named our Bank for him. Seeing our growth and progress over the past 90 years, we are certain that Josiah would have liked that.

How it all started for us: this 1889 handbill announced the first meeting to sign up shareholders for the Quincy Cooperative Bank.

Quincy Square . . . Years Ago

Hancock Street, sweeping north to Boston, divides this nineteenth century photograph from the First Parish Church in Quincy Square. Spire of Adams Academy may be seen pointing to the center of the First Parish Church. Town River and Broad Meadows are visible near the horizon.

Old Bethany Church, where the South Shore Bank now stands, dominates this old photograph taken from the First Parish Church belfrey, looking south. The spire of St. John's church can be barely seen rising from the large dark mass which is the present Greenleaf Building on Granite and Hancock Street.

Quincy in 1889

Granite Was The Keystone

They rose early in the morning to a fortifying breakfast of oatmeal and eggs for there were nine and ten hours ahead of them deep in the bowels of the hills, blasting and hacking at the stubborn stone or tooling it into shapes of beauty in the sheds where the fine dust hung heavy in the air and the unseen peril was stonecutters' lung.

There were perhaps 2,500 of them, the granite cutters and quarrymen of Quincy, 2,500 in a population of 16,000, most of them with names that rolled awkwardly off the old Yankee tongue, Finns, Swedes, Irishmen, Scots, and Italians.

The better ones made up to $3 a day, $18 a week, and their wives spent it on such necessities as butter at 32 cents a pound right from the tub at W. H. Doble's store, corner of Franklin and Water Streets, Quincy Adams, and a half house of five rooms on Canal Street, just right of a thrifty granite cutter's family, rented for $9 a month. A home of his own for a workman was a thing of dreams.

Their pleasures were simple: a Sunday meal at J. F. Bird's Ladies and Gents' Restaurant and Ice Cream Rooms at Chestnut and Hancock Streets; cheering their champion West Quincys baseball team as it beat up on the Actons or the King Phillips from Rockland at the Hall Place Grounds; enjoying a concert by the City Band under the electric lights on the vacant lot adjoining the office of George Prescott's weekly Patriot on Hancock Street.

Those who felt the need of strong drink at the end of the work week paid their 15 cents and caught the Old Colony's 7:15 to the fleshpots of Boston on a Saturday night for Quincy was dry, its dram shops and saloons shuttered for, lo, these seven years through the efforts of the omnipresent Henry Hardwick Faxon, who saw to it that the law was passed and then had himself named constable to enforce it.

It was difficult to think of Charles Hunt Porter, the 46-year-old Civil War hero as "mayor" when it "Necessarily there will be a great deal of friction in starting, and this, the first year, will be taken up in learning our duties. I bespeak the charity of all the citizens in our undertaking."

Charles H. Porter,
Quincy's first mayor

seemed like only yesterday -- and it was -- that Bill Hodges and Bill Eaton and Walt Ripley were the selectmen, a change that was recognized only grudgingly by some, the Adamses, the Spears, the Pinkhams, the Pattees, who used to run the old town meeting from "Wisdom Corner" in the Town Hall.

From his mansion on President's Hill, Charles Francis Adams Jr., retired railroad magnate and historian, fourth in a noble line that began with the second president of the United States, watched the bourgeoning, bustling city around him and mourned for the town of his boyhood when "the place was still peopled by those of the original stock; for foreign and more particularly the Irish element had not yet reached the self-asserting point."

It was Quincy in 1889, brash, restless, testing its bounds, half-city, half-suburb, confident of its future yet reluctant to cast aside its ties with the past. It was also the year in which the Quincy Cooperative Bank first opened its doors in the Hancock House at the corner of Canal Street (later Revere Road) and Hancock Street.

It was granite that did it.

All day long the city echoed to muffled explosions in the hills and the ring of the hammer and the grinding of the drill, for the demand for stone for building and for Civil war memorials was insatiable and the best stone around was dug from the hills of Quincy, a peculiar form of granite called "syenite," rich in hornblende, hard, weather-resistant, able to take a brilliant polish. Thus blessed, Quincy was on the threshold of becoming the world center for granite.

The census of 1885 turned up the fact that more than half of the 150 manufacturing and mercantile establishments in the city had something to do with granite. Sixty-six dealt in stone, 22 in building materials and the number was growing. One or more granite firms had been started each year since the end of the Civil War. The value of building materials and stone work totalled nearly $2 million, nearly three times that of boots and shoes, the old staff of business life. Daily, ships like the schooner "Fanny and Fay," Captain Mehaffey commanding, cleared the wharf in Quincy Point loaded to the gunnels with granite for New York.

They Came From Everywhere

The city's population in 1880 was 10,571, second only to Weymouth on the South Shore. The state counted 12,415 in 1885 and by 1890 it would be 16,723, more than a third again the size of Weymouth.

Many of the newcomers were immigrants. The Irish and the Scots were first. By 1889 they had become so woven into the fabric of Quincy life that it could be said with admiration of John R. Graham, the Irish-born shoe manufacturer who was elected to the first City Council from Ward 2, that "he pays more taxes than any other councilman." Then came the Swedes and Finns and, lastly, the Italians, artists in stone from Lombardy and Tuscany, laborers from Naples and Abbruzzi, many of them funneled into the main-stream of Quincy life through the Water Street home of John Capaccioli, the sailor who settled down to rig derricks for the quarries and became the unofficial head of the Italian colony in Quincy.

It was dangerous work. The gunpowder that was used to blast loose the granite blocks was an uncertain explosive device. There were falls from the long ladders that descended into the earth as the men quarried deeper and deeper for the best stone. But the most insidious hazard of all was stonecutters' lung, or granite TB, that came from years of breathing the fine stone dust. In fact, Dr. John Alexander Gordon, who had just obtained a charter for a hospital on President's Hill, made his reputation with the monograph, "Tuberculosis Among the Granite Cutters of Quincy."

Quincy was now a city. The town meeting voted 812-454 for the city charter in a special election July 11, 1888, after four years of controversy during which it was proposed that Wollaston and Atlantic, with their rising populations of affluence, be set off as a separate town, while another school of thought felt that West Quincy, where most of those brawling, aggressive Irish quarrymen lived and worked, be cast adrift as the new town of "Willard."

Charles H. Porter, the insurance man and president of the Quincy Water Co., was mayor, a solid Republican elected handily over the Democrat, William A. Hodges. Porter was a legitimate war hero, enlisting in the Union army in the summer of '62 as a private and fighting his way with Grant through the wilderness, Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor and Petersburg to Lee's surrender at Appomattox. He came out a captain.

In his inaugural address, Porter pleaded for patience and understanding. "Necessarily there will be a great deal of friction in starting," he said, "and this, the first year, will be taken up in learning

Charles H. Porter

our duties. I bespeak the charity of all the citizens in our undertaking."

The most important matter facing the new administration was rebuilding the 86-year-old bridge over the Neponset River. Mayor Porter recommended widening it, too, for he expected that the Quincy and Boston Street Railway, which had just taken over the Quincy Street Railway, would soon seek to run tracks over the bridge so folks could ride from Quincy all the way to Boston. The Quincy and Boston made its first trip from Quincy Square to Atlantic on May 18, negotiating the three miles in a half hour.

There was also concern for the 80 miles of highway in the city. The roads were beginning to show the wear and tear brought on by the demands of heavy industry. Only six of them were paved — Granite, School and Washington Streets for less than half a mile each, Quarry and Goffe Streets and Newport Avenue for far less.

"The extremely narrow tires upon the stone teams, loaded heavily as they are, crush through all but the strongest and best of roads," said Mayor Porter. "We cannot afford to have all our highways macadamized but I believe that our principal streets should have as thorough and efficient work done upon them as possible."

Not everyone was pleased with the city's new found prosperity and one of them was Charles Francis Adams Jr., who witnessed it all with sadness from the big house set back on Goffe Street (later Upland Road) overlooking the busy square.

"The hills have been stripped or gutted or built over, made common and vulgarized, or devastated and turned into a mining horror, while the islands have lost their green, whaleback outlines under the eruption of summer hotels and seashore cottages," he wrote in despair. "With local feeling, traditions are also gone. As I pass to-and-fro in Quincy I now seem to wander with ghosts."

He missed running things, too, as he did with his brother, John Quincy Adams, in the days when Quincy was a town, although he was a wee bit jealous of John Q., as he confided in his autobiography, "I never was sympathetic or popular; he, somehow, was. He was in close touch with the people of Quincy; me, they were disposed to look at a bit askance."

"We both delighted in town meetings" he went on. "Its atmosphere — in the oclafactory way pretty bad at times — came naturally to us; we were bone of their bone, flesh of their flesh; and the mass of those there knew it and felt it; and for 20 years we together practically managed Quincy affairs."

Year after year, John Q. was elected moderator of the old town meeting and, with brother Charles, made things run smoothly with the aid of the elders from "Wisdom Corner," a section of the hall where sat Edwin W. Marsh, John Q. A. Fields, William G. A. Pattee, George F. Pinkham, Horace B. Spear, Warren W. Adams, Rupert P. Claffin, Col. Abner B. Packard, Theophilus King and James H. Slade.

But all that had changed now with the coming of the 23-man City Council, five elected at large and three from each ward. The new political leaders of Quincy included the Irish trio from Ward 4, James F. Burke, the granite cutter; Patrick F. Lacy, the blacksmith and granite polisher; and William T. Shea, whose redeeming quality was that he was president of St. Mary's Catholic Abstinence Society; and Levi Stearns, recently the janitor at the John Hancock School.

Among the earliest ordinances passed by the new Council, in its wisdom, was one directing that "no person shall ride in any carriages, or drive any horse or horses in any street in this city at a rate of speed exceeding 8 miles an hour."

Very early, the Council was faced with the unpleasant task of raising some $60,000 to replace the Willard School in West Quincy, which had been destroyed Feb. 17 in the city's most disastrous fire in many years. The fire pointed up some inadequacies in the Fire Department, which included Chief John W. Hall, six assistants, five permanent men and 68 call fire fighters. For one thing, the alarm sounded only in West Quincy and Atlantic. For another, the Steamer never did get to the fire, even when summoned by telephone (64-Ring 3).

There was also the knotty problem of those strange, stubborn people who called themselves the Salvation Army. Brother Thomas Northcott simply refused to abide by the new ordinance that forbade singing and playing of musical instruments in streets or public places, except for funerals, military parades or processions of political, civic or charitable organizations. When they insisted on marching, three men, three women and 16-year-old Alexander Damon were arrested for performing on musical instruments, to wit, a tambourine and a drum, on Hancock Street.

If you walked the streets of Quincy in the year 1889, perhaps the first thing you would notice was the complete absence of liquor stores and bars — or saloons, as they were called with some disparagement. The city, and the town before it, had been dry since 1882 when the citizens, able to make their voices heard on the license question for the first time, voted 1,057 to 475 to close down its 42 legal establishments, and the man responsible for it all was a 65-year-old retired grocer named Henry Hardwick Faxon, who could be seen daily in the streets of Quincy, enforcing the law as a constable.

Faxon, scion of a family that settled in Old Braintree in the 17th Century, was perhaps the best known single individual in Quincy. The Boston Sunday Herald of July 7, in an article on rising politicians, referred to Quincy as "Mr. Faxon's

Granite was the most notable industry in Quincy in 1889 and was still important in 1921 when this photograph was taken of Granite Railway Company's Quarry No. 3, looking west. The company had been incorporated in 1826 and it established the first railway in the United States.

This police force, appointed about three years after Quincy became a city, included (back row) John Halloran, Michael Canavan, Daniel R. McKay, Thomas F. Ferguson, Charles Crooker, and (front row) Charles G. Nicol, Mark E. Hanson, George O. Langley and Joseph W. Hayden.

Quincy in 1889

The Man Who Hired Dry Spies

city." He was scarcely 38 years old when he retired from Faxon Brothers and Co., wholesale grocers, in 1861 to devote the rest of his life to the holy cause of temperance. It took 20 years of single-minded devotion to win a state law permitting cities and towns to vote on local license. His own Quincy was among the first to oust the liquor dealers and Faxon was elected constable to see that they stayed out. He was, in short, a fanatic, a brilliant, successful fanatic.

"Frank and fearless of speech, unsparing in his attack on individuals, deaf to the sarcasm and ridicule that assailed him, he was ready to expose himself to physical danger for his cause," wrote a contemporary. "Much of his security and success was undoubtedly due to his imperturbable good nature. He enjoyed giving and taking blows. He kept his temper in defeat. He was never malignant, vindictive or bitter. He was a gallant fighter, honest, sincere and fair. The only way he knew of carrying his point was that of open, specific and often drastic attack."

As an aid in enforcing Quincy's liquor laws, Constable Faxon, at his own expense, employed a number of men to spy on illegal liquor sellers and feed him information. He called them his "underground detectives."

"The informers are not required to appear in court," he told the Citizens Law and Order League of Massachusetts, one of his many affiliations, "and the lawless are puzzled as to the source of my knowledge concerning their business. In fact, they don't know whom they can trust. Many an innocent man has been called 'one of Faxon's damned spotters.'"

One of those innocent men was James A. McDonald of South Quincy and he didn't like it at all.

"I understand that there are reports through Quincy about my conduct and meanness in selling myself to Mr. H. H. Faxon as a spotter, and receiving money from him for such purposes, which causes trouble wherever I work," he fumed in an angry letter to the editor of the Patriot, a letter directed "to all whom it may concern."

"Whoever says I ever received any money of H. H. Faxon on any purpose, or know of my handling any of his money, tells that which is false. I would like to meet those who think different, in some decent or public place . . ."

McDonald notwithstanding, most of Quincy was firmly behind Faxon for it was reported in May, 1888, rather disdainfully that "The Quincy court is now reaping a harvest from the wild oats being sown in Randolph under license. Drunks from that Town are daily before the Tribunal."

Another familiar face around Quincy, one whose reputation also went beyond the bounds of the city, was the scholarly Dr. William Edward Everett, master of Adams Academy, which was only 17 years old but already attracting students from all over the world to study under the strict discipline of Dr. Everett, once acclaimed as one of the seven smartest men in the world.

He could be seen daily, trudging down Sea Street (later Chestnut Street) from his home in the old Miller House to the academy, bent over at the waist, at least one book under each arm, derby pulled down over his ears, ignoring friend, acquaintance and stranger alike, for his mind was usually preoccupied with some problem from academy.

Dr. Everett was known throughout Quincy as the man who hated Abraham Lincoln, and with good reason. Was he not the son of Edward Everett, whose splendid two-hour oration in the hot sun at a place called Gettysburg was forever overshadowed by a few scribbled notes "on the back of Lincoln's envelope?"

The greatest changes in the city of Quincy in 1889 were going on in the northern end of the city, the area between Furnace Brook and the Neponset River known as Wollaston, Atlantic and the Massachusetts Field, and the peninsula that stuck out in the bay that was called Squantum.

There were still folks who could remember well when the only house west of the Old Colony Railroad tracks between Atlantic and the Adams Mansion was George W. B. Taylor's home on Newport Avenue and only Beale Street wended its narrow, serpentine way from Hancock Street to East Milton through 200 acres of pasture land broken only by rail fences and stone walls.

The Wollaston Land Associates had changed all that with two decades of furious development under the astute business direction of George F. Pinkham, the "father of Wollaston," that pushed houses back from the tracks and up Wollaston Heights to the point where the Wollaston correspondent of the Patriot would ask the burning question: "who will build the first house on 'third hill'?"

Thirty four years after it was annexed to Quincy, Squantum was still a bone of contention between Boston and Quincy. It was, in fact, the stepchild of both.

A Mr. Hunt, who said he owned 470 of the 855 acres on the peninsula, reported in February, 1889, that the population of Squantum was 108 souls; that only seven of them were registered voters; that there were only three electric lights in the whole area; and that the city collected only $4,922.56 in taxes.

Hunt's report was made to the State Legislative Committee on Cities which was considering a proposal that Squantum and the part of Atlantic north of Atlantic Street be given back to Boston.

Calvin A. Richards, a summer resident of Squantum for 17 years, testified that "God's moon and stars were the only lights" in the area and that it cost him more to keep his carriages varnished than the city spent on Squantum highways. Mayor Porter replied that Quincy had spent $6,500 on the Causeway alone in the past 18 years and that it was in such condition that he found it to be an excellent place to race horses.

City Councillor William B. Glover, who lived on the corner of Newbury Street on the south side of Atlantic Street, said he feared that if the north side were annexed to Boston there would be an influx of saloons that would lower property values but Constable Faxon testified that it really didn't matter that much because he guaranteed to make Josiah Quincy, Jr.

They Thought He Was Someone Else

Josiah Quincy was, in and after his lifetime, the unknown Quincy.

It was not that he lacked accomplishment. He was graduated from Harvard, where he won the Boylston Prize for English composition over Ralph Waldo Emerson. He was companion and confidant of old John Adams and the Marquis de Lafayette. He was the mayor of Boston who brought water to the city from Cochituate Reservoir. He built pioneer railroads all over New England. And he founded the cooperative bank movement in Massachusetts.

But his light was hidden under a bushel of family. He was the fourth Josiah Quincy and there would be two more. His father was also mayor of Boston, "the Great Mayor," they called him. His brother, Edmund Quincy, was a best-selling novelist. His cousin was Judge Oliver Wendell Holmes. So was the widow of John Hancock, the patriot, and each and every member of the vast and prominent Adams clan. The town of Quincy was named for yet another cousin, several times removed.

Folks were forever mistaking him for someone else.

"Mr. Josiah Quincy dropped in to see John T. Fields," Mrs. Field wrote in her diary in 1863. "He had been lately traveling in the west, he said. People complimented him on his youthful appearance and his last letter to the President.

"I'm glad you liked the letter," he said, 'but my father wrote it.'

"At the next town people pressed his hand and thanked him for his staunch adherence to the anti-slavery cause as expressed in the Liberator.

"Oh," his reply was, 'that was my brother Edmund.'

"A little farther on a friend complimented his brilliant story in the last Atlantic magazine.

"That was my son, Josiah Phillips Quincy," he was obliged to answer."

The unfortunate Josiah Quincy was born in Boston Jan. 17, 1802, the oldest son of an earlier Josiah Quincy, a Federalist congressman who led the New England opposition to the War of 1812, later second mayor of Boston and, most important in that time and place, 16th president of Harvard.

When he was six, young Josiah was sent to Quincy to live on the ancestral estate and learn the three Rs at the Rev. Peter Whitney's highly regarded grammar school for boys. He was a frequent guest for Sunday dinner with John and Abigail Adams, a meal that inevitably began with a pudding made of corn meal.

"It was thought desirable to take the edge off one's hunger before reaching the joint," he recalled. "Indeed, it was considered wise to stimulate the young to fill themselves with pudding, by the assurance that the boy who managed to eat the most of it should be helped most abundantly to the meat, which was to follow.

"It need not be said that neither the winner nor his competitors found much room for meat at the close of their contest; and so the domestic economy of the arrangement was very apparent."

Later, as a Harvard grad and a rising young lawyer, he became close to the aging ex-President, visiting his mansion in Quincy several times a week to read to him or simply to enjoy his conversation. The once formidable old man, he discovered, "had not the smallest chip of an iceberg in his composition, soon made me perfectly at ease in his society."

Young Josiah was no iceberg either. In a day when Calvinist theology still imposed a heavy hand on the smallest aspects of Massachusetts life, his days at Phillips Andover Academy, where he spent six years, and at Harvard had an astonishingly-fun-loving ring to them.

At Andover, there were the long hours sitting in the cold church, bundled to the eyes and ears in comforters, listening to the preachers describe the fires of Hell that awaited even the least of all sinners.

"The vivid descriptions of those sultry regions to which the vast majority of the human race were hastening lost something of the terror they were meant to strike," he recalled. In fact, they may have sounded welcome.

There were interminable prayer meetings, "before school, after school and in recess," and no effort or threat was spared to herd the sometimes reluctant students to them. One day the Master dismissed his class with the admonition: "There will now be a prayer meeting; those who wish to lie down in everlasting burning may go; the rest will stay." Two students got up and left. One of them was Quincy.

At Harvard, he was a member of the College Fire Department, a volunteer band of exuberant young men who were fond of leaping aboard their ancient fire wagon and chasing off after every fire within range.

"I cannot remember that we ever rendered the slightest assistance in extinguishing a fire," he confessed, "indeed, there were so many good reasons for stopping on the way that we commonly arrived after it was out."

One of the best reasons for stopping was called "black strap," the chief ingredients of which were rum and molasses, served at the local pubs.

Quincy was graduated from Harvard in 1821, listed among the 59 members of his class as Josias Quincy.

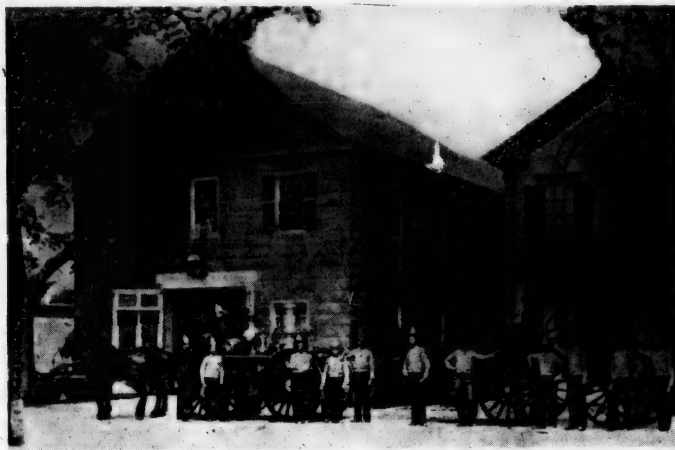

That same year, he was smitten by the charms of one Emily Marshall. He met her for the first time while walking across the Dover Street bridge to South Boston. "She is the most beautiful I ever saw," he wrote later. He listed her as one of the reigning belles of the country, the others being Cora Livingston of New Orleans and Julia Dickinson of Troy, N. Y. A few years later, he met Cora Livingston in Washington. He fell for her, too. "I was greatly fascinated with her . . . a tall, genteel girl and said to have a fine mind and a rich father." Both times, however, his feelings were unrequited. He married Mary Jane Miller, daughter of a Boston merchant, in 1827.

Despite the fact that the Quincy family was staunchly Federalist in politics, young Josiah was named aide de camp to the Democratic Governor Levi Lincoln and, as such, he was the chief escort for the Marquis de Lafayette when the old Revolutionary War hero visited Boston to help lay the cornerstone for the Bunker Hill Monument. He traveled to Washington with Supreme Court Justice Joseph Story, much to the dismay of his father. To the elder Quincy he was always "Joe Story, that country pettifogger." A Democratic pettifogger, it should be pointed out.

Josiah also was designated by Governor Lincoln to serve as aide to President Andrew Jackson when he visited Massachusetts to get an honorary degree from Harvard in 1833. John Quincy Adams, whom Jackson defeated for the Presidency in 1828, refused to attend the ceremony. "As an affectionate child of our Alma Mater," he said, "I would not be present to witness her disgrace in conferring her highest literary honor upon a barbarian who could not write a sentence of grammar and hardly could spell his own name." Quincy, however, had to attend and he found the President an interesting conversationalist, although "not a man to accept a difference of opinion with equanimity."

Jackson was supposed to ride in a parade in his honor in Salem during the visit but he took ill and was confined to his hotel bed. Quincy and Vice President Martin Van Buren rode in the presidential carriage and, reported Quincy, "the immense interest excited soon forced upon me the very unpleasant conviction that the aide-de-camp of the Governor of Massachusetts was passing for the President of the United States."

Josiah Quincy's career as a railroad magnate began almost by accident. He was a member of the Boston Common Council when the Boston and Worcester Railroad fell into financial difficulties attempting to extend its line across the Berkshires to Albany. A New York group offered to take over, thus turning what began as an investment into a matter of civic pride. The B & W needed to raise $2 million. Councillor Quincy volunteered to head the subscription drive in his ward, "the most unpleasant business I ever engaged in." When the last dollar was squeezed out of the last reluctant subscriber, Quincy found himself treasurer of the railroad.

He dove into the new job with the same enthusiasm with which he chased fires at Harvard, but with notably more success. Work on the right-of-way west of Worcester began in 1837, the year the first Great Depression struck the United States. Hard times lasted until 1843. Subscribers defaulted on their pledges. The state kicked in some money but it was not enough. The cost of the railroad rose to $7 million. Quincy roamed as far afield as London, pleading, cajoling, hustling B & W bonds. In England, he was thought of as "probably the world's best salesman." The road was opened to Springfield on Oct. 1, 1839, and to Albany in December, 1841, borrowing a few miles of track from the Hudson & Berkshire Railroad.

Quincy was a member of the delegation that journeyed from Boston to Albany over the new line for the grand banquet on Dec. 28, 1841. The trip took only 15 hours and Quincy was the undoubted star of the celebration. "On such an occasion," wrote Governor William H. Seward of New York, "Quincy was inimitable."

Once the Boston & Worcester became the Boston & Albany in everything but name, Quincy's dormant political career flourished once again. He was elected to the State Senate, becoming Senate president in 1842 and again in 1844. He stood for mayor of Boston, a post his father held from 1823 to 1829. He was elected on Dec. 8, 1845, as a Whig, having made the party transition from Federalist through lukewarm Democrat. His predecessor, Thomas A. Davis, having died, he was sworn into office three days later.

Quincy's three terms as Boston mayor were marked by progress on several fronts.

First, he set about securing an adequate water supply, a problem that had plagued the city since the administration of his father. He broke the lethargy by going directly to the people. They approved his plan by referendum, 4,637 to 348. Ground was broken at Long Pond in Natick on Aug. 20, 1846 and, two years, two months, and $2.5 million later, the networks of reservoirs and aqueducts was finished. It was at the groundbreaking that Quincy himself chose the name "Cochituate." The old Indian name, he thought, was more distinctive than Long Pond.

He recognized the 28-man Boston Police Force, too, paving the way for its union with the 150 men of the Night Watch to create a true police department; he purchased land for the city at the corner of Cambridge and Charles Streets and signed the contract for construction of the Suffolk County Jail; he initiated the program of filling in the mud flats on the east side of Roxbury Neck, the area known as South Bay; and the boy who enjoyed an occasional glass of blackstrap dried up Boston for a time by the simple medium of revoking all liquor licenses.

"When I left office," he wrote in his memoir, "there was no place where such liquors were openly sold. An attempt was made on this account to prevent my re-election for a third term, but after a most exciting canvass I was rechosen."

He chose not to run a fourth term and, when the inactivity paled, he was lured back into railroads again, this time at the expense of his fortune and, in some quarters, at the expense of his good name.

He was offered the post of treasurer of the Vermont Central Railroad. He was reluctant to accept at first. He didn't need the money. At 47, with two careers behind him, he didn't feel up to taking on a third. The Vermont Central ran from Hartford, Vt., to Burlington, and the prospect was dangled before Quincy of an extended line running from Boston all the way to Montreal. The challenge excited him. He accepted and, in August, 1849, Vermont Central directors voted him powers unprecedented in the field.

They resolved "that the signature of Josiah Quincy Jr. as Treasurer on any notes or drafts shall be binding on this Corporation, to all intents and purposes," virtual carte blanche to spend the corporation's money in anyway he wished.

Indications are that he used his power wisely for the rail network was completed in the summer of 1851 with President Millard Fillmore and James Bruce, Earl of Elgin, governor general of Canada, offering congratulations. But, in the process of raising and borrowing money and offering collateral, Quincy's personal finances and those of South Shore families aren't likely to forget the Blizzard of 1978.

Some were forced to stay in their homes; others were forced out. Travel was restricted to walking and most businesses were closed.

The three weekdays that the Quincy Cooperative Bank was closed was the longest such period since the Bank Holiday of 1933. When the bank re-opened that Friday, by permission of the governor, roads were still being cleared.

Joan Iacqua, who lived nearby and had been designated "Storm Warden" for the main bank, and Penny Fuller were the first to arrive and prepare for the bank's 7 a.m. opening, an event warmly welcomed by a few early customers and many others seeking shelter while waiting for the bus. The branches opened, too, with Vice Presidents Frank Mitchell and Ronald McKee shoveling away the drifts at the entrance to the Hanover branch.

Another vice president, Robert Keddy Jr., piloted his four-wheel drive car through the choked-up roads for 12 hours, rescuing stranded families and taking people to hospitals.

The bank's directors, as the storm's full toll became evident, made it easy for homeowners to get the loans needed to repair blizzard damage. They did the necessary home inspections immediately, suspending the normal procedure for processing insurance claims.

Altogether, it was a remarkable example of community-oriented service. But, in a sense, it was not "news". For the bank has been community-minded from the day of its birth, a modest event in a public hall that had been a church.

On May 7, 1889, a group of citizens gathered in Hancock Hall on Hancock Street, Quincy, (opposite the site of the present Sears store) for the first meeting of the Quincy Cooperative Bank.

The new bank's initial 630 shareholders had brought 690 shares with a first payment of a dollar each, resulting in $690 of capital funds. At the meeting this entire amount was lent to John H. Gillis who became the bank's first mortgagee to pay for a home through the cooperative plan. Before year's end the bank had increased its capital to $11,400.

But why another bank? Quincy already had three.

One reason was the area's growth. The shipyard in Braintree was becoming important and would soon be moved to Quincy. The railroad had added stations within Quincy, then in its first year as a city. Wollaston had already begun to sprout new streets for homes. Squantum and Houghs Neck were just beginning their transformation from summer resorts to all-year communities. Telephone and electric wires were appearing along the roadways.

A more important reason was the nature of most mortgages in those days: The money was loaned for a specified period. Interest was paid regularly, and the whole amount borrowed was due at the Years earlier this problem had troubled a lawyer-capitalist named Josiah Quincy Jr., a descendant of the family for whom Quincy was named, a family connected with the famous Adamsses and other patriots. He saw the situation in stark terms: "If a capitalist wants to borrow $100,000 on good security he can obtain it. If a working man wants $500 on equally good security, he cannot."

The situation troubled Josiah enough to seek a solution: The legalization in Massachusetts of cooperative banking, a system by which the working families could acquire capital by investing in shares, borrowing from their own bank, and reducing their mortgages month by month. Five years before his death in 1882, Quincy's proposal was approved by the state legislature, with the blessing of Lt. Gov. John Q. A. Brackett who said: "Judged by the promise it holds for the future, it will confer greater benefits upon the working people than any other enactment with which I am familiar."

That is why the new bank was formed and why Josiah's name was chosen for it.

Shortly after the first meeting an office was set up in the Durgin and Merrill building (now the Smith building) down the street from Hancock Hall.

Dr. William L. Faxon, a physician who was active among the city's leadership, was the bank's first president. Richard D. Chase, realtor and business leader, who had spearheaded the creation of the new bank, was secretary-treasurer, the sure navigator who would chart a financial course for the bank that would enable it to help hundreds, then thousands, of South Shore families to own homes and save for their future.

His was the sound conservatism that insured steady growth for the bank. As he put it: "Results have not come through speculation, manipulation, up-to-date financing, or any kind of Klondiking."

("Klondiking" was his timely reference to the hazy dreams and sharp schemes linked with the discovery of gold in Alaska, and its resultant army of fortune seekers, many of whom died in Arctic cold in the late 1890's.)

Within a decade, Quincy Cooperative's assets end of the period. So the borrower had to be prepared to pay a lump sum or risk losing the collateral, usually a home. Banks, therefore, were very careful about lending money.

This made it difficult for the average working family to get the capital needed for a home, either because the banks could not lend them money at reasonable rates or because the family was wary of the risk, a risk that the Quincy Cooperative would later put in these words: "Unreduced mortgages are poor legacies to old age, widow and children."

had grown to $180,000. If that seems modest, it is not in relation to the value of money in those days: A two-story house with 14 rooms could be rented for $300 a year and bought for less than $3000. Butter was 30 cents a pound, round steak was 12½ cents a pound, and an ordinary blanket was 90 cents.

Steering passage from Europe to the United States was as low as $20, attracting new citizens to Quincy where they quarried and dressed granite for the world market, where they built ships, where they worked in the new industries such as Boston Gear Works, Tubular Rivet and Stud, and Pneumatic Scale, and where they eventually bought or built homes.

To prepare for that new home, many joined the earlier shareholders in the Quincy Cooperative Bank where, each month, they met and heard the report of the treasurer. Then the amount of money available for loans was determined and sums "auctioned off" for mortgages, with the bidding in interest rates.

Dr. Faxon was succeeded in the presidency by Dr. John F. Welch in 1893 which, by the way, was a crucial year. From April through June there was a national financial panic of deep proportions that had little lasting effect. But that September an event took place that would switch on America's economy and change its lifestyle irreversibly: Charles and Frank Duryea successfully operated their gasoline automobile. (Incidentally, Quincy would be one of the many places where early horseless carriages were made, at least for a few years.)

Mr. Chase was treasurer until 1911, serving through a vital period that saw the Spanish-American War and the first flight of the Wright brothers. He left to his successor, Frank A. Reed, a bank with assets of over half a million dollars owned by 1400 shareholders.

Treasurer Reed would serve until 1937, through a war that much later became known as World War I, the 1920's building boom, and the first half of the Great Depression. During most of Mr. Reed's term the president was Frank W. Crane (1916-1938) who had succeeded the brief presidency of Joseph A. Sedgewick (1914-1916), who in turn, had succeeded Dr. Welch.

President Welch had died in office and was memorialized by the bank directors with a resolution which included, "His keen and active mind and memory have always guided the officers of the bank with a sure and masterful grasp."

Mr. Reed saw the bank through three moves, first to the Adams building (1912), then to the Quincy Savings Bank building (1919), and finally, in 1936, to its present home, the Munroe building in Quincy Square.

A minor incident during the Adams building period gave a hint of the bank's spirit. On January 10, 1914, the directors voted to present telephone operator Miss Margaret Scanlon with $10 (worth much more in 1979 dollars) for her prompt action in preventing a serious conflagration in the building on the morning of Dec. 30, 1913.

In 1917, with America in the war, the bank bought $20,000 in Liberty Bonds; in 1918 the directors voted to have the bank sell War Savings Stamps, and, in 1919, the bank bought $10,000 in Victory Loan Bonds.

As the war waned, the bank had some advice for its shareholders and prospective depositors: "The Quincy Cooperative Bank calls attention to the fact that in these days of large earnings it behooves everyone to save every dollar possible in order to prepare for the days of reconstruction which must inevitably follow the war."

Probably not connected with the war was a vote by the directors in 1917 that "the matter of the purchase of a gun for the protection of the treasurer be left in the hands of the finance committee."

An echo of this concern for security was heard five years later when the state bank commissioner, at the behest of the Post Office, warned banks regarding the protection of funds in transit. He told the banks that "large losses of currency shipments by holdup and robbery have occurred" and that insurance companies might be forced to raise rates or discontinue policies completely. He advised that shipments of money be made at the safest hours and suggested that "firearms, preferably shotguns loaded with buckshot, be furnished to dependable bank employees."

The Quincy Cooperative, of course, has never considered building an arsenal to ward off bandits. Money deliveries are handled by professional services. The main bank office has never had a robbery in its ninety years. The branches in Hanover and Braintree were held up in 1978, and, due to the correct conduct by the employees, no one was hurt. The physical layout of the branches has been changed to discourage future holdups. As President John R. Herbert said in his annual report for 1978, "Our rules are simple: the safety of our customers and personnel are of prime importance."

By 1925, the building boom and the growth of the bank's assets to about five million dollars had made it necessary to add an assistant treasurer to help

Mr. Reed. Lillian A. Moodie, who had come to the bank in 1918 as a teller (thus doubling the staff), was elected to that office.

Last spring, Miss Moodie, a doughty 92 and the bank's oldest depositor, remembered those days: "Bank day was the first Wednesday of the month and that's when I met and got to know most of the shareholders. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of that week the directors would come in during the evening hours and help out as tellers. The rest of the month we caught up on other work. Everything was hand-written and figured in those days, but the only deposit accounts were serial shares."

Miss Moodie's election to an executive position set a trend that would continue at the bank. By 1978 more than 77 percent of the work force were women, and among the bank's officers, branch managers and supervisors 55.9 percent were women. Recently retiring was Miss Marjorie Caswell, a vice president, who has given 46 years of service to the bank.

Miss Caswell remembers that when she joined the bank in 1932 as a teller there were only four employees, and that the only business handled by tellers was serial shares, matured shares and mortgage payments. By the time she retired there were 87 fulltime employees and the tellers were handling many varied styles of accounts: serial shares, NOW accounts, regular savings, 90-day notice savings, various term deposits, paid up passbooks and paid-up certificates, all with different interest rates, as well as the familiar mortgage payments.

Heslip E. Sutherland, clerk of the corporation for The Quincy Cooperative Bank. Mr. Sutherland had served the bank as a director, president and chairman of the board prior to his retirement.

Early in the Depression, in March, 1933, there occurred one of the few times that the bank was closed during regular work days: It was President Roosevelt's Bank Holiday, a drastic measure designed to prevent runs on the nation's banks, many of which had already closed down forever. Proclaimed March 6, the holiday ended about a week later, as announced locally in the Quincy Patriot Ledger of March 13:

"Quincy banks will open for business Wednesday morning, almost without restriction. However, they will not be permitted to pay out any gold nor will they allow any currency to be withdrawn for purposes of hoarding."

Just before American involvement in World War II, the bank's assets had grown to $7,017,597 and the number of shareholders to 6,030. Early in the war President Young was succeeded by Robert E. Foy. In 1943 Louis S. Cleaves began thirteen years of a bank presidency that was marked, in 1950, with the installation of machines to take away the onerous task of hand-posting entries in the bank's records and the shareholders' passbooks. That same year the bank's assets had grown to $11,099,730 and the number of shareholders to 8,386.

Braintree In 1889

Education Got Top Priority

In 1889, the year that Quincy Cooperative Bank was founded, Quincy's mother town, Braintree, was as serious about education as are today's back-to-basics-teach-Johnny-to-read enthusiasts.

Just to get into high school, for instance, required at least a 65% average on special tests given in the four quarters of the eighth grade year. A Braintree High School diploma required a 60% daily average, plus the same in two weeks of graduation tests. Visual aids were coming into use, too: elementary teachers were using toys to illustrate word choice and sentences. Of the town's population of more than 4,000, 790 were enrolled in the school.

The selectmen—Ansel Clark, J. Franklin Bates and Nathaniel Hunt—reported that the 1889 school expenditure was $12,470, with $1,200 going to the school superintendent's annual salary and $8 to $15 a week for typical teachers. This cost contrasted with $2,186 for the almshouse (wellfare) and $700 for the library. It must have been an open winter, for only $133 out of a $1000 appropriation was used for snow removal.

It was a forward-looking time. The town was in the process of acquiring the Braintree Water Supply Co., and it would open its own electric plant in 1892. Telephones were coming in, and the fire department's chief engineer (from which "fire chief" is derived), Edward O. Pierson recommended:

"That the town put into operation a telephone system connecting the three villages with the wire already in use in the town, and thus save running to all false and needless alarms, and thereby save the expense of unnecessary horse hire, which I think would pay for itself in one year."

It was, indeed, still the horse age even though railroads had long been a part of life. This equine economy was reflected in the town's bylaws in which it was ruled that no person "shall ride, drive or permit a horse or other beast to go at a greater speed than 10 miles per hour in any public street, highway or townway."

Some regulations were even stranger by today's standards. One strong "blue law" had this admonition: "No person may hunt, fish, skate or play ball on the Lord's Day."

all sorts of tacks and nails were made. Displayed in the center are six wooden boxes of nails.

Hanover In 1889

Town Tax Rate: $13

In 1889, the selectmen, assessors and overseers of the poor in Hanover apologized in their annual report for the high tax rate that was necessary because of large appropriations and the cost of labor.

The three officials, Eben Waterman, George C. Russell and Charles H. Killam, said that the rate would be $13 per $1000 or valuation. The total real estate valuation was $798,505 and there were then 487½ homes in Hanover. This figures out roughly to an average tax bill of $21. They said that the rate would go down to $11.50 or lower the next year, but their report does not explain the half-house.

The half also figured in their report on the town almshouse, with an "attractive exterior" but no bathroom. It was tenanted by five and one-half indigents. That cost the taxpayers $2,873 in 1889, including the town's share of the costs of other towns helping Hanover residents.

Other town costs were more modest. Snow clearing came to $23.90 and mowing bushes along the dirt roads cost $196.80. The town spent $27.10 for "changing the watering place on Rockland Street." That's because the age of the horse had not ended. There were 390 of them in Hanover that year, plus 328 cows, 46 sheep and 92 swine. The library spent $301.63 which was $1.63 over its appropriation.

Even as it is today, school costs in 1889 were the highest of any town expenditure: $4469.05. Teachers got small shares of this. Lavina A. Walker of District #1 received $305.50 for the school year, plus $6 for cleaning the schoolroom.

The school committee was conscientious and included in its report a list of all students who were marked 90% in their studies, all who had perfect attendance, and listed the number of tardy marks at each school. It regretted the lack of facilities, a condition that would be corrected within a few years, and stated what its own responsibility was:

"Our duty as guardians of young Hanoverians looks rather to training, not ideal men and women, but men and women who shall be qualified, as well as attainable means will permit, to mingle and contend in the great struggling mass of people, collectively called the world."

Cohasset In 1889

Changes Were On The Way

Ninety years ago, in 1889, the seacoast village of Cohasset was undergoing changes that would improve the style of life without diminishing the town's rural charm.

A water company had been formed. A central school was being planned, thus removing high school from the town hall. And it had been decided to hire a superintendent of schools. Next year the Cohasset Electric Company would be in business, foreshadowing the demise of the lamplighter and an end to the oil bill ($10.72 in 1888) for the street lights.

It was a conservative town. In the previous year's presidential election 244 votes had been cast for Republican Harrison and 107 for Democrat Cleveland. In 1889, the men of the town (women could not vote) had voted down liquor licenses, but by less a margin than the year before.

It was a farming town of 582 dwellings, with enough barns, sheds and stys for 314 horses, 300 cows, 10 sheep and 29 swine.

The town's selectmen, J.Q.A. Lothrop, Philander Bates and Caleb Nichols reported that they had spent only $9700 for schools and $6000 for the poor out of a budget of $31,500. These were the big items. But it cost most for watering the dirt roads ($900) than for all the expenses of the volunteer fire department ($600). The library was allocated $400.

The three men were assessors and overseers of the poor, too. They valued the town's real estate at $2,143,676. That's the worth of less than three dozen Cohasset homes nowadays, but everything else was in proportion. The male high school master was paid $1200, his female assistant, $600. The North School's teacher received $380, presumably because she taught only eight grades on elementary level.

In 1889, Cohasset's road watering wagon was on the long street to oblivion. The automobile was only five years away on the horizon of the future. It would lead to paved roads and a custom called commuting.

Life Would Never Be The Same

it hot for the rum sellers be they in Quincy or Boston. He didn't think much of Squantum, any way, Faxon said, because it was the resort of toughs and morally bad.

Along about the middle of January, 1889, Quincy got some good news in its fight with Boston. The full bench of the Massachusetts Supreme Court ruled that the city of Boston had no right to dig up the streets of Quincy to lay water mains, thus bringing to an end the infamous Squantum War that was fought the previous fall with shovels and fire hoses in and out of the trenches on Squantum Street.

It began on Monday, Oct. 1, 1888, when a group of Boston city workers, who were laying water pipes to Boston property on Moon Island, began digging up Squantum Street to make the connection with Neponset. Quincy's Road Commissioner John A. Duggan didn't think that was right. On Tuesday, his men filled in the ditch.

At 7 o'clock Wednesday morning, two small armies of workmen confronted each other. As fast as Boston opened the trench, Quincy filled it in. Reinforcements arrived. By 9 o'clock, 100 men of Boston faced 40 men of Quincy, who were fighting a losing battle. At 9:30, Boston was able to lower a length of pipe into the trench. Quincy called out the Steamer. Two streams of salt water from its hoses undid all Boston's work in a half hour.

Selectmen Hodges, Eaton and Ripley arrived to direct Quincy's troops. So did the Boston brass, Water Commissioner Robert Grant and Superintendent Brackett of the Water Works. Hand-to-hand fighting broke out in the trench. "Shovel clashed against shovel, and the opposing forces gathered into a compact and struggling mass," reported the Patriot's war correspondent. Two Boston workmen were arrested. The Quincy fire hose was captured.

Shortly after noon, Boston managed to rope off the trench and the shoveling continued. By 2:30 in the afternoon, the Quincy laborers and police broke through the lines and began shoveling the dirt back into the trench. Boston tried to put up the rope again but Quincy Police Chief Robert J. Williams cut it with his knife. He also cut Martin Foley, a Boston laborer, on the hand. Foley swore vengeance. When Quincy police drew their revolvers to protect their chief, Commissioner Grant decided things had gone far enough. Both sides withdrew and agreed to leave it up to the courts.

On the other end of Quincy's long waterfront, Houghs Neck was a jewel in the city's crown, a summer resort of national repute, where, in mid-July, 1889, Vogel's new cottage was entertaining Mrs. Charles Severance of Montana, Miss Carr of Brooklyn and Miss Louisa Crawford of East Vassalboro, Maine. Steamboats plied the Bay from Boston and Hub businessmen stashed their families away on the Neck for the summer, commuting back and forth themselves on weekends.

Summer social life centered around James Mears' Great Hill House, host to fishing, sailing and Shore dinner parties, with stabling for horses, near the Quincy Yacht Club. There was dancing at the Casino but for the most part a summer in Houghs Neck was for those who took their fun quietly. When a group of noisy young men, who had drunk "something stronger than water," appeared on foot and bicycle on an early summer weekend, it was the consensus that "we hope they will not come again, for that is not the crowd that is wanted at this quiet retreat." The picnic held by the Unitarian Society of Canton on the Casino grounds in mid-July was hailed as the best behaved picnic ever held in Houghs Neck.

The grand climax of the season was "Illumination Day," which came just before the Labor Day weekend wrapped up the summer season. In 1889 it was Wednesday, August 28. The crowd, observers agreed, was the largest ever on Houghs Neck.

The afternoon was for the children. There was sailing, animal balloons, a Punch and Judy show and all were treated to ice cream. Martland's band from Brockton serenaded the throng in midafternoon near the Great Hill House and, in the cool of the evening, the concert moved to the bandstand in the field off Sea Street.

By night, Houghs Neck was a blaze of lights as hotels, restaurants and cottages vied with each other for the best display of lanterns, torches and fireworks. A great bonfire burned atop Great Hill. Just below the crest of the hill, "Lookout," the cottage of George S. Bass, the boot and shoe dealer, glowed with lanterns and sparkled with fiery pinwheels. From the tower of the Casino, the new calcium lamp threw its glare far over the bay. The grounds around John Cavanagh's cottage were lighted by burning cat o' nine tails.

Late that summer, the Boston firm of J. S. Mason & Co. was hired to number residences on all streets in preparation for the free delivery of mail. Residents were reminded that "no person is obliged to have his house numbered but it is a great help in finding any residence." And they were assured that the enumerators would measure and register vacant lots so that newly built houses would not foul up the existing numbers.

The Adams Academy baseball team, with its ace, Louis A. Frothingham (later a congressman) on the mound, won its annual game with Thayer Academy. 15-8, by scoring the nine runs in the last two innings. Frothingham made seven errors and Clark, the Thayer pitcher, made six, under a controversial rule by which a base on balls, a hit batsman, a wild pitch and a balk were charged as errors.

Baseball was truly becoming the national pastime and the considerable Quincy following of the Boston professional baseball team experienced frustration when the Red Stockings finished second by a single game behind New York despite the fact that their Big Dan Brouthers won the National League batting title with a .373 average and John Clarkson, the little right-hander, won no less than 49 games and Mike Kelly (Slide, Kelly, slide!) stole 68 bases.

Charlie Ganzel, who had not yet taken up residence in Quincy, was a utility man on that team and another future Quincy boy, Jake Kilrain, was making a name for himself on July 6 in far off Richburg, Mississippi, by going 75 rounds with John L. Sullivan in an unsuccessful bid for the world heavyweight championship and a side bet of $10,000.

The widening and straightening of Elm Street turned out to be a matter of unexpected controversy when it was disclosed that a large number of ancient elm trees would have to be cut down and the front fence and porch would have to be shorn from the 248-year-old house occupied by Miss Elizabeth C. Adams at the corner of South Street opposite the Miller estates.

But that was the price the new city of Quincy had to pay for progress in 1889.

Horses still ruled the roads in 1889 when the Quincy Cooperative Bank was formed, but the age of the automobile was not far off. In this photograph, taken about 1905, Charles B. Hoxie of Wollaston demonstrates an early right-hand drive runabout which may have been a Rambler or a Crestmobile.

We are pleased to be associated with the Quincy Cooperative Bank and congratulate it on its 90th Anniversary.

90 Years Of History

A Most Tumultuous Era

The years since 1889, when the Quincy Cooperative Bank was founded, have been tumultuous. Those ninety years have been fiercer wars, greater scientific advances, and more rapid changes in living styles than any other like period in history.

Here, decade by decade, are some of the events that happened in America and the world while a bank grew quietly and steadily the cooperative way:

THE NINETIES -- These ten years saw America add six states and win a war against Spain, extending United States presence to the Far Pacific. Edison patented his kitescope, forerunner to the modern movie projector, and the Duryea brothers successfully demonstrated their gasoline-powered automobile. Gold was discovered in the Klondike. Cleveland succeeded Harrison who had ousted him from the presidency, and was, in turn, succeeded by McKinley. Overseas the Boer War sowed the seeds of a new nation, Union of South Africa.

20TH CENTURY DAWN -- The first Zeppelin flew and the first zipper zipped. The Wright brothers flew the first manned heavier-than-air craft. Einstein formulated his theory of relativity, destined to shake the world of science, and someone invented the vacuum cleaner, an early assault on household drudgery. When an anarchist assassinated McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt became president. An earthquake leveled San Francisco. Peary became first to reach the North Pole, and Marconi became first to reach across the Atlantic by wireless telegraph. The Russo-Japanese War broke out, and was extinguished by Roosevelt's peace conference.

WORLD WAR DECADE -- No one knew, then, that this war which began in 1914 and involved the United States by 1917, would later be named World War I. Wilson was President, and both the income tax and Prohibition began, one of them to last. The war was followed by a deadly flu epidemic and voting rights for women. Amundsen reached the South Pole. A Swiss scientist invented cellophane.

THE TWENTIES -- This celebrated era opened with the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti (for a Braintree robbery and murder) and ended with the Wall Street Crash. In between, Coolidge succeeded Harding, Gershwin wrote "Rhapsody in Blue", Lindbergh flew the Atlantic (heralding the true air age), and Ford invented the five-day work week. In addition to deploring Flaming Youth and the Charleston, newspapers reported the Teapot Dome scandal (Watergate of the times), the cave tragedy of Floyd Collins, the Monkey Trial in Tennessee, and the election of Hoover. Television and penicillin were invented.

GREAT DEPRESSION -- Franklin D. Roosevelt began his historic four terms, closing the banks briefly and installing his New Deal permanently. The Depression was punctuated with the Empire State Building's debut, the exodus from the Dust Bowl, New England's '38 Hurricane, and the abdication of Edward VIII from the English throne for the love of an American woman (one time Quincy resident Wallis Simpson). The decade ended with the beginning of World War II and the retreat from Dunkirk.

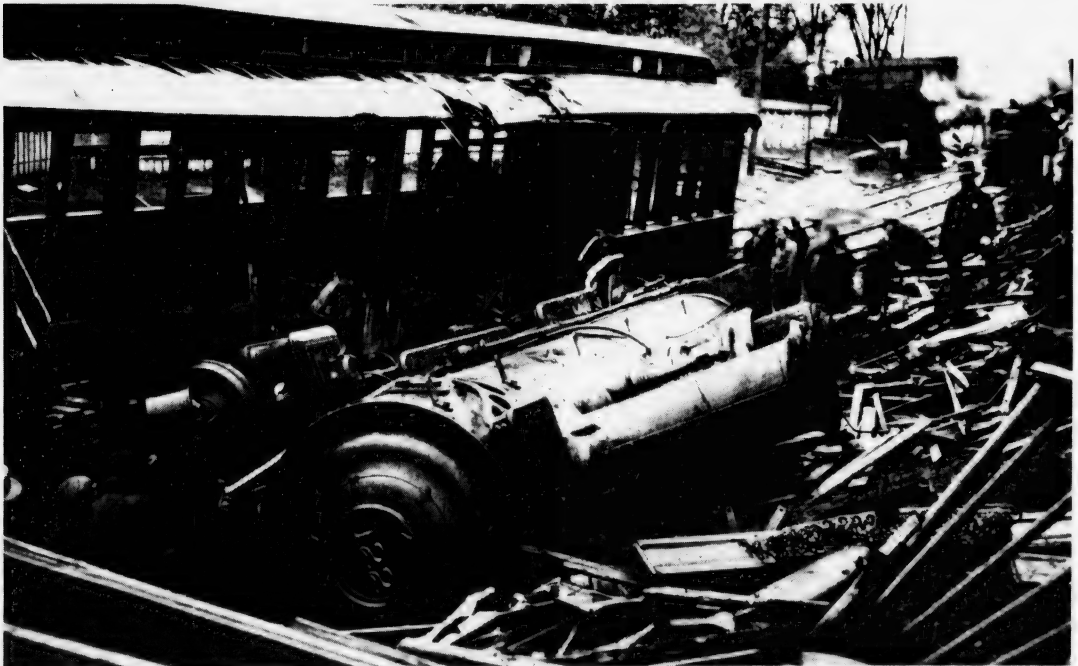

WORLD WAR II -- The Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor thrust United States into the global war that would be highlighted by the draft of 13 million Americans into the armed services, battles like Guadalcanal and D-Day, the horror of the Holocaust, and a dramatic, foreboding conclusion with the first atomic explosions. The war saw the first long-term experiment with wage-price controls and rationing. After peace was declared the Cold War began, China turned Red, and America became involved in a hot war in Korea.

THE FIFTIES -- This decade began with the development of the H-Bomb and was dominated by the struggle of America's blacks for equal rights, a struggle led by Martin Luther King. Eisenhower, hero general of World War II, was twice elected President, with Nixon as his vice president. Alaska and Hawaii made it a fifty-state union. The Space Race began with Russia's Sputnik I orbiting in 1957, and America's Explorer in 1958.

TROUBLED SIXTIES -- John Kennedy was inaugurated President in 1960 and assassinated in 1963. The decade that began with the Bay of Pigs fiasco and ended with the United States mired in a futile war in Vietnam, included such disparate events as Chappaquiddick, Woodstock and the Moon Walk. Israel won a six-day war against Egypt. The first SALT talks with Russia opened.

FADING SEVENTIES -- Watergate and the first resignation of an American President dominated the first half of the Seventies. The end of war in Vietnam was welcomed by both Hawks and Doves. 1978 brought an historic blizzard to New England. No one needs to be told that the biggest news of the last half of the decade has been inflation, energy and the Iranian incident.

On an August day in 1890 this excursion train was wrecked on the Old Colony Railroad tracks in Quincy near the Dimmock Street bridge, with 23 passengers killed and 30 injured.

The Quincy Cooperative Bank Story

In 1952 Ralph W. Moorhead became treasurer of the bank. Heslip E. Sutherland became president in 1956, the year that the bank established its branch in Hanover, an office that was enlarged in 1967. Early in the Seventies other branches were established in Braintree and Cohasset. Later a special branch would be installed in the senior citizen complex at 1000 Southern Artery, Quincy, and additional land would be acquired next to the Hanover branch to improve access and beautify the corner.

Ronald McKee, The present Treasurer, came to the bank in 1971, a year that the bank's assets had passed $74,552,211, and the number of shareholders, 21,242. Under his regime computers took over (1973) from the machines for posting transactions and for other bank accounting work. Recently the computer system was enhanced with a more sophisticated installation, improving the bank's capabilities in data processing.

Charles G. Petersen became bank president in 1971, an office he held until early 1973 when he was succeeded by John A. Vivian.

John R. Herbert, former editor of The Boston Herald and The Patriot Ledger, and a long-time director of the bank, became its president in 1975. In May, 1979, at the annual meeting of the shareholders, he reported that the bank's assets had grown to $123,019,583, that the bank had the highest percentage of reserves among the state's eight major cooperative banks, and that the year's transactions had exceeded, for the first time, a half-billion dollars. Today, eight months later, The assets are over $128,000,000.

If Quincy Cooperative's shareholders could take comfort in this proof of their bank's stability and growth, they could find pride in the bank's continuing involvement with its community.

Not only do the bank's officers and staff contribute their time and expertise to many worthy projects, but the bank itself awards "Josiah Quincy Scholarships" to ten high schools and private schools in the area of the main office and its four branches, and makes a special $1500 graduate scholarship available at the Quincy Junior College. This is in addition to the contributions that the bank makes every year to civic and charitable events and institutions.

Josiah, champion for the common man, would have liked that.

Advocating The Cooperative Idea

the Vermont Central had become hopelessly entwined.

"He made extensive use of the company's bonds for his private ends, had sold 1,240 shares of stock belonging to the company and had sold 3,462 shares which did not exist," wrote railroad historian Alvin F. Harlow.

Actually, Quincy maintained, while he had complete authority to borrow money in the company's name, the banks preferred to have his signature on a personal note and he gave it willingly, taking Vermont Central bonds as collateral for the obligation he incurred in the name of the company. When the directors, sensing irregularities, withdrew his authority, he was left hanging with $1.5 million in personal notes.

Whatever happened, the result was personal insolvency for Quincy, who managed to pull out of the mess with about $250,000 of his personal fortune left. He was also left with a certain cynicism about businessmen that reinforced his long held concern for the welfare of those who did not have the power nor the wherewithal to help themselves.

"He used his advantages of education, social position and wealth, not for the gratification of his own ego, nor for the advancement of his family, but rather to benefit the citizens of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts," wrote the historian Dr. James R. Cameron. "Throughout his life his activities and achievements were characterized by his commitment to the promotion of the public welfare."

In semi-retirement, the promotion of the public welfare developed into his primary concern. He became, in short, a pain in the neck to the 19th Century establishment in his concern for the well-being of the workingman.

He advocated state ownership of the railroads, since the high cost of transportation struck at the wage-earner where he was most vulnerable -- the dinner table.

"If plain nourishing food is made inaccessible to the poor and diminished in quantity for a large portion of the community, as is the case at present, it is an evil that strikes vitally at the best interests of society," Quincy told the Boston Natural Science Association.

The Massachusetts legislature listened to his radical proposal politely, for he was, after all, a prominent and respected citizen, and then turned it down. But it did pass a law that made it impossible for railroads to water their stock, which was one of the main factors in the high cost of transport.

Next, he turned his attention to housing. Few, if any, workingmen could afford to own their own homes. The banks of the day were not interested in home mortgage loans. They were after bigger things.

"Millions of dollars, belonging principally to working people, are deposited in our savings banks," Quincy told a joint legislative labor committee in 1875.

"These institutions have done and are doing incalculable good by promoting industry and economy, but their managers generally serve without compensation, and naturally and justifiably prefer large loans to small ones.

"If a capitalist wants to borrow $100,000 on good security he can obtain it. If a workingman wants $500 on equally good security, he cannot."

Quincy found his ideal in 1876 on a visit to the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia where he saw "long streets of comfortable homes that have been built by workingmen through their agency."

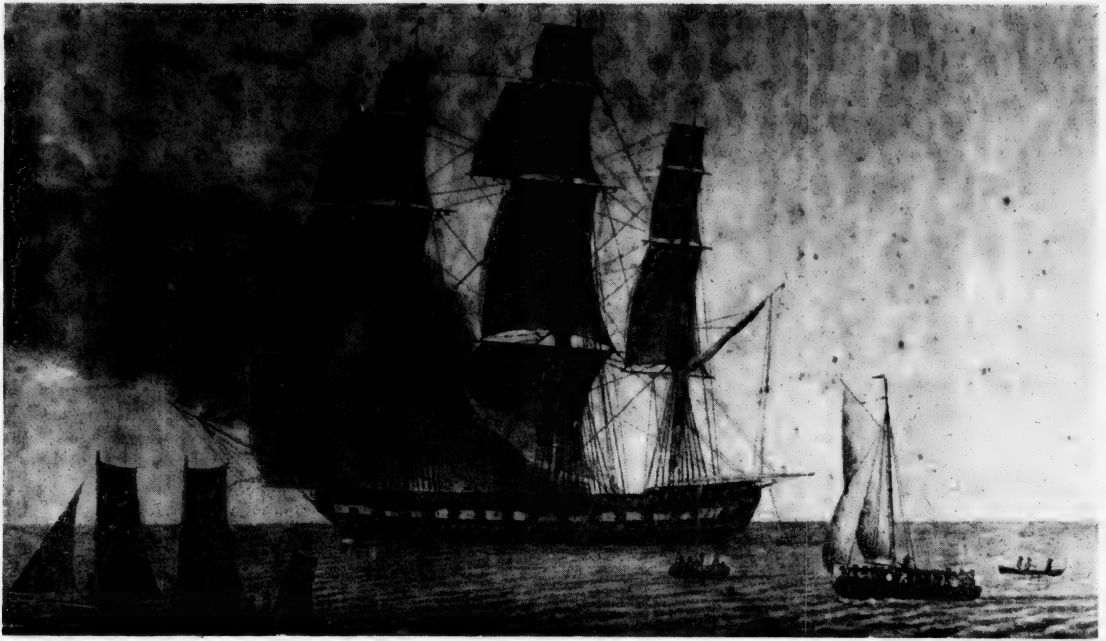

Their agency was a "serial share plan," in which members agreed to purchase monthly shares rather than deposit their savings into another's custody.

He petitioned the Massachusetts legislature for approval of a "cooperative saving fund and loan association" in the Bay State. It was turned down.

He was back the following year and this time he had wide support. The bill was introduced in January, heard in March and signed into law by Gov. Alexander H. Rice in May, in 1877. The first cooperative bank was established in Boston in July, with Josiah Quincy as one of the founders.

Quincy died on Nov. 2, 1882, in the family home in Quincy, seven years before the founding of the cooperative bank that bears his name, but his legacy is reflected in the eulogy delivered by Alderman Slade of Boston:

"We recognize that public spirit and practical philanthropy which, in his private capacity, devised the construction of modest and comfortable homes for the poor and initiated at the same time sobriety, industry and thrift among the occupants."

Shipbuilding was already a Quincy industry when this vessel, The Ship Massachusetts, was launched at Germantown in 1789, the year George Washington became our first President. At that time she was the largest ship ever constructed in the new nation. After a year of service in the East India trade she was sold to the Danish East India Company and she was renamed the Dronning (Queen) Juliane Maria. This picture shows the ship on fire in the bay of Bengal in August, 1796. The crew, shown leaving in the life boats, sailed for 16 days to India. This copy of a painting hanging in the Danish Maritime Museum at Kronburg Castle in Denmark was made available by Henning Henningsen, museum director.

We go back a long way together.

Board Plans Appeal

QHA Loses Suit Over Safford St. Home

The Housing Authority's plans for a home for mentally retarded adults on Safford St., Wollaston received yet another setback in court last week.

Norfolk County Superior Court Judge Andrew Meyer, in a Dec. 17 decision, rejected the QHA's request that he order city Building Inspector Allan MacDonald to issue a building permit for the home.

The QHA will appeal that decision, according to its counsel Atty. Paul A. M. Hunt.

MacDonald said at press time he had not yet received a copy of the judge's decision.

"I don't want to comment all over the newspapers without having the facts in front of me," he said. "All I'll say is, we had a difference of opinion and the judge has made his decision."

MacDonald said he opposes renovation of the 215 Safford St. site on the basis of a 1977 Board of Appeals decision which he claims restricted use of the building to a two-family home.

However, Meyer dismissed that particular decision as "not pertinent" to the controversy. Chapter 40A of the state laws exempts "educational" projects, such as the Safford St. home, from zoning ordinances.

"However, such use may be subject to reasonable regulations," noted the judge.

New Law But:

No 'Right On Red' For Quincy Drivers

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

If you're one of those people who can't wait to try the new "right turn on red light" law, don't hold your breath—at least in Quincy.

None of the 87 traffic signals maintained by the city will be affected when the law goes into effect Jan. 1.

According to Robert Lohmes of the city sign department, work crews are placing "No Turn On Red" signs at each of the 87 traffic signals—a total of over 300 signs.

"Every intersection will have them," he said.

Some of those signs may be removed gradually, if right turns are judged to be safe, said Capt. Paul Lahive of the Police Traffic Department.

In addition, "right turns on red" may be made at some intersections on roads in Quincy

Tax Crackdown

Auto Excise Delinquents Lose Licenses

By TOM HENSHAW

City Treasurer Robert E. Foy III says the city is on its way to a record collection of nearly $3.9 million in auto excise taxes for fiscal 1980.

That's up from $2.4 million in 1978 and from $3.2 million in 1979.

And, thus far, the drivers' license of about 50 delinquent taxpayers have been suspended in the city's quiet drive to collect back excise taxes that in some cases date back to 1975.

"Collections have been had in the past," Foy conceded, "because until recently we have never had a program to go after the delinquents."

"No previous administration ever pursued it," said Mayor Arthur H. Tobin. "People figured that they'd let it go until the city came looking for them."

The city is looking for them now—and it's catching them, thanks to a new weapon forged by the State Legislature back in 1974.

It's a law permitting the city to go to the Registry of Motor Vehicles and have the licenses of delinquent taxpayers suspended after a certain period of time.

The Quincy program was started in January, 1979, with the hiring of two clerks at $10,000 each to seek out the delinquents and get the collection process started.

They struck pay dirt immediately, as can be attested by the fact that collections rose $800,000 for fiscal 1979 after they had been on the job only six months.

In the first five months of the current fiscal year, from July 1 through Nov. 30, collections have been running at a $1.2 million pace.

"That's $400,000 more than we collected in the same period last year," said Foy. "We should collect close to $3.9 million this year, about $700,000 more than last year."

"You collect more money in the six month period from January through June than you do July through December because that's when the current bills come out."

Many of the delinquencies, Foy said, were unintentional. The car owners had thought the tax bills were paid or they had traded in the car and the deal somehow escaped attention.

For the deliberate delinquents the process goes like this:

First there is the bill. If that's not paid in 60 days, there's the demand bill. If that's not satisfied then there is a deputy's notice and 10 days later another one.

By this time it's obvious the

To Employ 630

Fleming Appointed 1980 Census Office Manager

William C. Fleming of Boston has been appointed manager of the 1980 Decennial Census District Office in Quincy which opens in early January.

Announcement of Fleming's appointment was made by Arthur G. Dukakis, regional director, U.S. Department of Commerce, Bureau of Census, Boston.

The Quincy office will employ 630 temporary workers at the peak of census operations next spring. Hiring for most of the jobs will take place early next year after the office opens.

The 1980 census will be taken largely by the mail-out, mail back method. Each household will receive a census questionnaire in March and residents will be asked to complete and return it April 1, "Census Day" in a postage-free envelope.

Results of the 1980 census will determine Congressional apportionment and will be a key factor in the distribution of federal funds in the 1980's.

Police Dept. Commends 39 For 'Outstanding' Work

The Police Department has awarded 47 commendations to 37 police officers, a civilian department employee and a civilian witness for "outstanding performances" in the last six months.

Leading the list is officer Peter Flynn, who received commendations for his part in saving occupants of a 66 Harriet Ave., North Quincy home in a Sept. 24 fire; helping arrest a suspect after several reported assaults and battery on Nov. 24 and helping take suspects in a Nov. 20 holdup at the Neighborhood Pharmacy, Billings Road, North Quincy.

Civilian witness Jane Latus was also commended for her help in identifying suspects after that holdup.

Charles Santoro, a civilian in the department's crime analysis unit, was commended for helping to uncover a series of alleged thefts from the South Shore Tire Company, Wollaston.

Receiving two commendations were the following police officers: Robert J. Ciriello, Paul C. Hussey, John F. Kelley, Terrence P. Kelly, Paul Leman and Robert J. Merrill.

Also receiving commendations were Henry P. Bradley, Frank Calabro, William D. Cooper, Richard J. Curran, William T. Curran, Robert E. Curtis III, Daniel R. Dowling, Thomas W. Frane, Levin Gibbons, John Guilfeather.

Francis A. Grondin, Ronald H. Heggblod, Robert P. Kelley, Daniel F. Kennedy, Edward F. Kusser, Ernesto Lijoi, Michael Lukeman, Richard L. MacDonald, Angus A. McEachern Jr.

Russell P. Miller, Robert Morales, Donald J. Murray, Paul Nestor, Donald Pearson, Robert Quintiliani, Paul Smith, William Stenmon, Michael Sullivan, George F. Sullivan, Edward F. Weddleton.

Commendations were awarded for the following acts:

Curtis, Flynn and John F. Kelley - saving occupants in the Sept. 24 fire at 66 Harriet St.

Cooper, Heggblod, Hussey, Taylor, Miller, Smith and Santoro - for uncovering the series of alleged tire thefts at South Shore Tire Company.

Curran, Frane and Stenmon - for uncovering and arresting two suspects in a series of housebreaks in Houghs Neck.

1979 In Review

A Year Of Tax, Money, Labor Woes

By TOM HENSHAW

All year long the recurring theme was money.

Money to pay for rocketing energy costs. Money from contracts to build ships and keep thousands working at the Fore River Shipyard. Money for restless city employees to help them meet the rising cost of living. And, most important, money, lots of it, to meet the highest tax rate ever in the city of Quincy.

Of all the events that flitted across the stage in 1979, the biggest and week after week, the most persistent grew out of the enormous financial problems that confronted the city: the results of a decade of fiscal postponement that culminated in a $224 tax rate, for 1980, up $27.40 over 1979.

It was a long time coming, the tax rate, and before it was announced, finally and irrevocably, on Dec. 18, it seemed like everyone, up to and including Gov. Edward J. King, had had a hand in it.

It started back in May when Mayor Arthur H. Tobin presented a $99.1 million budget to the City Council. It was the largest in the city's history but, Tobin noted proudly, those sections of it that were being monitored by the state was well within the brand new 4 per cent tax cap legislation. The City Council trimmed it to $98.5 million.

Then misfortune followed upon misfortune.

The city had already fallen behind financially due to the tendency on the part of past administrations to overestimate receipts and underestimate expenses in an effort to come up with a tax rate that was pleasing to taxpayers, particularly in election years.

Even before the budget was presented, the city decided not to contest an appeal by State Street South from a tax that was levied on its computers.

"Such property is specifically exempted from being taxed by state law," explained Tobin. "Our attorney said, 'They'll laugh us out of court.'"

The came the landmark "Tregor decision," in which the State Supreme Court, after hearing a case brought against the city of Boston, ruled that a municipality cannot assess commercial or industrial property at a higher percentage than the lowest placed on residential property. In Quincy's case, the lowest was 18.7 per cent. State Street South, for instance, was set at 30 per cent.

In July, the city agreed to settle a Boston Gas Co. appeal, granting the company a $100,000 reduction in 1977 and 1978 assessments.

"If they went to court they would get a helluva lot more under the Tregor decision," said Chief Assessor John P. Comer.

In September, the Mayor said he

Home Heating Oil Supply Up, Price 'Stable'

The price of home heating oil remained stable while supplies continued to increase, the state office of Energy Resources report.

The per-gallon price rose just one 10th of a cent between Nov. 26 and Dec. 11, based on the OER survey of 125 heating oil dealers across the state. In addition, many dealers report that their sales are down as much as 20 percent since last year.

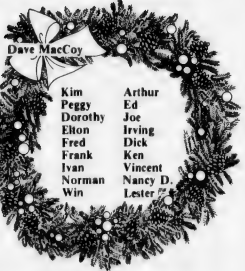

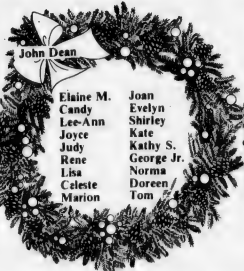

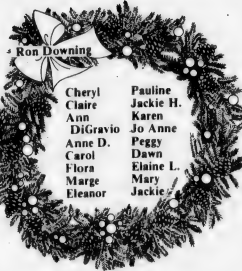

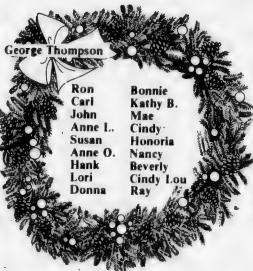

Joseph Fitzpatrick, director of the OER, credits the increased supplies to a combination of warm weather and conservation.

According to the survey, the average price of home heating oil is 87.8 cents per gallon - 34.6 cents more than in November, 1978.

Prices with individual dealers range from 80.2 to 94.4 cents per gallon.

Several Changes In Job Preparation Workshops

Alicia Coletti, director of the Women's Center at Quincy Junior College, announces several changes in the job preparation workshops to be sponsored by the Women's Center in January.

Because of the strong response to the Personal Growth and Development workshop, it will be run on Mondays, beginning Jan. 7 and on Thursdays, beginning Jan. 10. There are five openings remaining in the Thursday workshop.

Community Resources, a workshop led by Atlantic Neighborhood Center director, Jane Ford, which will explore education, employment, recreation and mental and physical health resources available on the South Shore has six openings and will begin Tuesday, Jan. 8.

The Parenting and Family Dynamics workshop will be combined and will be held Wednesday mornings beginning Jan. 9. Under instructor, Jeanne Evans, participants will discuss strengthening self-concept, setting limits, changing family roles, and guidelines for choosing day care. Seven openings remain in this workshop.

All workshops are free of charge and will be held for 10 weeks from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School in Quincy. Free child care will be provided by Joanne Sayer, a former early childhood student at Quincy Junior College who has worked in pre-school programs for nine years. Those who are single parents, over 35, handicapped or members of a minority group will be given priority but the workshops are open to all men and women in the area.

Those interested in registering for any of the workshops should send the following information to the Women's Center, Quincy Junior College, 34 Coddington St., Quincy, MA 02169: name, address, phone number, name of workshop chosen, need for child care and ages of children.

Mrs. Coletti noted: "We are pleased to have been funded by the Massachusetts Division of Occupational Education to run these workshops for men and women who wish to return to the job market. We hope they will enable the participants to make an easier and more satisfactory transition from home to the world of work."

BLUNTING RHEUMATIC FEVER

Casper, Wyoming seems to have conquered rheumatic fever, the dreaded, heart-damaging disease that develops in 1 to 3% of untreated school-agers stricken, even mildly, with strep throat. Not one case of rheumatic fever has occurred among Casper's 14,000 school children in more than three years - a period in which scores of cases might have been expected.

The key to Casper's success is a ritual performed daily in every elementary classroom. Each morning, every teacher asks whether any child in the class has a sore throat or cold. Children who answer yes are sent to a central station where throats are examined. A swab is taken, cultured and analyzed. If it indicates strep, a simple ten-day course of penicillin treatment can cure the infection and prevent rheumatic fever.

There's a moral here. Since not every town has a program like Casper's, parents should not ignore children's sore throats and colds when a simple cure can prevent an unnecessary tragedy.

Your Dental Health

by Daniel P. Sweeney D.D.S.

The first thing generally done when coming in for a dental examination is to insure that a full medical history is taken. This is necessary to determine whether or not there are any particular susceptibilities and supporting structure problems. It also indicates any potential allergic or sensitive reactions to drugs or treatment the dentist might consider. The medical history in addition gives him information about the patient and his health that will make him more sensitive to his particular needs. They are not simply being inquisitive when asking for medical information, even about matters other than teeth.

HAPPY HOLIDAYS to all our friends and neighbors from Dr. Daniel P. Sweeney, D.D.S., 539 Adams St., East Milton Square, and his staff! We all hope that 1980 will bring a new decade of Peace and Good Will to all nations of the world... Preventive dentistry is emphasized by Dr. Sweeney in treating all members of the family. Regular dental checkups and good oral hygiene habits are the best way to prevent dental problems. Call our office at 698-3636 for an appointment when you need dental care.

Kennedy Seen School Committee Vice Chairman

Now that Leo Kelly has next year's City Council presidency all wrapped up, the next big political question to be answered is: Who will be the new vice chairman (woman) of the School Committee?

Patricia Toland, under the rules and regulations of the board, cannot succeed herself. So, count her out.

Usually reliable sources say that Christopher Kennedy looks like the front-runner. Strongest other contenders seem to be veteran Frank Anselmo and Mary Collins. The sources think Kennedy has the best chance of putting the necessary votes together. And some think he has already done the cementing.

KENNEDY

ANOTHER QUESTION to be answered Inaugural Day, Jan. 7: who will succeed Josephine Carnali as City Council clerk of committees. She's giving up that $6,304 part-time job because of her new duties as acting assistant city clerk while Thomas Burke is on leave of absence serving as executive secretary to Mayor Arthur Tobin.

CARNALI

One name being mentioned: Joseph Shea. He was executive secretary to Mayor Walter Hannon and probably could muster enough votes if he wanted it. He was interested around the time Mrs. Carnali got the job. She succeeded the late Percy Lane.

Of course, one vote Shea can probably forget is Joseph LaRaia's. LaRaia is returning to the City Council by a narrow margin win over young Richard Koch, Jr.

There's no love between Shea and LaRaia—especially since LaRaia's book in which a thinly disguised character everyone sees as Shea gets rather rough treatment from LaRaia.

The return of both LaRaia and Shea to City Hall would make things a little more interesting.

JOSEPH BRETT is calling it a political career after two decades of service as a city councillor and state representative. But, you may still be seeing a lot of him.

BRETT

He reportedly is in line for a City Hall appointment—probably on a part-time basis in the area of the Election Department. But, he might also have a shot at the clerk of committees job—if he's interested.

WELL, AT LEAST three of the gifts we asked Santa to bring in last week's Sunbeams column actually were delivered. At Mayor Arthur Tobin's Christmas Brunch, George Riley, the mayor's former executive secretary, who read the column, showed up with: (1) a package of red golf balls for Public Works Commissioner James (Pete) Ricciuti to play a round on snowy weekends. (2) a large gavel for new City Council President Leo Kelly to keep all the mayoral contenders in the council under control and (3) a set of wheels for Mayor Tobin to really turn the city around.

RILEY

AT THE BRUNCH, former Mayor Thomas Burgin enjoyed himself sitting at Mayor Tobin's desk and reminiscing about the good old days. (Those were the days when the tax rate was $30 and increases used to come $1 or less at a time). They really were the good old days.

ASSESSORS Chairman John (Jake) Comer will long remember the new tax rate. He and Mayor Tobin took on the Department of Revenue trying to keep the increase around the $10 or $11 mark. But the state wouldn't listen and said make it $224—"a more realistic" but staggering $27.40 hike over 1979. Then, Comer came down with pneumonia just in time for Christmas and sidelined at home.

OBSERVATION via the Quincy Kiwanis Club newsletter: The cemetery just raised the price of its burial plots . . . and blamed it on the cost of living. A happy, healthy New Year, everyone.

U.S. daily newspaper advertising volume is about $13.9 billion in 1979, up from a 1978 all-time high of about $12.7 billion.

CITY HALL PICKETERS tell Councillor James Sheets their reasons for opposing the proposed rezoning of the Boston Harbor Marina last week. The picketers did not wish to be identified.

Squantum Residents Object Marina Development Moves On Two Fronts

Plans to develop the Boston Harbor Marina, site of the old Squantum Naval Air Station, inched forward on two fronts last week.

The Planning Board, after a joint public hearing with the City Council, reiterated its support of a bid to rezone five parcels of Marina land for industrial development.

And the Conservation Commission held a hearing on a half million dollar plan to expand the number of slips at the Marina from 500 to 711. A ruling is expected about Jan. 10.

Some 150 people, most of them opponents of the zoning change, packed the City Council chamber for the joint hearing on the plan that requires council approval.

Marina Industries Inc. is seeking to have a large parcel of land changed from Planned Unit Development to Industrial A zoning to clear the way for future development.

Zoning changes are also sought for small sections of land, including the access road from East Squantum St., now zoned PUD and Residence B to provide a conforming entry.

Residents' objection to the rezoning centers around the fact that they have some input in the development of PUD land and none in land that is zoned for Industrial A purposes.

"If you vote for rezoning, you are voting to take away our control," the hearing was told by William Golden, president of the Squantum Community association.

Walter J. Hannon, the former mayor of Quincy who represents Marina Industries, said the company has no intention of placing an offensive development on the site, which he called "an industrial slum."

The December issue of SCAN, the SCA's newsletter, contains a list of 26 industries that Hannon has promised will not be built on the site.

Opponents claimed that the list is not legally binding on Marina Industries or its successors if the land were rezoned.

Mary Barry 'Good Samaritan' As Teacher, Person

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Miss Mary Barry died a few weeks ago and was buried with a few friends and relatives in attendance. I was told that the obituary notice appeared only in a Brockton paper.

Mary Barry served as a teacher of business subjects at Quincy High School for a period spanning five decades (the 1920's through the 1960's). The standards she set for her students were high, and she made sure that they were met. However, she regarded all as children of God and treated them accordingly. Examples of her devotion to those under her tutelage are legion. Let me list only a few known to me.

(1) An orphaned boy, failing in school, tried to join the Navy but was rejected for failing to meet height standards. Hearing about this, Miss Barry, who was his home room teacher, accompanied him after school to the Boston Recruiting Center and convinced the recruiters that they had made a mistake. They took him saying, "If his teacher is willing to go to this trouble, he must be a man we can use."

(2) Some years ago, after school, a young man came into the home room I shared with Miss Barry. He identified himself to me saying, "I'm looking for Miss Barry. I guess I was the scourge of Quincy High before I dropped out of school, but she was the only teacher who never gave up on me. I thought that she would be interested to know that I'm now attending a private preparatory school and have every intention of continuing my education." I remember this incident well because I was one of the many teachers who had given up on him.

(3) All her former students remember, I'm sure, how much she urged them to take Civil Service exams. No doubt, many are now holding good government positions as a result.

Add to the above the hours she spent helping new teachers and widows returning to the job market and in need of confidence and a review of their business training. Now you have a fairly accurate picture of this really "good samaritan."

Mary Barry doesn't need any material help, but to those of you who, like myself, feel indebted to this wonderful woman, I have a suggestion: The Quincy Retired Teachers Ass'n. has set up a Scholarship Fund and hopes to award scholarships to graduates of Quincy's three high schools beginning in 1981. Any donations made to this fund in memory of Mary Barry will be gratefully received. Make checks payable to:

Points To Ponder

- Do you know what OPEC stands for—Oil Prices Escalate Continually.
- The governor dines on lobster and crabmeat; he gets involved in setting tax rates; and now he's taken over the MBTA—When we elected King we thought that was his name, not his title.
- It's hard to remember that giving is better than receiving when a lot of our money is going to OPEC nations, legislators, pay raises and Chrysler.
- Panama and America made a trade. We got some hats and bananas and they got a canal and a deposed Middle East leader.
- The Popeye comic strip is 60 years old this week; and the old sailor looks pretty good for his age, but we still don't like spinach.
- There's a new item on the market that measures infinitesimally small amounts of time—like how long it takes the driver behind you to beep his horn after the light turns from red to green.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Auditor Finds Quincy Lax In Bill Collecting

The transition between the administrations of Mayor Gustave B. Bates and Mayor-elect Perley E. Barbour was far from a smooth one.

A scathing report from the State Auditor's office cited laxity on the part of the City Treasurer in collecting overdue bills and unpaid hospital accounts that were allowed to top $37,000.

The report, covering the period from Jan. 1, 1923 to April 9, 1924, was read at a special meeting of the City Council.

Mayor Bates tried to remove Emery L. Crane as City Clerk, a post he had held for many years, on charges of "malfeasance," which Crane denied. Crane pointed out that the power to fire the City Clerk was vested in the City Council, not the Mayor, and Bates spent the last day of his term looking up the law.

Mayor-elect Barbour announced that he would appoint Joseph T. Wrightman of Quincy Point as chairman of the Board of Assessors and George H. Beam of Atlantic and Fred L. Zoller of Wollaston as members.

And Frederick F. Green resigned from the Hospital Board of Managers claiming an "unnecessary insult" to his son, Russell K. Green, who resigned as Commissioner of Welfare.

WOLLASTON HC WINS

The Wollaston Hockey Club, amateur champions last winter with a 16-0 record, opened the 1924-25 season with a 7-1 victory over Rockland on National Sailors Home Pond.

The Wollaston lineup included the Hall brothers, Howard, Alton, Wes and Russ, as well as Capt. Johnny Osberg, Art Sawyer, H. Desjardins, H. McKinnon and goalie Babe Ganzel.

HANCOCK TOMB FOUND

Two boys, Forrest I. Neal Jr. and John Howland, were credited with rediscovering the tomb of patriot John Hancock's father in the Hancock Cemetery next to City Hall.

The tomb was lost briefly when a tourist complained that he couldn't find it and neither could a reporter from the patriot Ledger nor history buff Warren Parker.

Young Neal and Howland recalled taking a picture of the stone not long before.

SKATING ON EDWARDS MEADOW

Town Brook was dammed behind the stores on Hancock St. and Edwards Meadow, bounded by Granite and School Sts. and the railroad tracks, was flooded and turned into a giant skating rink.

New Board Room Dedicated Late Robert M. Faxon Honored For Unlimited Dedication To Area

The late Robert M. Faxon was hailed recently by Mayor Arthur H. Tobin and business leader Frank Remick as a man of unlimited dedication to Quincy and the South Shore.

The occasion was the dedication of the Robert Morrison Faxon Conference Room at the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, of which Faxon was a member for many years.

The room is an expansion of the old Board Room at the Chamber, a five-month remodeling job that included doubling the size and adding a rear entrance hall for convenience.

It was Faxon who made possible the sale of the building, the old Miller estate on Miller Stile Rd., to the Chamber as a headquarters back in 1960.

Donors who made construction of the conference room possible included:

All-Stainless Inc.; Armstrong Cork Co.; Boston Gas Co.; Boston Gear; Braintree Cooperative Bank; Braintree Savings Bank; Burgin, Platner & Co., Inc.; Christopher Publishing House.

Clark & Smith, Inc.; Colonial Nursing Home; Colony, Inc.; Curtis Enterprises; Dr. Edward Fitzgerald; Grossman Division of Evans Products Co.; Hancock Bank and Trust; Walter J. Hannan.

Harrison Publishing House, Inc.; Hendrie's Inc.; Hurley Insurance Agency, Inc.; Lantana; Meredith & Grew; Noble's Camera Shops; Norfolk Corp.; The Patriot Ledger; Quincy Cooperative Bank.

Gerald T. Reilly & Co., Inc.; Remick's of Quincy; Sears, Roebuck & Co.; Harold H. Slate; South Shore Bank; South Shore Broadcasting Co.; State Street Bank and Trust; Suburban Insurance Agency; Walsh's Restaurant; The Wool Shop.

Members of the Faxon Memorial Committee included:

John W. Blake, Thomas S. Burgin, John E. Conway, Joseph B. Grossman, William E. Kelley, Forrest I. Neal Jr., William A. O'Connell, Charles A. Pearce, George D. Reardon, Gerald T. Reilly, Frank E. Remick, Harold H. Slate, Ronald E. Zoolek.

QCAO Crisis Intervention Program

The Quincy Community Action Organization will be administering a Crisis Intervention Program for Quincy, Milton, Weymouth, Braintree and Cohasset.

Funds for the program have not yet been released, and applications won't be taken until the funds are available.

When they are available, it will be announced.

Eligible households may receive up to $400 in assistance payments or the amount that is required to rectify the crisis situation, whichever is less.

The program will require specific information based on 125 percent income eligibility.

The guidelines for family size and income are: one member, $4,250; two, $5,625; three, $7,000; four, $8,375; five, $9,750; six, $11,125. For each additional family member, add $1,375.

The guidelines must be verified by letters from AFDC monthly allowance, AFDC Security monthly allowance; SSI monthly allowance; and unemployment weekly allowance.

Report of retirement income or other monthly allotments, and if employed, copy of six percent pay stubs or letter from employer should be submitted.

Current utility and fuel bills must also be submitted when the application is taken.

For more information, call the Quincy Community Action Energy Office, 471-4026.

Atlantic Open Cupboard Offers Emergency Food

The Atlantic Neighborhood Center has established an "Open Cupboard" providing non-perishable food for emergency situations.

This is a service for Atlantic residents who may be in temporary need of food. The only guideline to use the open cupboard is that a family's resources are limited and their "cupboard is near empty". All one has to do is call or drop by the Center. With the rising cost of fuel this year, this service will aid those who may be making the food/fuel choice this winter.

The shelves are stocked by the Center staff members and those in the community who "have a little more" to contribute. The cupboard contains such items as canned goods, instant potatoes, dry milk, fruit juices, pasta, peanut butter, and other such non-perishable foods. It would be greatly appreciated if residents could drop off any items of this type at the Center in order to assist other residents in surviving the long winter.

For further information on this or any other program offered at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center contact Jane Ford, Director at 773-1380, ext. 328.

Grandparents' Day At Fenno House Friday

Grandparents' Day will be observed at Fenno House Friday, Dec. 28, at 2 p.m. in the Community Room, 540 Hancock St., Wollaston.

There will be movies,

1979 In Review

It Was A Year Of Tax, Money, Labor Woes

had been notified that the city had lost a $1.3 million Tregor decision tax case brought by State Street South before the State Appellate Tax Board. That was $4.66 on the tax rate.

The cherry sheets came out in August and Quincy's share of state aid was called "disappointing"—$12.8 million, an increase of more than $1.6 million but not as much as it would have received had the state used the so-called "growth policy" formula based on the city's efforts to provide services, the formula favored by the state's mayors.

The disappointing cherry sheet brought another financial factor to the fore.

City employees had been working without contracts since July 1, 1978. Most of them had not had a raise in two years. Some contracts had been signed, but with the proviso that there be money available with which to fund salary increases.

"In order for me to give every city employee a cost of living pay raise, I need $5 million," said Mayor Tobin. "I don't have $5 million. That would raise the tax rate $18 to $22. Do we raise the tax rate $18 to $22 or do we lay off people?"

For a while the Mayor held out the hope to city employees that new state aid might include enough to cover pay raises but those hopes were dashed by the cherry sheet.

Nurses picketed City Hall in July and Eamon Hogan of the Mass Nurses Association said: "They have been waiting over two years for a wage increase. I hope this will demonstrate to the Mayor and the public the depth of our feeling."

"I don't know where to get the money," said the mayor.

Nurses also had an eight-day sick-out at the Hospital which, said Director Anthony DeFalco, cost the city as much as $500,000 in revenue and he proposed a one-day payless furlough as one alternative to recoup.

"We don't seem to be getting anywhere," said Pauline Kennedy, of the nurses bargaining committee. "People can't wait forever."

The School Committee asked the Mayor for $1.875 million in supplemental budget to fund contracts already signed including $960,000 to cover the committee's "last best offer" to the teachers. The mayor turned them down.

Teachers voted to cut back services if no agreement was reached. They would not conduct additional field trips; they would assume no extra duties during their lunch hours; they would not supervise detention. A strike vote was taken but the results were not made public.

The Union of Hospital, Library and Public Employees filed suit to prevent the city from setting a tax rate until pay raises already granted were funded but Superior Court Judge Herbert Abrams turned them down. It was a moot point. The tax rate wasn't about to be set at that time anyway.

The Tobin administration and the State Department of Revenue were locked in battle over how much the city could claim in anticipated receipts before the state would permit the sum to be applied to the tax rate.

"We have said right from Day One that we were looking at a $20 tax rate increase," said Tobin. "The city auditor, the city treasurer and I put a plan together to cut that figure in half."

But the Department of Revenue, taking a hard line in the light of Quincy's past record with estimated receipts, refused to go along with the plan. The Mayor went straight to Gov. King with the city's problem and for a while it seemed as if they were solved.

Assessor Comer buttonholed the governor at a party in Quincy and he was so sure that the city had a commitment from King that he called an 8 p.m. news conference and announced a compromise tax rate of $221.20 a thousand, up $24.60 from last year.

But the Department of Revenue wasn't buying even the governor's intervention and, a scant two weeks before the year ended, the city quietly surrendered and the tax rate was set at $224, up $27.40, the second biggest jump in the city's history.

"We fought the good fight," said Mayor Tobin. "The Department of Revenue officials are totally insensitive and uncompassionate."

Still pending at year's end were contracts and raises for city employees.

Mayor Tobin kicked off his second year in office with a mid-term address that stressed efficiency in government in the best interest of the long-suffering taxpayer.

"For many years," he said, "elected officials have likened the cry of taxpayers for efficiency in government to that of the loud but harmless sound of thunder."

"However, this is no longer the case and the legitimate impatience of taxpayers has been charged and is beginning to be felt as a bolt of lightning, hitting and cutting randomly as it takes its toll from among the unsuspecting."

Paul D. Harold, the rising young (31) politician who defeated Sen. Arthur H. Tobin in 1978 on the issue of being a fulltime senator, resigned his seat on the City Council to fulfill the pledge.

"This I believe will mark an end to an era for the city of Quincy of dual office holding and I think history will show that this will serve the city in the best interests of all concerned," he said.

Joseph E. Brett, the veteran office holder who served on the City Council in 1958-59 and in the State Legislature from 1959-76, was chosen to replace Harold on the Council when the latter resigned.

Brett decided not to run for another term and the new MDC sub-station on Quincy Shore Drive at Wollaston Beach was designated the Joseph E. Brett Station in honor of his long years of service to the people of Quincy.

There were changes in the Tobin administration during the year.

James P. Papile, the last remaining assessor appointed by former Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia, was dropped when his three-year term expired and John Belcastro, a Wollaston real estate man, was named to the $21,700 post.

Former Mayor Walter J. Hannon resigned the $26,790 job as Planning Director for a better one with Boston Harbor Marina Inc., and 29-year-old James Lydon, who had worked in the department for three years, was elevated into his place.

Geoffrey A. Davidson, a former planning director under Mayor Hannon, was named to be a member of the Planning Board. Dr. Samuel Solomon, a Quincy physician for 46 years, retired as Health Commissioner and Dr. Robert P. McKeough, a Wollaston obstetrician and gynecologist, was named to fill the last 18 months of his term.

Thomas R. Burke, the assistant city clerk, for 19 years, took a leave of absence from that post to become Mayor Tobin's executive secretary when George R. Riley resigned to go back to private business.

William J. Kelly of Wollaston, a retired Army colonel, was named city purchasing agent after Aggripino (Rocky) Rocuzzo moved into a post at City Hospital.

The $7.5 million slander suit lodged against Tobin by the Post Gazette, a newspaper published in Boston's North End, was dismissed in Superior Court when the aggrieved publication refused to open its books to prove damage.

Tobin had made a disparaging remark about the Post Gazette during the heat of the mayoral campaign against Joseph J. LaRaia in May, 1977.

City Loses 15-Year Battle Against Revaluation

The cloud that had hung over the six-year political career of City Councillor James A. Sheets appeared to have been lifted once and for all.

Superior Court Judge Henry H. Chmielinski denied a bid by former City Councillor Albert R. Barilaro to prevent Sheets from drawing his $3,000 salary as a councillor while he was receiving $20,000 as a teacher at the city-run Quincy Junior College.

The question had been in and out of the courts since 1973 when Sheets first won the Council seat in Ward 4 from Barilaro.

In a sense, Judge Chmielinski was reaffirming an original 1974 ruling which held that "there is no provision of law which forbids (Sheets) from qualifying and entering upon the performance of his duties as a city councilman merely because he is an instructor in the school system of the city."

"I'd like to believe it's over now," said Sheets.

It was the year that revaluation of property to full fair market value finally came to Quincy after some 15 years of fending it off. It was, however, tempered by the thought that 100 per cent valuation would last only long enough to establish a value on which to implement classification in 1982.

At first the city, under threat of court and state action, tried to revalue as cheaply as possible by using CETA workers to compile data under a $225,000 federal grant but the State Department of Revenue decided that route was not moving fast enough. The job had to be done in time to be certified for classification by June 30, 1981.

Supreme Court Judge Herbert P. Wilkins laid it on the line for the city early in October when he set a deadline of Nov. 19 by which to appropriate funds and hire a commercial firm to do the revaluation job. If not, said the judge, the state will hire a firm and deduct the cost from state aid due to Quincy.

Reluctantly -- the vote was 5-4 -- the City Council scraped up $350,000 from other accounts and matched it with $375,000 already in the appraisal account in the budget and the firm P. R. C. Jacobs of McLean, Va., was hired under a $561,794 contract to do the job. Reval began in Quincy Nov. 19.

The MBTA's Red Line extension from Quincy Center to South Braintree moved ahead apace but, since the MBTA was involved, there simply had to be controversy and it centered around a pedestrian entrance from Independence Ave. to the Quincy Adams Station, which was due to be finished early in 1981.

South Quincy residents did not want the pedestrian access and they made that plain during a hearing sponsored by the South Quincy Civic Association at the Lincoln-Hancock School. Residents of Braintree, however, were just as firm that there should be some way for people to get to the station on foot.

Said Braintree Selectman Donald J. Laing:

"Quincy may have a promise from the MBTA that there'd be no access but the citizens of Braintree have a promise from the federal government that the access is going to be there. Now, if we can negotiate one that's acceptable to both, fine. But we are as adamant in our position as your officials are in theirs."

A long period of negotiations with the U.S. government reached first fruition in September when Cong. Brian J. Donnelly and State Rep. Michael W. Morrissey swung ceremonial hammers to begin demolition of 38 units of Squantum Gardens to make way for 2.6 acres of recreational land.

The 122 units of housing for families of South Weymouth Naval Air Station personnel was built in 1956 and had deteriorated over the years to the point where only 56 units were occupied. They were scheduled to be renovated for $500,000 and the rest disposed of, hopefully to the city.

The long controversy over the addition and renovation to North Quincy High School appeared to be winding down to a conclusion, but only after one last battle.

The addition was turned over to the School Department in February and all hands turned to the renovation of the old building but, by April, it was discovered that there had been so many delays that it would cost $1.5 million more, most of it to cover an extra 94 days the contractor would have to remain on the job.

The City Council approved the bond issue by a 6-3 vote, the bare two-thirds needed for passage, and only after Councillor Stephen J. McGrath reversed a previous vote and voted for it.

"The time has now come to finish the job once and for all," said McGrath. The job, when finished, would cost $17.6 million, up from the $13.5 million that was claimed to be the price in 1977.

embroiled in a controversy over the possibility of closing some schools as the enrollment dipped to 12,900, down from 16,488 in 1972, and forecasts were that it would bottom out at about 10,000 in the mid-1980s.

It was suggested that all the schools with less than 200 pupils be closed -- including the Cranch, Great Hill, Hunting, Myles Standish, Beechwood Knoll, and Gridley Bryant -- with an initial savings of $211,000.

But parents of children attending those schools made it plain at public hearings that they wanted none of it.

"We have the neighborhood school concept in Quincy and to maintain it we have to expect the expense," said City Councillor Leo J. Kelly, speaking for parents of the Great Hill School. "Closing these smaller neighborhood schools will be disruptive."

The Adams Birthplaces, the colonial farmhouses where two presidents of the United States were born, changed hands during the year with the city, which was unable to pay for their upkeep, turning them over to the U.S. National Parks Service.

"There comes a time when local pride gives way to national pride," said Thomas Boylston Adams, a descendant of both those presidents. "These houses rightfully belong to the whole nation, not to any part of it."

Another historical shrine in Quincy was beginning to feel the upkeep money pinch. Members of United First Parish Church were considering plans, including an association with the National Parks Service, as a means of obtaining repairs to the 151-year-old structure.

"The building has got to have some steady, constant maintenance," said the Rev. Keith Munson, pastor. "There are no reserves or endowments to meet catastrophes."

Residents of Germantown won their fight with the City Health Department for the right to keep their dogs, which had been banned from the housing projects as a health hazard by Commissioner Dr. Samuel Solomon in November, 1978.

Dog owners, led by the Pet Task Force of the Harborview Residents Committee, went to court for a restraining order. But one day before the hearing the city stepped back, issued a new order calling on the dog owners simply to be in control of their dogs at all times.

Mayor Tobin continued to give development a high priority in his administration and there was a flurry of new building proposed, planned and actually begun all over the city.

Plans for the Campanelli-Stop and Shop office building on the Della Chiesa Parking Area got a big push when the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development granted $3.79 million to build a parking garage over the MBTA tracks to serve the new building.

"This is just the shot in the arm that the city needs to get started on the road to what I consider a very bright future," said Charles Pearce, chairman of Progress for Downtown Quincy (PDQ).

The Planning Department disclosed the tax incentive agreement under which owners of the building would pay the city some $10 million in lieu of taxes over a period of 30 years. Now the area, including buildings at the corner of Hancock and Granite Sts., produces $62,000 a year in revenue.

The National Fire Protection Association broke ground for its new home in West Quincy, an $11 million, five-story building set on 42.5 rural acres on Pine Hill off Willard St. It is to be occupied in the spring of 1981.

Ground was also broken near the State Street South complex for the $11 million, five-story Monarch office building, a joint venture of the O'Connell brothers Peter and William, of Quincy and the Monarch Life Insurance Co. of Springfield.

"Quincy is becoming an office mecca!" exclaimed the Rev. Bedros Baharian, chairman of the Planning Board.

The O'Connell brothers, along with the Ricciardi brothers, Stephen and Paul, also received approval to build a $4 million, 132-unit luxury apartment house on the site of the old Quincy Adams Yacht Yard in Adams Shore.

SCI Investment Co. of Genoa, Italy, attracted by the proximity of transportation, started construction of a $4.5 million office building on Newport Ave., not far from State Street South.

The old Gilchrist building in the Parkway was occupied by a major retailer, T. J. Maxx, and Grossman Properties, the owners, announced plans to float an $800,000 commercial revenue bond to renovate the building.

Sage Motor Hotels of Boston announced tentative plans to build a 150 to 200 room Howard Johnson Hotel, complete with Ho Jo museum, in the Parkway, the plan contingent on construction of another parking garage over the MBTA tracks.

"There is a very livewire group in Quincy that is anxious to see positive things happen," said Robert Sage, president of the hotel chain. "When we invest our own funds we like to see this kind of effort."

But all the effort in the world didn't save Sears Roebuck's Quincy store, which announced in February that it would be moving into a new building in South Shore Plaza in the fall of 1980.

And Frank Remick, just turned 70, announced the sale of the 83-year-old Remick's of Quincy, one of the mainstays of the downtown, to New Yorkers Louis Hayman and Daniel Shechtman, who promised that it would remain in Quincy and keep the Remick name.

The departure of Sears actually enhanced the possibility of an East-West connector, the road linking the shopping areas on both sides of Hancock St. which was placed in limbo in 1978 when there were objections from the business community.

"Our original purpose," said Baharian, "was to go underneath Hancock St. through the Kincaide Furniture store to preserve Sears. The proposal we're studying now is to straighten out the road a little bit and go through part of the Sears store and down Revere Rd.

"But we have made a commitment to the merchants of Quincy that until we can sell them the idea that the road is worthwhile we will not proceed with it and that agreement still stands."

Four areas in Quincy were designated by the state as Commercial Area Revitalization Districts, enabling business people to obtain 100 per cent tax exempt revenue bond financing for expansion or relocation. The areas were downtown Quincy, Wollaston, North Quincy and the "Gateway" around State Street South.

Reorganization Plan Presented For City Hospital

City Hospital, long the subject of controversy for its shaky financial condition, was surveyed minutely by Touche Ross and Co., a Boston accounting firm, which came up with a reorganization plan designed to place it on a firm fiscal foundation.

The plan included three new management positions -- budget director at $20,375, patient accounts manager at $16,500, and assistant director for financial services at $25,000 -- at which some members of the City Council raised inquisitive eyebrows.

"I have no confidence that this administration will appoint qualified people for these positions," said Councillor Francis X. McCauley, and he, along with Councillors James A. Sheets and Joseph E. Brett, voted against the financial services post.

"You don't run a $20 million operation with $12,000 a year clerks," retorted Thomas Maguire of Touche Ross.

Mayor Tobin named John Morris, the hospital's assistant comptroller, to the post of budget director; Aggripino (Rocky) Rocuzzo, city purchasing agent, as assistant director and Joyce Baker as patient accounts manager. Then he indicated his next move may be against the Hospital Board of Managers, which was unhappy with the way it was bypassed in the reorganization.

"Once we accomplish the reorganization of the financial section there may be other reorganizations, too," said Tobin.

Stephanie Anne Siteman, 3, adopted Korean daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Siteman of South Quincy, became an American citizen. Given a small flag pin, she exclaimed, "I want a big flag," so Cong. Brian J. Donnelly got her one that had flown over the Capitol.

The City Council moved to build a rail around Robert Casagrande's house at 381 Beale St., Wollaston, after it was struck by a car for the sixth time in six years. Said Casagrande: "My house is like a pitstop."

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Chandler purchased the old (1927) Wollaston Theater and in mid-summer the old movie house echoed to "The Sound of Music," its first show in more than a year.

The Rev. John D. Banks announced plans to retire June 30, 1980, after 40 years in the ministry, the last 25 of them at Bethany Congregational Church.

John D. Vecchiola, 54, of Adams Shore, fled Iran in the wake of the Ayatollah Khomeini's revolution after a year as an advisor in weapons systems. "They asked me if I wanted to go back," said Vecchiola, "and I said 'You gotta be kidding!'"

Nearly 30,000 gallons of home heating oil spilled into the Town River by accident from the barge George T. Tilton, which was off loading at the Mobile Oil Co. terminal. Fishing boats were befouled and the river stank but there was no apparent lasting environmental damage.

Seven acres of Merrymount Park, sold to the federal government 22 years ago and used as a Nike site, was returned to the city at no cost, mostly through the efforts of Richard J. Koch, executive secretary of the Park and Recreation Board, who started agitating for it in 1963.

Over-Water Route Approved For Jets

The great controversy that raged for more than a year over the noise from aircraft departing from Logan Airport took a step toward final solution, although the Citizens Against Airplane Noise (CAAN) warned Quincy residents not to expect too much.

First, the FAA in a draft environmental impact statement recommended takeoffs up the Neponset River valley (195-220 degrees) during peak traffic hours and over Quincy (180 degrees), with a corkscrew turn, during off peak hours. Cong. Brian J. Donnelly called it "outrageous... totally unacceptable."

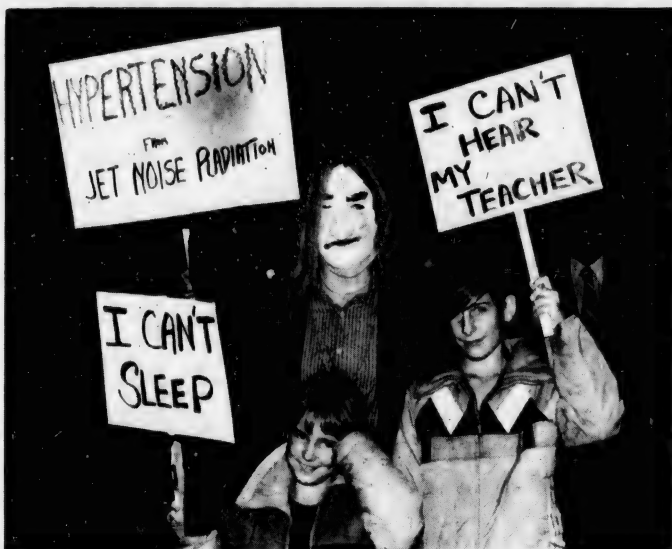

Then the FAA relented and tentatively approved for consideration the over-water route (140 degrees) the anti-noise people had been demanding. "We hope that this is not just one more empty public relations promise," said Bernice Mader, chairman of CAAN.

Dorothy Newton retired as assistant director after 42 years with the Thomas Crane Public Library and immediately announced plans to continue as a volunteer curator of the Parker Picture Collection with its more than 10,000 negatives and glass slides.

The Tobin administration was inquiring into the possibility of luring the headquarters of The Game, the Massachusetts State Lottery, to a brand new building in North Quincy when its lease in Braintree expires in February, 1980.

Five teenagers were arrested for doing $5,000 worth of damage to the New England Islamic Center in Quincy Point, but Mayor Tobin called it "Just a senseless act of vandalism. It had no religious significance at all."

The Quincy Housing Authority squabbled all year long with state and federal agencies over affirmative action plans in renting and in hiring but the big news was the appointment of Mrs. Lolita Harris of North Quincy as the state member of the Board of Commissioners. She was the first black woman -- or man -- to hold high public office in the city.

"Being black to me doesn't have anything to do with it," said Mrs. Harris. "I just feel that as a woman I'm filling a necessary void that I think needs a woman's touch."

With the state and federal officials looking over their shoulders, the commissioners hired a minority applicant, an American Indian, to fill a vacancy for a carpenter. But Elwood O. Mills decided he didn't want the job after all for reasons of health and Michael Santostefano of Quincy, white and male, got the $17,805 post.

Two regulation Little League fields were built in Merrymount Park, with big assist from the Quincy Sons of Italy, and named for Katherine G. McCoy and William J. Mitchell, two longtime members of the Park and Recreation Board.

Gasoline, Oil Prices Skyrocket As Energy Crisis Hits

ACTRESS RUTH Gordon returned home to attend the 65th anniversary reunion of her Quincy High School class of 1914.

Actress Ruth Gordon made a special trip from her summer home on Martha's Vineyard to attend the 65th reunion of her Class of 1914 often called the worst class at Quincy High School because no one made the honor roll. Eighteen of the 108 members of the class attended the reunion at the Neighborhood Club.

The 82-year-old Miss Gordon got in a good word for her new moving picture, "Boardwalk," that was released in September, and her latest literary effort, "An Open Book," to be published by Doubleday.

The energy crisis struck Quincy hard, as it did everywhere in the country, with the price of home heating oil edging toward the $1 a gallon mark and the price of School had barely opened in the fall when Dr. Creedon disclosed that the rising price of oil would cause a deficit of $454,000 in the school budget despite the fact that the schools were using some 500,000 gallons of fuel oil less than they did in 1971-72. The 1979-80 budget was based on 40-cent oil while the real price was expected to move on $1.

The Department of Public Works instituted a four-day work week in mid-summer in an effort to conserve energy and Commissioner James J. Ricciuti said the new schedule resulted in "more productivity." In the first 30 days the department's vehicles used 18 percent less gasoline and 27 percent less diesel fuel.

Wood-burning stoves to supplement the central heating systems in Quincy homes began to appear in large numbers and Building Inspector Allan F. McDonald expressed concern over the dangers of the stoves, especially those that were known to disintegrate at high temperatures.

"There is nothing to fear from a good stove properly installed but uncertified stoves and those that are improperly installed there is plenty to fear," he said.

Late in the year, gasohol -- fuel made from 90 per cent unleaded gasoline and 10 per cent alcohol -- appeared on a trial basis at Parkway Texaco on Adams St. It proved to be popular, even at a price of $1.098 per gallon.

Fires on consecutive days in July turned the city's attention to the benefits to be derived from smoke detectors in homes.

On the Fourth of July, Joseph McMahon was awakened by the smoke detector in his apartment at 100 Washington St. He roused other residents and called the Fire Department. Deputy Chief Carl Valenti said the detector undoubtedly saved lives and probably the building, too.

A day later, another smoke detector alerted the Myatt family to a fire in their home at 31 Riverbank Rd., Houghs Neck, and they not only escaped with their lives but put the fire out with a hose before the Fire Department arrived.

The two fires gave final impetus to a pilot program, backed by $5,000 in federal funds, for the installation of smoke detectors in the homes of senior citizens through the Atlantic Self-Help program.

The first detector under the program was put in the home of Michael and Agnes McGonagle of 106 East Squantum St. early in November. "I feel better about it," said McGonagle, a retired Boston Gear Works machinist.

As the year ended, the City Council passed an order accepting a state law which required that there be smoke detectors in every home in the city, although some councillors thought that the law might be a little difficult to enforce.

The National Newspaper Foundation in Washington honored The Quincy Sun as a National Blue Ribbon Newspaper in "recognition of the alert and progressive community-minded newspaper," one of only 165 papers in the nation to be so recognized.

The rising cost of production finally caused The Sun to raise its price on the newsstands for the first time since its founding. It went up to 15 cents an issue after holding the 10 cent price line for 11 years.

Kathy Mann, 17, of Houghs Neck, Miss Quincy Bay of 1978, added the title Miss South Shore to her laurels and was invited to compete in the Miss Massachusetts Pageant. She didn't win but "it was an exciting week. I

Constitution Comes Home For 4-Day Celebration

For a brief period at the end of summer, the people of Quincy set aside their troubles and travails for four days to celebrate an event of national significance that happened in Quincy 200 years ago.

It was in the law office of John Adams on Franklin St., South Quincy, in September, 1779, that Adams, his cousin Sam, and James Bowdoin devised a Constitution for Massachusetts, the document on which the U.S. Constitution is based.

Former Mayor and Sen. James R. McIntyre was named to head a committee to organize the four days of festivities which included a parade marshalled by Gov. Edward J. King, fireworks and an unprecedented visit by the original state constitution itself.

The priceless document, fragile and yellowed with age, was removed from the State Archives and brought to Quincy under guard in a Brink's truck to be on display where it was conceived in the old law office in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace. A total of 7,515 people viewed it during the four days.

"There are times when it's good to be an American and this is one of them," said McIntyre as he stood on the Presidents Ave. sidewalk supervising the delivery of the constitution.

"This transfer goes only a short way in thanking this city for all of us," said Secretary of State Michael J. Connolly, who came to Quincy with the document that is his trust.

"No community in our state has done more, has contributed more willingly in both quality and quantity to freedom and liberty."

Gov. King headed the all star roster for the grand parade, which also featured a contingent of 80 cadets from West Point, bands and marching groups clad in colonial costume. An estimated 250,000 watched the parade in 66-degree sunshine and another 100,000 viewed the fireworks on the second night of the celebration.

"I have a feeling," said Gov. King, "that if he were here today John Adams would not be surprised that his basic constitution still serves the Commonwealth he loved so greatly."

In conjunction with the Constitution Bicentennial Celebration, the city also took the opportunity to dedicate its new City Hall Annex, built with a federal grant of $2.4 million, and the plaza in front which was named Constitution Common.

Keynote speaker at the dedication was former Cong. James A. Burke, who served the people of Quincy and the 11th Congressional District for two decades before ill health forced his retirement in 1978.

"It was a great honor to represent this great historic city for 20 years," said Burke. "In my time in Congress, I was always concerned with the great tradition of this district."

The U.S. Naval Academy Band played for the dedication, George Montilio baked a 1,000 pound cake and Ed Monti of the Monti Memorial Co. chipped away at a 60-ton granite memorial to be placed in Constitution Common. At year's end it was still unfinished.

As the weekend drew to a close, a tired Cong. Brian J. Donnelly, who had hosted many of the events as the area's highest elected federal official, leaned against a light stanchion in Constitution Common and said:

"You know, we ought to do this more often."

And most of Quincy, obviously pleased with the events of the past four days, agreed with him.

The November election marked the return to political life of Joseph J. LaRaia, the former mayor (1976-77) whose two-year term had been sullied by charges of corruption which cost him re-election in 1977.

In the meantime, LaRaia had become an author, turning out a novel called "A City Under the Influence", a thinly veiled account of his two years in the mayor's chair in which he bitterly assailed his opponents under pseudonyms.

Those who were tuned in to Quincy politics had a field day determining who was who in the book, decided Lard Turbine was Mayor Tobin, Jeremiah Tubbs was former Mayor James R. McIntyre and Caesar Padrone was Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti, et al.

Out of office, LaRaia also made headlines when he sued the city for $5,000 in vacation pay he claimed was due him for his two years as mayor. District Court Judge Mel Greenberg dismissed the suit, saying the mayor's salary was set by ordinance at $25,000 a year and he may receive no other compensation.

LaRaia's return to the political wars came as no surprise although his timing was a bit unusual. After keeping everyone in suspense for months, he took out papers to run at-large for the City Council only 15 minutes before the deadline.

He barely made it back into office, too, winning the third and last at-large seat by a margin of only 197 votes in 24,990 cast over political newcomer Richard J. Koch Jr., son of the executive secretary of the Park and Recreation Board.

Mayor Tobin easily won a second term over Abe M. Itkin, a hospital social worker, by a margin of 15,516 to 6,775, after the two of them had eliminated a third candidate, Michael Jovanovic, in a single race preliminary that cost $35,000.

City Councillor Daniel G. Raymondi turned back a challenge from Kathleen O'Donnell, the Democratic state committeewoman, in Ward 2 in a campaign that featured a serio-comic incident involving Sen. Paul S. Tsongas.

Tsongas turned up at a Quincy Point fund-raiser for O'Donnell, who had worked hard for him in the senatorial campaign. The visit angered Raymondi, who showed up at the fund-raiser himself -- to discuss ward problems with his senator, he said.

"I thought it was flattering to have my opponent show up at my fund-raiser, even though it was a little unusual," said O'Donnell.

"Any elected official who did not do it could leave himself open for criticism," asserted Raymondi.

Francis X. McCauley drew the biggest vote of all, 14,931, as he won re-election along with John J. Quinn in their at-large Council seats. For the second election in a row, Michael E. Faherty ran and lost for the Council at-large.

Councillors James A. Sheets and Stephen J. McGrath had no opposition in their re-election bids but the other ward councillors were forced to campaign.

Leo J. Kelly defeated David MacMillan in Ward 1, John J. Lydon Jr. beat Gerald V. Noble in Ward 3, and Joanne Condon triumphed over Michael J. Kelly in Ward 6.

Patricia Toland, Christopher Kennedy and Frank Anselmo were re-elected to the School Committee over Patrick H.

Conroy and John H. McDuff.

The turnout of voters for both the primaries and general elections were disappointing but reflective of the lack of excitement in the races. Only 18.5 per cent showed at the polls in September and 52.2 per cent, the smallest in recent years, voted in November.

The Quincy High School football team, behind the running of Dan Goldrick and Tom Brennan and the passing of Dave Austin, easily defeated North Quincy, 34-3, in their 47th annual game on Thanksgiving. Quincy leads in the series 25-19 with three ties.

Quincy's own Patti Lyons, who now lives in Boston, finished second among the women entrants in the Boston AA Marathon in two hours, 38 minutes, 22 seconds, beating her personal best time ever by more than three minutes.

Pitcher Gary Earle, undefeated in nine games, hurled the North Quincy High School baseball team to a tie for the Suburban League championship but the Raiders bowed to St. Johns, 4-2, in the opening round of the Eastern Mass tournament.

Ken Coleman, once of North Quincy, was back as the radio voice of the Boston Red Sox, a job he previously held from 1966 to 1974. Coleman was also named general chairman of the Jimmy Fund, the favorite charity of Greater Boston sports

Jim McNally of Houghs Neck, a roofer who umpires college and Boston Park League games in his spare time, got his big but temporary chance to call balls and strikes at Fenway Park for $108 a game during a strike of major league umpires.

The Quincy High School basketball team, reversing a 1-21 record of 1978, tied for second place in the Suburban League but was eliminated in the first round of the Eastern Mass tournament, losing to Duffee of Fall River, 61-42.

Many Quincy people were among the 400,000 who thronged Boston Common in the rain for the historic Mass of Pope John Paul II, the first reigning Pope ever to visit Boston and several others helped to make the Mass possible.

Fifteen workers at the Antonelli Iron Works in West Quincy toiled 11 hours a day, six days a week from Sept. 7 to Sept. 26 on the iron work for the special platform for the Mass on Oct. 1.

Seven Quincy priests were among 300 serving communion -- the Revs. Cornelius J. Heery and James F. Hawker of Sacred Heart; Gerald J. Osterman of St. Boniface; Daniel Graham, Joseph Connolly, William Walsh, William McCarthy of St. John's.

The combined marching bands of Quincy and North Quincy High Schools and the Vo Tech School, 170 strong, performed during the Pope's visit on the line of march near St. Monica's Church in South Boston.

Two of Quincy's elder statepersons died in 1979.

Mrs. Edna Austin, 93, the first woman to serve on the City Council, from 1943-44 and 1947-60; lawyer and one of the founders of the League of Women Voters in Quincy.

Laurence J. Curtin, 78, city councillor from 1931-41, council president, unsuccessful candidate for mayor in 1957, and leader in the fight to overthrow the Plan E-City Manager form of government.

Death also took Aveda Zildjian, 90, who brought international fame to Quincy when he set up shop in the city and began turning out the world's best cymbals from an old family formula.

Other deaths during the year:

William J. Callahan, 77, lawyer and a city assessor from 1942-70, the last 10 years as chairman of the board.

Richard T. LaBrecque, 71, who covered Quincy for the Patriot Ledger for 33 years.

A. Everett Goodhue, 68, owner of the A. E. Goodhue Co. that has dealt in religious goods for 30 years.

John C. Ganzel, 69, retired fire lieutenant and brother of Babe Ganzel, Quincy's best known pro baseball player.

Robert M. Deware, 63, partner in Deware Brothers Funeral Home and long active in civic affairs.

Francis J. McNally, 56, deputy probation officer at Quincy District Court.

Richard J. Golden, for many years owner of the Franklin Print-

'History Of Modern China' At Quincy Junior College

"History of Modern China", a course on the role of China in today's world, is being offered by Quincy Junior College's Division of Continuing Education in the spring semester.

The second semester begins Jan. 28. The Modern China course will be taught Tuesday's 6:30-9:10 p.m., and is open to evening division students, Quincy and area residents.

The three-credit survey course will trace the western influence in China and the Chinese response to it from about the 1840's through the rise of the Chinese Communist Party to power in China. An attempt will be made to see beyond ideologies in order to gain a genuine understanding of the modern Chinese experience.

Present and future prospects will also be given some consideration, and some audio-visual materials will be utilized (such as China film strips) to give the student a knowledge of specifics, acquaintance with terminology, and equip the student with a knowledge of trends and sequences.

The course is being taught by Larry Rines, of QJC's History and Government Department. In addition, Mr. Rines, co-author of "A history of Shipbuilding at Fore River", is active in Civil War circles and is a member of the National Historical Society.

For further information or a brochure, call Dean Richard Mula at 784-8741.

Historical Society Offers 'Glass Furnace' Pamphlet

The Glass Furnace at Germantown is the subject of the latest publication made available by the Quincy Historical Society.

Entitled "Report of the Excavation of the Glassworks at Germantown, (old Braintree) Quincy, Mass.," it was written by Dr. George R. Horner, archaeologist, who directed the project for the Historical Society.

It is reprinted from the "Bulletin" of the Massachusetts Archaeological Society.

Dr. Horner details the methods and the work at the Shed's Neck marsh beside Town River, undertaken by the Quincy Society in cooperation with Eastern Nazarene College 10 years ago.

His report includes maps and sketches, as well as pertinent citations from letters and records concerning the 1752-1755 glassworks.

Other publications available at the society's offices at Adams Academy, Hancock and Dimmock

St., are "Wollaston of Mount Wollaston" by H. Hobart Holly; "New Beginnings—Quincy and Norfolk County, Massachusetts" by James R. Cameron; "Descendants of Edmund Quincy—1602-1637" by H. Hobart Holly; "Calendar of the Papers of General Joseph Palmer (1716-1788)" by James R. Cameron, and "Index to 'Three Hundred Years of Quincy'—Daniel Munro Wilson" by James R. Cameron.

Enrollment Clinic Jan. 5 For YMCA Fitness Programs

The Quincy YMCA will hold its winter enrollment clinic for the Physical Fitness Program for men and women on Saturday, Jan. 5, 1980, from 9 A.M. to 5 P.M.

Any adult who wishes to enter the fitness program must make an appointment for testing with William Johnson, and also obtain a medical clearance form from their physician before they are tested. There is a registration fee involved.

Primary purpose of this program is to improve the operational efficiency of the heart, circulatory and respiratory systems.

is continually monitored throughout the year. A new class time has been added to the weekly schedule Saturday from 9 to 10 A.M. Workout schedule is Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 7:45 A.M. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, 7:15-8 P.M. Saturday, 9-10 A.M.

To make an appointment, contact William Johnson, Fitness Director, Quincy YMCA, 479-8500.

'Aerobics In Motion' For Women At YMCA

The Quincy YMCA will begin a 12-week program for women in "Aerobics In Motion" during the week of January 7, 1980.

Registration is now open at the 'Y' main desk for two courses: Tuesday, Thursday and Friday mornings from 10:15 to 11:15 A.M., and Monday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings from 6:30 to 7:30 P.M.

The program is an effective way for women to become fit and stay fit. The program is a series of dance routines set to music. The dance routines are flexible enough to accommodate both the beginner and the advanced individual.

Instructors are: Maureen Carey, Lauren Nagle, and Beth Richardson. Each participant must have a Medical Clearance signed by the family physician; forms may be obtained at the Main Desk of the 'Y'. Course fee, advanced registration and a full membership is required. Call the YMCA at 479-8500 for further information.

An Aerobics demonstration will be held Thursday, Jan. 3 at 7 P.M. at the 'Y'. It is open to the public.

Record 4-0

Presidents In Tourney

Quincy's basketball team will take a 4-0 record into the Christmas tournament at Hingham Friday and Saturday nights, following an impressive 84-38 victory last Saturday over Valley Stream High of Long Island, N.Y.

Joe Amoroso's Presidents will play Hull in the first game at Hingham Friday at 7 with Hingham meeting Weymouth North at 9. The championship and consolation games will be played at the same times Saturday. Quincy will then host the defending state champion, Cambridge Rindge and Latin (also 4-0), Jan. 4 at 8.

The Presidents turned in one of their finest performances Saturday in rolling over Valley Stream, one of the top ranked teams in

New York. The game was played at Boston University's Case Center and was a preliminary to the BU-Charleston U. game.

Quincy won despite the absence of its top scorer, Brian Donovan, out with an injury. Another starter, Rich Finnegan, went out in the first period with an injury.

Stan Benson had a big night with 24 points and 10 rebounds. Steve Priscella had 17 points, 10 rebounds and 11 assists and Kurt MacDonald, filling in for Donovan, had 13 points and 15 rebounds.

Last Friday Quincy rolled to a 69-49 Suburban League win over Newton North as it exploded in the first half for a big 35-18 lead.

Amoroso used his entire squad as he rested up the starters for the Valley Stream game.

The Presidents again had a well-balanced offense with Brian Donovan scoring 17 points, Steve Priscella 11, Andy Carrera and Rich Finnegan 10 each and 10 Quincy players joined in the scoring.

Doug MacFarlane's Quincy junior varsity improved its record to 2-1 with a 50-31 win. Gary DiNardo, one of the team's outstanding players, scored 20 points and Pete Papile and Al Memmolo also played well.

Earlier the jayvees had defeated B.C. High, 59-49, with DiNardo scoring 24 points, and lost to Brookline, 65-59, after leading at the half by 13 points. DiNardo missed this game with a thigh injury.

Sports

CHUCK McDERMOTT of Quincy, who transferred from Assumption, is a 6-3 junior starter at forward for the Suffolk University basketball team.

Defeat Weymouth South

Raiders Host Cambridge

The North Quincy basketball team improved its record to 2-1 last Friday as Rich Keenan and Mark Millane sparked the Raiders to a 70-59 victory over Weymouth South.

North will host state champion Cambridge Rindge and Latin's undefeated powerhouse tonight (Thursday) at 8 and Friday and Saturday will play in a Christmas tournament at Silver Lake. The Raiders will play Plymouth-Carver in the opener Friday at 7. The championship and consolation games will be played Saturday starting at 7. North will be at Revere Jan. 5.

Keenan poured in 23 points and Millane had 12 points and 17 rebounds to lead the win over Weymouth South. Bill O'Connell added 11 points and Bob Bolster had 10 for Ed Miller's Raiders, who built up a 51-30 lead after three periods.

Earlier in the week North lost to Weymouth North, 61-50, despite a 27-point effort by Millane, the outstanding junior. Keenan had nine points.

Weymouth's outstanding Don McLeod had 21 points and South had a better balanced attack than North.

Weymouth pulled away in the second period and had a 32-22 halftime advantage.

Paul Bregoli's North junior varsity walloped Weymouth South, 71-51, for its first win in three games.

Steve Belcastro had a great night with 28 points. He was 13 for 14 from the floor including eight for eight in the third period.

All this despite the fact he played with four fouls in the second half. Vic O'Leary had 15 points and 15 rebounds.

The Raider jayvees lost to Weymouth North, 50-45, despite having a decided height advantage. Jack Brown had 10 points and 6-9 Chip Bunker took down 15 rebounds.

North had dropped its opener to Brockton, 58-46, with Bill DiCarli scoring 10 points.

Seeks 8th Win

QJC Faces Alumni

The Quincy Junior College basketball team, boasting a 7-1 record, will play the Alumni Friday, Dec. 28 at 7 p.m. at the Voch-Tech gym.

There will be no admission charge but the Jaguars' cheerleaders will accept donations from anyone interested in helping the team purchase warmup uniforms.

Mug 'n' Muffin has donated jerseys for the Alumni players.

The graduates will have a strong club led by Jim Hurley, class of 1974, the coordinator for this game who once scored 41 points for QJC. Other Alumni will be Patrick Noonan, 1974; Bob Sullivan, 74; Bernie Holleran, 76; Mike Granahan, 73; Ed Barrett, 74; Bob Crowley, 68; John Mullen, 74; Kevin Gibson, 75; Sam Abraham, 73, and Dan O'Donoghue, '76.

The Jaguars bounced back from their first loss last week to win two more games, topping Northern Essex, 83-62, Monday night in the last game before Christmas.

"This win kept us in first place in the Greater Boston Small College Conference and should provide us with some momentum going into the second half of the season," said first-year coach Brian Buckley.

Paul Waters led the scorers with 19 points, Paul O'Donoghue had 18, Bob Evans 16, Jim Holleran 15, Kevin Penny 13 and Ed Richard 10. Tim Murphy played a strong game on defense.

Last Thursday QJC defeated Hellenic, 83-71, as it held Paul Koutsoufalis, who is averaging 43 points and scored 53 in his previous game against Curry, to 27 points.

"We knew if we could keep him below his average, we would win the game," Buckley said. "He is a great shooter, but our guards played him tough and he really earned his 27 points."

Evans had 27 for QJC including 11 for 11 from the foul line. O'Donoghue, the Jaguars' leading scorer, left the game with a sprained ankle but Penney, Holleran and Waters all scored 13 points.

Earlier in the week Wentworth took advantage of the Jaguars' foul problems (four players fouled out) to hand them their first defeat, 81-63.

O'Donoghue and Evans had 15 points each in a losing cause.

Wentworth is right behind QJC in the conference with a 5-2 record.

Scanlan Shines In Net

Jim Scanlan of North Quincy, freshman backup goalie on the Stonehill College varsity hockey team, recently made his first start and turned in an outstanding performance in a 3-3 tie with unbeaten UMass-Boston.

Scanlan, co-captain and MVP of last year's Boston College High team and a product of the Quincy Youth Hockey Association, stopped 29 shots and was especially hot in the first period as he turned back 15 successive UMass shots.

"Jim really showed me something tonight," Coach Bob Higgins said. "I wanted to see what he could do under game conditions and I thought he stood up to it all very well in his first college start."

Although he went back to his number one goalie, senior Paul Ridley, in the next game, Higgins said Scanlan will see plenty of action from here on in.

Free Throw Contest Sunday

North Quincy K. of C. will sponsor a basketball free throw contest Sunday from noon to 4 p.m. at North Quincy High School.

The contest is open to all

Quincy boys and girls 11 to 14 years of age.

Applications can be obtained at the K. of C. Hall Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon. Refreshments will be served following the contest.

St. Joseph's A's Win 38-20

St. Joseph's A defeated St. Joseph's B, 38-20, in the Quincy YMCA Church Basketball League.

Dave Britt led all scorers with 22 points. Chris Doyle scored six, Dan Memmolo four and Jack Kilrain, Dan Jaehnig and Antony Battistone two each. Dennis Cronin was again outstanding on defense, as were Dave Gangi, Dan McGinn, Mark Timmons, Dave Hack and Ray Dunn.

Quincy Skates By North

The Quincy hockey team's first line, the top scoring line in the Suburban League last season, sparked the Presidents to their second straight league win, a 4-1 decision over North Quincy Saturday night at the Youth Arena.

Bob Sylvia's Presidents, who played Weymouth South yesterday (Wednesday), will host Cambridge Rindge and Latin Saturday at 6:40 at the Youth Arena and next Wednesday will play Waltham at 8 at the Watertown rink.

Kevin Lewis' Raiders, now 0-2 in the league, will play Newton North Saturday at 6:30 at Watertown and next Wednesday will be home to Brookline at 6:40 at the Youth Arena.

Robbie Craig, the league's number two scorer last year, had his second straight hat trick against North and Scott Richardson, another member of the first line, added the other goal. Jim Campbell was outstanding in goal.

Tom Gerry, North's leading scorer last year and again this season, scored for the Raiders, and Bill Bradley and Mark Andrews played well, as did goalie Bobby Tierney, as usual. Lewis had good words for a second line of Brian Ofria, Billy Nee and Don Reidy.

Earlier in the week Quincy topped Newton North in its league opener, 6-3, as Craig had a hat trick, including two third period goals.

Paul Flynn scored the game winner at 14 seconds of the third period and Richardson and Tom Roche had the other goals for the Presidents.

North Quincy took a 1-0 lead over Weymouth South in the opening period but bowed, 4-2, as the Wildcats scored three goals in the second period. Gerry scored both Raider goals unassisted.

Weymouth's bus never showed up and the team came to Quincy in cars during Wednesday's snowy rush hour. Two cars were delayed and the game began 45 minutes late. After a cold first period, Weymouth warmed up.

Tierney was outstanding once again in goal for the Raiders. In the second period South out-shot North Quincy, 17-6, but Tierney made some great saves.

Hockey

● St. Ann's Hockey Goalies' Night With 3 Shutouts For PeeWees

The goalies had their night in the Pee Wee Division of St. Ann's Hockey League as all three games last week ended in shutouts, including two 1-0 games.

N. Quincy Dunkin Donuts topped Keohane's, 3-0, to remain in a tie with Razer's Edge and Ideal Elevator. Mike McGrath, Paul Deshler and Howie Gordon scored for Donuts with assists for Jim Cahill, Derek Hunter and Deshler.

Razer's Edge squeezed by Noble Sporting Goods, 1-0, on Jim Leonard's goal, and Ideal edged JDA, 1-0, on a goal by Eddie Flynn.

In the Bantam Division North

Quincy K. of C. lost to Plaza Olds, 2-1, but kept its three-point lead. Kevin Coyman scored both Plaza goals unassisted, while Paul Chamberlain scored for K. of C. with an assist for Don Riley.

Lydon Russell upset Riley Club, 2-1, on Tom Barron's two goals. Dan Robinson had an assist. For Riley Mike Fay had an unassisted goal.

Blackwood topped Bike 'n' Blade, 5-3, as Bob Climo had a hat trick and John Downing and Ken Gardiner a goal each. Paul Kelly, Jim Burgess and Downing had assists. Peter Quinn had two goals and Mike O'Reilly one for B'n'B, with Mike Ahern having an assist.

North Swimmers Sweep Cambridge Latin

The North Quincy swim team won every event and rolled over Cambridge Rindge and Latin, 119-44, last Friday for its first Suburban League win and improved its record to 2-1.

The Raiders had easily defeated Blue Hills Regional in their previous meet.

Ed Melanson, enjoying another outstanding season, won the 100 and 50 yard freestyles and Bill

Boudreau won the 200 individual medley and the 100 breaststroke.

Other North winners were Bill Feeney in the 100 backstroke, Dave Riley in the 200 freestyle, Steve Pike in the diving, John Buckley in the 100 butterfly and the 200 medley relay team and the 400 freestyle medley relay team.

North will return to action next Thursday at Brookline.

Openings In Recreation Dept. Ice Skating Program

The Quincy Recreation Department has limited openings in its second 10 week session of Instructional Ice Skating.

Those interested may register from 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, at the Quincy Recreation Department Office, 100 Southern Artery, as long as openings exist.

The program is for Quincy residents age six to 16. Instruction is offered according to skating ability from beginners to advanced, under the direction of Mrs. Anne Eagles, a United States Figure Skating Professional. All classes are based upon USFSA standards, and testing is done at the conclusion of each 10-week program.

Classes will start the week of Jan. 7 and will be conducted Mondays and Wednesdays at the Quincy Youth Arena off Sea Street in Merrymount section of Quincy.

There is a fee which includes all costs for instruction and ice for the 10-week program.

Cronin Scores 6 Points For Curry

Freshman wing Dan Cronin of Quincy has scored six points for the Curry College hockey team which has a 3-3 record at the holiday break.

Curry will return to action Jan. 14 at 9 p.m. against St. Michael's College at the MDC rink in Milton.

St. Joseph's Defeats St. John's, 60-52

St. Joseph's boys' intermediate CYO basketball team defeated St. John's, 60-52, for its second straight win of the Quincy Vicariate season.

Paul Bandera scored 20 points and took down 10 rebounds. Jim Travers added 14 points and Dave Austin had nine. Other scorers were Mike Cronin and Jim Paolucci with six points each, Peter Memmolo with four and Mike Ford with two. Mike Trubiano and Jim McNeil stood out on defense and John Costigan played well on offense.

● Executive Hockey

Crowley's 4 Goals Spark Washington

The Quincy Executive Hockey League is off for the holidays and will resume play Jan. 7 at the Youth Arena.

In the last set of games Jack Crowley, assistant coach at Quincy High, scored four goals and assisted on another to lead Washington Tap to a 6-3 victory over Sundowners Tavern. Ed St. John had the other two goals. Marty Tolson had three assists.

St. John two and Ed Grogan and Paul Casey one each. For Sundowner David Mullen had two goals and Joe McGilvray one. Skip Ryan had two assists and Ken Marini one.

Darcy's Pub and The Hofbrau played to a 2-2 tie. Paul O'Brien and Bob Simonelli scored for Darcy's with assists for Bob Donovan and Paul Dorfman. Don Bonito and Frank McAuliffe had the Hofbrau goals with McAuliffe and Joe Verlicco having assists.

Sportlight Tavern blasted Al's Cafe, 9-3, as Rich Gibbs and Charlie Chambers had hat tricks. Bill Linehan, Kevin Sullivan and Dave Costa had one goal each. Costa had three assists. Al McKay two and Chambers, Sullivan and Bill Linehan one each. Harry Crispo, Mike Haynes and Dick McCabe scored for Al's with assists for Ken Boyes, Terry Flaman, E. J. Breen and Haynes.

Bantam A's, Defeat Neponset, 5-3

The Bantam A team topped Neponset, 5-3, with Dean Phillips having a hat trick and Keith Smith two goals.

In their previous game the team had lost to Milton, 6-1, with Bob Lynch scoring the Quincy goal.

Earlier the Bantam A's defeated Randolph, 5-1, on goals by Lynch, Frank Reynolds, Smith, Danny Shea and Scott Messina. Steve Denselbeck had two assists and Tommy Schofield, Shea, Tommy Benson and Phillips one each.

Mite A's Edge Braintree, 20 2-1

The Mite A team edged Braintree, 2-1, with Mike Toland scoring both goals. Kevin Daly, David Santosuosso, Ralph Richardson and Ronny Last had assists.

Scott Cunningham and Joe Fasano were outstanding in goal and the entire team played strong defense.

In their previous game the Mite A's blanked Milton, 7-0, with Cunningham and Fasano again starring in goal. Toland had a hat trick, Daly two goals and Richardson and Timmy Mann one goal each. Toland had three assists, Richardson two and Daly one.

Earlier the team had blasted Randolph, 21-0, as Toland and Mann had four goals apiece, Jeff McClory a hat trick, Bobby Kane, Mark Dwyer and Sean Cappelis two goals apiece and Matt Smith, Kirk McDonald, Ken Staskywisz and Last one each. Richardson and Mann each had four assists, Daly, Toland and Santosuosso three each, Terry Hack and Dwyer two apiece and Kane, Steve Connolly, Smith and McDonald one each.

3 New Coaches Appointed

The School Committee approved the one-year appointments of three teachers to coaching positions in the school system at its most recent meeting.

Barbara Webster, a teacher at Quincy High School, was named that school's girls' basketball head coach at a salary of $1,895. The only other applicant was Peter Swanson, a Broad Meadows Junior High School teacher.

Swanson, in turn, was named head coach for the girls' basketball team at Broad Meadows. He was the only applicant for that post and will receive $960.

Donald Houghton, a teacher at the Quincy School, was named to fill an assistant swim coach vacancy at North Quincy High School. He will replace Stephen Orlando, who was unable to complete the season. Both will receive pro-rated portions of the $550 salary.

Sterling Rolls To 6th Straight Win

By PETE ZOIA

The Sterling Junior High basketball team continues to roll along and two victories last week boosted its record to 6-0.

Sterling's strategy is to score heavily in the first half and then go with the reserves during the last two periods.

Against Point Sterling notched 34 points to 13 at halftime and then went on to win, 51-37. Point outscored Sterling 24-17 the last two frames but the damage already had been done. Paul Gilbody and Kevin Riggs scored 10 points each for the league leaders while Sal Lorenzano with 15 and Chris McCray with 13 were high for Point.

The Junior Varsity of Point eked out a 19-17 win, its first of the season. Tommy Travers tossed in the winning basket and had eight points. Brad Hart had five for the losers.

A 21-3 opening period margin enabled Sterling to take Broad Meadows in tow, 59-37. It continued the bombardment with 22 more points in the third quarter. Leading scorers were Riggs with 15, Jeff Timberlake 14, and Gilbody with 13 for Sterling. The shining light for B.M. was Mark Prescott, high with 13 points.

The Jayvee skirmish was a thriller, with Sterling edging out a 19-18 win. The hero was Paul Kenney, who sank two foul shots to win the game. Jeff Manning added to the win with six points, while for B.M. Tony Cascarano chalked up seven points closely followed by Mike Flynn with six.

Central won its fourth game of the season, defeating Broad Meadows 56-32. Holding B.M. to six points for each of the first three periods while totaling 50 for itself, Central had an easy time of it.

Spearheading the attack was John Purland with 13 points and Tim Ryan with 12. For B.M. Mike Williams had six each.

The Central Jayvees made it a clean sweep, 37-24. High scorers were Paul Ryan with 10 for Central and Tony Cascarano with eight for Broad Meadows.

In its only game of the week, Atlantic was victorious over Point, 58-41. In fairness to Point, it must be pointed out that their leading scorer, Sal Lorenzano, did not play because of an ankle injury.

Point stayed close at the half, trailing 19-20, only to have Atlantic rebound with 26 points in the third quarter, forging to a 46-28 lead. High scorers for the winners were Pete McGillicuddy with 19 and Mike O'Hare with 11.

Carrying the load for Point was the game high scorer, Chris McCray, who scored 31 points.

The Atlantic Junior Varsity continued its undefeated streak, winning its fifth game, 45-13. Chris Bunker and Jeff Striker each scored six points in the win, while Jim Grassi was high man for Point with three.

Quincy Wrestlers Win 4

Quincy's wrestling team, defending Suburban League and South Sectional champion, is off to another impressive start with four wins in a row.

Carmen Mariano's Presidents will compete in the annual Lowell holiday tournament Friday and Saturday and next Thursday will wrestle at Stoughton at 6 p.m.

Quincy won 10 of 12 matches to rout Catholic Memorial, 52-12, and followed up with a 48-18 romp over Brookline in a league meet. Last Saturday, Quincy breezed over Norwood, 49-14, and Braintree, 48-10, in a quadrangular meet which also included Weymouth North.

In the opener Peter Connolly (100 pounds) won by pin, Ed Ryan (107) won by pin, Paul Orlando (121) won by default, Martin Doyle (128) won by pin, John O'Leary, (134) won by decision, John Herald (140) won by decision, Al DiVincentis (147) won by decision, Mike Monahan (169) won by decision, Jeff Heath (188) won by pin, and heavyweight Geoff Callish won by pin. Dave Silcox lost at 114 pounds and Jim Silcox lost at 157.

Against Brookline Ryan won by pin, Orlando won by pin, Doyle won by decision, Joe Irvine (132) won by pin, Herald won by pin, DiVincentis won by decision, Monahan won by decision, Heath and Callish won by pins. Connolly, Dave Silcox and Joe Callahan (157) were defeated.

In the win Saturday over Norwood, Ryan, Orlando, Doyle, Herald, DiVincentis, John Silcox, Monahan, Heath and Callish all won their matches.

Against Braintree Connolly, Ryan, Doyle, Herald, DiVincentis, Callahan, Mark Picot, Heath and Mike Dalton were winners while Orlando and Joe Irvine went to draws.

North Wrestlers Pin Norwell, Bridgewater-Raynham

Although he has only a 19-man squad, 12 returnees and seven promising rookies, North Quincy wrestling coach Steve Joyce hopes to improve upon last year's 5-12 record.

"With the maturity of the seniors and juniors, I feel we should have a good shot of at least breaking even this year," Joyce said.

The Raiders won their first three meets before bowing last Saturday to Milton, 30-19. They won their opener, 33-21, over Norwell, easily topped Bridgewater-Raynham, 32-11, and topped Weymouth North, 29-25, in their first Suburban League meet.

North wrestles at Scituate today (Thursday) at 11 a.m. and Saturday will compete in a Christmas tournament at Norwell.

The Raiders opened last week at their beautiful new gym after wrestling for three years at the Armory and practicing with Quincy.

"Being able to practice at the school and holding our meets there has greatly improved the morale of the team," Joyce said.

North's seniors include tri-captains John Gorczyca, Steve Sweet and Dave Howley, Liam Cataldo, John Coughlin, John McNamara and Matt Keenan.

Juniors are Chris Dunn, Glenn Goodman, Tom Maloney, Jim O'Hare, Gino Pillard, Greg Therrien, John Sweet and Glen Collins.

Steven Kallenberg, Mike Pimental, Lester Garry and Chris Butler are promising sophomores.

North was hurt last year by the absence of boys in certain weight classes, forcing several defaults. This year Joyce has representatives at every weight.

In the opening meet against Norwell, Collins (107 pounds) won, 13-0; John Sweet (114) won, 3-1; Steve Sweet (128) won, 10-1; Keenan (134) won, 7-6; Pillard (140) won by a pin, O'Hare (147) won, 5-3; Howley (157) won, 5-2, and Gorczyca (188) won by a pin. Therrien, Cataldo and Coughlin were defeated and North had to default in the heavyweight division.

Against Bridgewater-Raynham Therrien won, 8-7, at 100 pounds, John Sweet (114) won, 4-2; Cataldo (121) won, 10-3; Steve Sweet (128) won by pin at 132; Pillard (134) won 4-0; O'Hare (140) won, 5-4; Maloney (147) drew, 5-5; Howley (157) won, 4-1; Kallenberg (187) won, 5-1, and Gorczyca (heavyweight) won, 6-0. Collins at 107 and McNamara at 169 were defeated.

Gorczyca, a 186-pound senior, defeated 283-pound Dave Bouley in the final event, the heavyweight match, to give the Raiders their win over Weymouth North.

Kallenberg set the stage for the finale with his win in the 187-pound division after the Raiders had lost the first four bouts.

Other North winners were Steve Sweet, Pillard, Howley and McNamara.

Saturday's meet at Milton also came down to the heavyweight match but Kallenberg, moving up to this division, lost a close bout.

North again lost the first four matches but sophomore Butler, making his first varsity start, won at 121 pounds and Steve Sweet, Pillard, Howley and Gorczyca won. Gorczyca topped Arthur Murphy, 3-1 at 187 pounds. The two had battled to a draw last year and Murphy topped the Raider matman in the states.

maintained by the state (like Washington St.-Route 3-A) or the MDC (like Furnace Brook Parkway), he said.

Statewide, "No Turn On Red" signs will appear, if they haven't already, at about 90 percent of intersections, according to the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

"Massachusetts is a densely populated urban state with millions of pedestrians," said Registrar Richard McLaughlin in a recent statement. "The primary law governing the operation of any vehicle is that the operator must have it under control at any time and pedestrians have the right of way."

Thus, any traffic signal with a pedestrian crosswalk which includes every signal in Quincy is exempted from the law.

The "right on red" bill was passed, according to state Rep. Michael Morrissey, to bring Massachusetts into line with the federal uniform vehicle code - as well as keep the state eligible for several million dollars in annual federal energy conservation funds.

A bill co-sponsored by Morrissey which went into effect in January, 1978 adopted the so-called "Eastern" system of right-on-red. This allows the automatic turns only at certain selected intersections where "Right Turn On Red" signs are posted.

"We thought that would satisfy the requirements of the federal standards," Morrissey said. "But all of the 12 or 15 states that adopted the 'Eastern' system were pressured by the federal government to change to the 'Western' style," now used by all 50 states.

The Western, which is not a sandwich, is the system which goes into effect here Jan. 1: A "right turn on red" is legal only at those intersections where no sign is posted. "No Turn On Red" signs are posted at those where automatic turns are judged unsafe.

Confused? So are motorists at intersections like Hancock and East Squantum Sts., where signs are now posted reading "Right Turn On Red Light After Stop" (for use before Jan. 1) and "No Turn On Red" (for use after Jan. 1).

The latest law, as passed by the state legislature this year, gives each community the right to determine which intersections will be affected by the new regulation.

Morrissey, who supports the right turns as an energy saver, is disappointed at the way the new law is being implemented in Quincy.

"I think they're making a mistake," he said. "I was hoping it would be used in more instances."

"They're going to a lot of unnecessary trouble 'signing' every intersection."

The 300-plus signs are supplied to the city by the state Department of Public Works. Replacement signs, after the originals are damaged, must be paid for by the city.

According to Lohmes, city work crews have spent the last two weeks putting up signs across the city and hope to have the work completed by Dec. 31.

State Grants $250 To Repair Adams Wedding Vest

The Quincy Historical Society has been awarded a state grant of $250 to repair John Adams wedding vest.

The vest was stolen last year in a burglary at the Adams Birthplaces and subsequently found in a somewhat damaged condition.

Sen. Paul D. Harold (D-Quincy) said the State Arts and Humanities Council makes small grants available to organizations for the purpose of repairing and preserving objects of historical significance.

Excise Delinquents Losing Licenses

delinquency is intentional. The fifth communication is a notice of suspension of plates and if that doesn't work there is notice of license suspension.

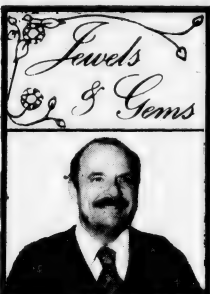

It's hard to dodge that one because when the driver goes for renewal of license, the computer spits out the word that he is delinquent in taxes and the renewal is held up.

Thus far, 50 drivers have run through the process and had their licenses suspended.

"And they can't get them back until we give them a release showing that the tax is paid," said Foy.

"It's slow, but it's a foolproof process."

The cat's-eye is a semi precious stone, usually quartz, which when cut in convex form, shows a line of light across the dome. The position of the line changes as the gem is turned giving the stone a resemblance to the eye of a cat. This property is known as chatoyance and is caused by a parallel arrangement of fine fibers of some substance, such as amianthus, in the rock. It is due to the property of exhibiting a changeable internal band of light. Cat's eye is just one of the many different kinds of semi-precious stones available. When looking for jewelry with precious or semi-precious stones be sure to see us at GRONO & CHRISTIE, INC., 536 Adams St., East Milton, 696-1490. Come in and browse, or ask questions if you wish. Master Charge and other credit terms are available. Open: 9 a.m.-5 p.m., Mon. thru Sat.

HELPFUL HINT:
It turns out, therefore, that the cat's eye is an illusion. It is not an internal light but an internal impurity that causes the design.

QHA Loses Suit

MacDonald could reject a permit for the home only on these grounds, he added.

Meyer directed the QHA to resubmit an application to MacDonald along with whatever plans the building inspector might require. If MacDonald were to again deny the application, the inspector must state which "reasonable regulations" the plans violate. The QHA may then appeal that decision to the Board of Appeals and, only if rejected by that board, appeal again to the Superior Court.

An affidavit filed on behalf of MacDonald alleged that the QHA's plans for the site did not meet those "reasonable requirements."

The matter has been before the QHA since October, 1977. A contract approved this June with Ecology Systems, Inc. of Boston for renovations to the former nursing home was rescinded by the QHA because of the long delay in obtaining a building permit.

According to QHA chairman Carmine D'Olimpio, a meeting this spring with over 150 residents of the area, "gave me the impression that the questions of the community had been answered, for the most part."

The group residence would accommodate six physically and mentally handicapped young adults and four staff members who would educate and train them.

LEGAL NOTICES

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS

Norfolk, ss. Probate and Family Court

No. 771-693-E1
Notice of Fiduciary's Account

To all persons interested in the estate of NATHAN FELDMAN late of Quincy, in said County, deceased. You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the First and Final account of JASON A. FELDMAN as Executor [the fiduciary] of the will of said deceased has been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said account, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before the 30th day of January, 1980, the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciary, or to the attorney for the fiduciary, obtain without cost a copy of said account. If you desire to object to any item of said account, you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order, a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciary pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

Witness, ROBERT M. FORD, Esquire, First Judge of said Court, this 13th day of December, 1979.
THOMAS PATRICK HUGHES, Register.
